STRINGS ATTACHED IN VIET ELECTION

Foreign Minister Says Viet Cong Could Not Campaign As Communists

SAIGON (UPI)—Foreign Minister Tran Chanh Thanh said today President Nguyen Van Thieu's offer to the Viet Cong to take part in South Vietnamese national elections does not mean that Communists also will be allowed to participate.

"The government position is that the National Liberation Front (NLF) can participate in elections, but the Communists cannot," Thanh said. "If they campaign as Communists, they violate the law of the land. They won't be allowed to stand as Communist candidates."

The official spoke at a news conference which he said was called to "interpret the presidential message."

In a lengthy radio address yesterday, Thieu challenged the NLF to participate in free elections organized by a joint electoral commission and supervised by an international body. The Viet Cong immediately rejected the plan, calling it a farce and "perfidious trickery."

Thanh said the "elections must be held by the government of this country. No one else can organize elections." He added that during the elections, the South Vietnamese army would remain under control of the government.

The foreign minister said the government still considered the NLF a "tool of the Communists in Hanoi," but when the North Vietnamese troops had withdrawn and when the NLF had renounced violence, the NLF could start "thinking of their real role, their real importance."

"They say they are not

Enemy Rocket Kills GIs At Pullout Center

SAIGON (AP) — An enemy rocket blasted a U.S. Ninth Division center processing troops to be returned home, killing two and wounded 21, the U.S. Command said today. Of the casualties, one of the dead and seven of the wounded were ticketed to leave Vietnam.

The command reported the rocket exploded Thursday near the center of Dong Tam, in the Mekong Delta south of Saigon.

FLYING HOME

The 800-man 4th Battalion, 47th Infantry of the 9th Division will fly to the United States Sunday. It is the second 9th Division battalion to leave under President Richard M. Nixon's order withdrawing 25,000 men by the end of August.

Units of the 9th Marine Regimental Landing Team were gathering at Quang Tri in the north ready to travel to the big base at Da Nang to board ship for Okinawa.

An advanced party already is in Okinawa preparing for the arrival of the regiment, which consists of 8,000 troops including supporting units.

TIMING SECRET

The exact time of the Marines' departure is secret for security reasons, since the enemy frequently has shelled Da Nang. But unless delayed by a typhoon nearing the coast, they are expected to be out of Vietnam within a few days.

Captured documents, prisoner reports and other information sources—including undercover agents—have furnished allied intelligence officers with supposed plans for another assault against the city of Tay Ninh, 50 miles northwest of Saigon, within the next week.

Clashes in the area have increased in recent days. Ameri-

Congress Hits Nerve Gas Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen already concerned about chemical and biological warfare research have expressed more alarm upon being told the Army has an open-air, nerve gas testing program.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee investigating such programs, said yesterday the military pulled back the curtain of secrecy and admitted it was testing deadly nerve gases in the air over three locations.

He said the Army disclosed lethal chemicals are being tested at the Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, at Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland and at Fort McClellan, Ala.

"I am concerned about this and not convinced of the necessity of all this environmental testing," said Reuss, D-Wis.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said he would ask for immediate suspension of the nerve gas testing. He also called for full reports on the testing from the Army, including details of safety precautions taken to protect surrounding areas.

Rep. Clarence D. Long, D-Md., whose district includes

Falcon Takes A Shower

James Wiese of Santa Venetia has a problem on his hands — a stray falcon that devours hamburger meat and takes showers under lawn sprinklers.

When Wiese, a construction engineer for the Marin County Public Works Department, went out on his lawn at 821 Vendola Drive earlier this week to fetch his evening newspaper, there was the bird — leisurely soaking under a lawn sprinkler.

Using gloves for protection against the bird's long talons, Wiese snared the falcon in a fish net and placed it in a cage on a rear patio. It spent the night there.

"It's a good eater — it had a quarter-pound of hamburger meat last night," said Wiese in wonder.

Wiese said the bird is black with brown legs, yellow beak and white wing tips. He said it had a leather leg strap.

"It obviously belongs to someone and we'd like to return it," said Wiese.

Beloved Candy Bomber Returns To W. Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Candy dropped in tiny parachutes out of the West Berlin sky today.

The sun broke through just before the "chocolate flier" of 20 years ago dropped his tiny bundles to hundreds of children scrambling on the ground below.

It was a less serious time than the days of the Soviet blockade of the city in 1948-49. Then the Russians put a stop to the candy drops being extended into neighboring East Berlin because the children there had written "Uncle Wiggle Wings" that they too liked Americans.

On hand to recreate a poignant moment of history's greatest airlift, that saved Berlin, was Col. Gail S. Halvorsen, a farm boy out of Utah who now commands a satellite tracking unit at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

The occasion was an annual Air Force open house at Tempelhof Airfield that this year featured not only American but British and French displays in honor of the joint victory over the blockade two decades ago.

Halvorsen was to make four candy drops over the weekend, flying a C47 Gooney Bird, the World War II model plane with which the airlift flew its first missions.

As Halverson roared over at about 200 feet, crabbing into a gusty wind, West Berlin school children gazed expectantly upward. As the tiny parachutes fluttered to earth with bubble gum, chocolate and other candies, the kids burst onto the drop field to gather up their spoils.

"Just like in the old days," Halvorsen grinned later.

When East Berlin children started writing to him to wiggle his wings and drop them some candy, too, which Halvorsen did, the Russians became furious in blockade days.

"They complained to the State Department," the veteran pilot recalled, "and the State Department told me to quit."

It was the first time Halvorsen, now 48, had flown a C47 in a dozen years.

As he roared in for a candy drop pass, a Berliner of about 28 peered into the sky and remarked to himself but aloud: "Man, those were real times."

Houseboat Regulation Wins Approval

FORT BRAGG (AP) — The State Park and Recreation Commission has formally adopted emergency houseboat regulations and approved a boundary proposal for Big Basin Redwoods State Park.

A commission spokesman said the board's action yesterday set essentially the same boundaries as now exist for the Big Basin Park in Santa Cruz County. But he said the new proposal calls for buying some land already within the park area.

The emergency houseboat regulations call for sealed toilets to prevent dumping sewage into waterways.

Another emergency regulation was adopted to permit night boating on the Oroville Reservoir.

Lobbyist, Senate Link Faces Quiz

Bulletin Expense Is Target

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The powerful Senate Rules Committee has started looking into how a lobbyist landed a $650,000 contract to provide legislative newsletters.

Sen. Robert S. Stevens, a new member of rules, said he will seek to determine if the current newsletter arrangement is the best available to lawmakers.

Stevens, R-Los Angeles, and Sen. Clair W. Burgener, R-San Diego, gained seats on rules last week during a purge by Senate "Young Turks" led by President pro tempore Howard Way.

OUSTER AFTERMATH

Way and his backers ousted "old guard" rules members Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, and Sen. Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, as part of their plan to "minimize" lobbyist influence in the legislature.

McCarthy had been chairman of the Rules Committee's Subcommittee on Communications, which had awarded a contract valued at $650,000 to Kenneth A. Ross Jr. of Los Angeles to provide the newsletters.

But when the Way backers took over, the new Senate leader appointed Stevens "to work closely with the Senate communications program on newsletters and questionnaires."

That was Way's manner of asking for a probe in the situation.

'SOME COMPLAINTS'

"We've had some complaints and questions as to the efficiency of the present operation," Stevens told a newsman. "We want to find out if this is the best way to do it or if it should be done here in the buildings."

Ross, 46, is also a lobbyist for contractors and cement firms. He began his computerized newsletter operation in 1967.

Ross has the name and party registration of all California voters on his computer tapes, but found it difficult to keep up with changes in address, party affiliation and new voters.

McCARTHY BILL

McCarthy introduced a bill in 1967 that was approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan to make it easier for Ross to get the changes he required.

The measure directed county clerks to submit a copy of their voter registration lists to the Secretary of State's office in Sacramento.

McCarthy says he sponsored the bill to allow legislators to better "communicate with vo-

4 A.M. Vote Finds Marin Banker Guilty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Don C. Silverthorne, founder and president of the defunct San Francisco National Bank, was convicted today on nine counts of misapplying its funds.

Silverthorne, 69, paunchy and white haired, heard the verdict with no sign of emotion. It was returned at 4 a. m. by a jury of seven men and five women who deliverated seven hours.

The defendant appeared before U.S. District Judge Albert C. Wollenberg to hear the decision. It was his second conviction.

EARLIER REVERSAL

Silverthorne's first conviction in February 1966 was reversed by the U. S. Court of Appeals on grounds that press and broadcast publicity had precluded a fair trial.

In the 14-day second trial, U. S. Attorney Cecil Poole presented complex records to support government charges that Silverthorne had converted more than $200,000 in bank funds to his own use.

U.S. ACTION

The federal government placed the bank in receivership Jan. 22, 1965, just two and a half years after it opened.

Major depositors lost at least $14 million, the greatest bank closing loss since depression days of the 1930s.

Federal deposit insurance protected accounts of up to $10,000.

"For the president of the bank to take these funds is an extremely sad tale to recount," Poole said in his closing argument.

"If that money had gone to the bank, Mr. Silverthorne would not be sitting here."

George Martinez, Silverthorne's attorney, argued that there was reasonable doubt that Silverthorne received any of the money.

He said Silverthorne was a man who had been maligned for five years. He asked the jurors to "look only at the evidence and make your decision on that."

Apollo Crew Taking Rest Before Launch

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Trained to a fine pitch, the Apollo 11 astronauts tapered off today in rehearsals for the grand adventure — the July 20 landing on the moon.

After a brief session today in a simulator, practicing the critical phases of the landing and takeoff from the lunar surface, Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. planned to spend tomorrow lounging around the astronaut quarters.

"We don't want to launch a tired crew," said Dr. Charles A. Berry, personal physician of the spacemen who has maintained a microscopic watch on their health throughout a long and ex-

Thomas Reed Confirms White House Position

Thomas C. Reed of Ross, Republican national committeeman from California, has joined the White House staff as an adviser to President Richard M. Nixon, he said today.

In a phone call from Washington, Reed confirmed a story in yesterday's Independent-Journal which reported that Reed was about to be named to the president's staff.

Reed said that he is working as a volunteer and will assist in staffing boards and commissions.

"It's a summer job — I expect to be home by Labor Day," he added.

Reed said that he did not know whether a report that Lyn Nofziger, another top adviser to Gov. Ronald Reagan, was also to join the White House staff was true or not. He is still in Sacramento, Reed said today.

Reed, 35, was Reagan's Northern California campaign chairman in 1966 and then became the governor's first appointments secretary.

His assignment to the president's staff is viewed as strengthening the conservatives' voice in the White House.

Reed, a nuclear physicist, heads several firms dealing in investments, mining and land development.

Huge Ancient Coastal Landslides Could Be Revived By Earthquake?

Large landslide areas on the coastal side of Inverness Ridge near the south end of Point Reyes National Seashore could be triggered by an earthquake.

Writer John J. Clague gives this warning in an article entitled, "Landslides of Southern Point Reyes National Seashore" in the July issue of Mineral Information, Service, a monthly publication of the state Division of Mines and Geology.

The areas contains some of the largest ancient landslides in the Bay region, Clague said.

"Although most of the area appears to be presently stable, some sliding occurred during the 1906 earthquake and again in 1956, and there is warning that the huge slide blocks could again become active, perhaps during another earthquake," he wrote.

The landslide area extends for about 4 miles along the ocean shore from a point one-half mile north of the southern boundary of the national seashore to a little more than a mile south of the mouth of Bear Valley, he reported.

He identified the major slide areas as the Double Point Slide covering 1.7 square miles and including most of the area from Lake Ranch to Double Point, and the Wildcat Slide, covering about one square mile, northwest along the coast from the mouth of Alameda Creek.

Other landslide areas are just southeast of the Double Point Slide, north of the Wildcat Slide toward the mouth of Bear Valley Creek and the coast cliff south from Arroya Honda.

The major part of the evident landsliding probably occurred in the last 10,000 years, Clague said.

JULY THUNDERSTORM IN LOS ANGELES

Spock Vows To Continue His Efforts Against War

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Benjamin Spock says he will work harder for an end to the Vietnam war now that an appeals court has overturned his conviction on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the draft.

"I feel pleased personally," the author-pediatrician said, "but I'm going to redouble my antiwar work. It seems to me absolutely tragic that young Americans will continue to die in Vietnam for an indefinite period."

In a 52-page decision yesterday, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered acquittals for Spock and Michael Ferber of Boston, a Harvard graduate student, on grounds that there was insuffcent evidence of criminal conspiracy to warrant their convictions in a 1968 trial.

The court ordered new trials for two other men convicted with them—the Rev. William Sloane Coffin Jr., chaplain at Yale University, and Mitchell Goodman of Temple, Maine, an author and teacher. It said their rights were prejudiced when Judge Francis J. W. Ford of U.S. District Court in Boston posed 10 questions that he instructed the trial jury to answer in returning a verdict.

In Washington, a spokesman said the Justice Department would not comment until it could fully review the ruling. The office of the U.S. attorney for Massachusetts was similarly noncommittal.

Spock, who was visiting friends with his wife on an island off Cape Cod when the decision came, said he never doubted that he eventually would be found innocent.

"I was given this terrible conscience by my mother," he recalled. "I always knew that so long as my conscience told me I was right, everything would be all right."

Ferber said he also was not surprised by the decision. But he added that if it makes some persons opposed to the war "think the government is far more reasonable after all, then it is actually setting them back . . . If they think by the acquittal, justice is done, then that's a mistake."

Coffin, who was playing tennis at Yale when he learned of the decision, said he was gratified by it, but viewed the news as "medium good" because of the order that he be retried.

Goodman, at his home in Maine, contended that both the trial and appeals courts refused to consider the basic questions at stake. He listed them as "who is really responsible for the crime of destruction that our government has committed in Vietnam" and the constitutionality of the draft laws.

After their convictions June 14, 1968, all four men were sentenced to two-year prison terms. Ferber was fined $1,000 and the others were fined $5,000 each. Execution of the sentences was stayed pending appeals.

Two Accused Of Benzedrine Sale

OAKLAND (UPI)—Two men were arrested yesterday for allegedly trying to sell $20,000 worth of benzadrine tablets to narcotics agents.

Thomas J. Sexton, 33, Concord, and Danny T. Booker, 25, Oakland were picked up after they exchanged 100,000 tablets for $5,000, according to the state narcotics division. The tablets were worth about 20 cents per pill or $20,000 on the black market, according to agents.

Arresting officer Stephen L. Arments of the division called it the second largest buy of this kind of drug in the state and the largest in northern California.

Long Presses Tax Reforms Before Aug. 13

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell B. Long pledged today an effort to obtain Senate passage of the House-approved 10 per cent surtax extension before an Aug. 13 vacation recess.

The Senate Democratic Policy Committee previously voted unanimously to attempt to attach a wide variety of reforms to the House measure instead of waiting for a later reform bill.

"This is not to say that the bill should not have a considerable amount of reform in it," Long said. "The bill, in fact, already contains several meaningful tax reforms."

The Louisiana Democrat announced earlier this week the committee would consider tax reform amendments, but set a July 18 deadline for receiving them. No amendments have been submitted although some senators are known to be preparing them.

Archeologists Stymied By Building Firm

SAN PABLO (AP) — A 2,000-year-old Indian village unearthed during excavations for an apartment building has been covered, archaeologists complained yesterday.

Manuel Almeida, owner of the property near downtown San Pablo, notified archaeologists lats month when his workmen found Indian artifacts. He promised them 60 days to explore provided they did not interfere with building.

A group of San Francisco State archaeologists started digging but were ordered off Tuesday, according to Robert Schenk, curator of the Treganza Anthropology Museum, the group's sponsor.

The 10-foot-wide hole they had dug to a 6-foot depth was filled and covered with lumber, said Leslie Wildesson, a National Park Service archaeologist working in her spare time.

A spokesman for the contractor, Thunderbird Builders, Inc., said, "We have a contract to put up an apartment. They were harassing us."

Rector's Death Held 'Justifiable'

OAKLAND (AP)—A coroner's jury has ruled that James Rector's death in the May 15 "People's Park" riot in Berkeley was "justifiable" homicide by an unknown and unidentifiable . . .sheriff's deputy."

A jury of six men and one woman reached the verdict yesterday after 35 minutes of deliberation.

The two-day coroner's inquest produced conflicting reports as to whether rocks were thrown from a rooftop from where Rector was removed, wounded with buckshot in his heart.

None of the 25 witnesses testified seeing Rector throw anything from the rooftop.

The jury got the case after Leonard N. Johnson Jr., an Alameda County sheriff's deputy, testified that he may have been the one who shot Rector.

Johnson said he saw "three or four" people on the rooftop where Rector was found wounded.

"One of them reared back his arm to throw and I fired," Johnson said, adding that he did not see the result of his firing.

Two utility company employees said they saw many rocks hurled from the rooftop. Eight other civilian witnesses said those on the rooftops were peaceful except for one unidentified man who threw a rock despite warnings from demonstrators.

Rector, 25, of San Jose, was not a University of California student.

Twice convicted of burglary, he was sought by his probation officer at the time the disturbance erupted over a University of California-owned vacant lot that young people had tried to take over for a park.

Rector, among more than 130 injured, died three days after he was hit. He said he was shot by an Alameda County sheriff's deputy.

Ted Jarvis, attorney for Rector's family, said he will press a $100,000 wrongful death suit against the sheriff's office on behalf of Rector's mother, Mrs. Dolores Clifford of San Jose.

Los Angeles Police Condemned On Death

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Police "didn't give him a chance," a witness testified at a coroner's inquest into the fatal shooting of an innocent man police thought was a freeway sniper.

Alton Butler, 53, testifying into the events leading up to the fatal shooting of Donald Lee Oughton, 29, June 11, said yesterday the officers jumped from their car with guns drawn.

He said they were close enough to Oughton to grab him, but they "just started shooting."

Butler testified Oughton was walking quickly, not running, down an alley when the patrol car approached using its red light and siren.

He said the officers jumped out of the car and "started shooting." He said he did not hear the officers say anything to Oughton before they fired.

Other officers who arrived at the scene shortly after the shooting chased spectators away, Butler said. "They said they didn't want no damn witnesses," he said. "They were running people away from the corner."

Butler said the officer behind Oughton fired first. "They got him from the back," he said, adding that no warning shots were fired.

Another witness described Oughton as having the mentality of a boy rather than a man. He said Oughton told him he was hurrying home to watch the wrestling matches on television shortly before he was killed.

Police have said that Oughton was acting suspiciously and was in the area where a freeway sniper had reportedly been firing on cars.

The officers who stopped Oughton claimed they approached him to question him when he suddenly reached into his back pocket. One officer thought Oughton was going for a gun and fired, wounding his partner in the hand.

The partner, thinking Oughton had fired, drew his pistol and shot Oughton.

It turned out the victim was reaching for his wallet containing an identity card which he used because a speech impediment made it difficult for him to make himself understood. He was not armed.

Congressmen Told Tactics Of Smugglers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — By land, air and sea, smugglers are feeding a growing American market with illicit drugs and narcotics, authorities told a group of congressmen yesterday.

Smugglers are making low-level border hops at night in small planes loaded with marijuana, Sheriff Raymond Rowe of Imperial County said. They're even using bows and arrows to fling packets of heroin across the All American Canal, he said.

Customs officers told of pleasure boats, which go unsearched, returning from Mexico, some of them possibly carrying large cargoes of dope.

Backpacking smugglers recently were caught carrying pot across the international border in the Laguna Mountains, San Diego County Sheriff's Sgt. Robert E. Ryan said.

Others Ryan said, use remote dirt roads between the ports of entry to drive the drugs into the United States.

Vernor V. Hann, district director of U.S. Customs in San Diego, said his limited staff at four legal ports of entry from Mexico—San Ysidro, Calexico, Andrate, Tecate—seized 900 of 11 million motor vehicles in the last year.

He said the 900 yielded 5 million dangerous drug pills, 35,000 pounds of marijuana, 33 pounds of heroin and 2 pounds of cocaine.

Bond Rate Up?

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Treasury Department has proposed a $390 million increase in annual earnings for the thousands of Americans who have invested $52 billion in savings bonds.

The Treasury spelled out the details of its plan to ask Congress to increase from 4.25 to 5 per cent the interest rate on savings bonds.

"A rate increase is necessary to be fair to a great number of savers who have faithfully bought bonds over a long period of time," said Paul A. Volcker, Treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs.

At the same time, the Treasury said, it will ask Congress to remove the 4.5 per cent ceiling on the interest the government may pay on long-term "marketable" bonds sold through commercial money markets.

Bulls Take Toll

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — The bulls of Pamplona killed one runner, gravely wounded another and injured a third today as the week-long San Fermin festival neared its end.

Factory Blast

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Exploding chemicals in a large adhesives factory blew down a concrete block wall, demolished the roof, and shattered hundreds of windows in West Lynn early today.

Police said that "miraculously" no one was hurt, although dozens of homes were evacuated as firemen wet down the smoking ruins of the main building of the sprawling C. L. Hauthaway and Sons Corp.

The man, apparently a refugee from the Communist zone, was recovering in a West German hospital today from a gunshot wound in the right leg.

Soul Singer Irate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Brown showed up, but Mayor Sam Yorty didn't, so the Negro soul singer stalked out of City Hall saying he wouldn't accept a "James Brown Day" proclamation from an "underling."

Brown said he had been assured Yorty would be present for the ceremony yesterday, but the mayor's aides said they had previously informed the singer's public relations man he had another commitment. The mayor said later he regretted the mixup.

Today is still James Brown Day in Los Angeles.

City Calms Down

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — An uneasy calm settled over a trouble area in Evansville early today after four Negroes were wounded by sniper shots and firemen extinguished at least 16 blazes caused by firebombs.

Disorders erupted after the fatal shooting of a Negro boy by a sniper Thursday night.

Police said Ben Westbrook, 50, Evansville, remained hospitalized in serious condition after surgery for a bullet wound in the abdomen. Police said he was shot by a sniper.

Red Visit Delayed

PARIS (AP) — The Romanian ambassador to France, Constantin Flitlin, says Leonid Brezhnev and other Soviet leaders have decided to postpone their planned visit to Romania from summer to autumn.

Flitlin, answering questions at a news conference yesterday, did not connect the postponement with President Richard M. Nixon's scheduled visit to Romania next month.

acting training program.

Concern for the physical condition of the men chosen for the first exploration of another celestial body has been so great that President Richard M. Nixon canceled plans to eat with them the night before Wednesday's launch, for fear they might pick up germs from him.

Before calling it quits today, Collins took a helicopter up and hovered over Patrick Air Force Base as the lunar module — LM — will hover in the search for a safe landing spot on the moon. Collins zipped across south Florida and back in a T38 jet trainer.

"It's a difficult schedule these guys have gone through," Berry said, but they made it with flying colors. The physician pronounced them in fine shape, "really looking good."

The countdown on the massive Saturn 5 booster rocket and the spacecraft perched atop it ticked off flawlessly toward Wednesday's scheduled blastoff. Only a few minor problems had developed.

Test equipment was disconnected from the spaceship and the lunar landing vehicle, preparatory to bringing them to a flight-ready condition.

Before an expected million visitors jamming the beaches, roadsides and waterways of this space center—and a huge around-the-world audience on television—the Saturn is scheduled to go off the pad at 9:32 a.m., launching the astronauts on the glamorous mission for which the nation has prepared for eight years.

Confidence was high that the Saturn, which has never failed an assignment, would come through again. The main perils of the flight will be encountered as Armstrong and Aldrin guide the fragile LM toward its touchdown on the crater-pocked surface of the moon, as they poke their way through the hostile environment and when they blast off again for the return home.

Here, says Apollo launch director Rocco A. Petrone, the spacemen encounter "the high risk, the big unknown." Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration warned the public to be prepared for the possibility of failure on the initial moon landing attempt.

ters" by gaining information about what they think.

Ross, who served one term as an Assemblyman from Los Angeles in 1955-56, is able to buy copies of the rolls from the state for a minimal price in comparison to what it would cost him to keep abreast of the changing rolls by his own means.

Ross gets $60 per 1,000 Senate newsletters or questionnaires sent out—or about $650,000 a year. Legislators pay their own postage out of an allotment given them by the state.

Stevens said he believes the contract for the work should be put out to bid with new specifications written.

"We want to write specifications for the bid and then it's going to be up for grabs," he said.

Novato Council Contracts For Study Of Downtown

The Novato City Council, in a special session today, approved contracts for a $43,467 federal-city financed study of downtown Novato, City Mgr. Charles A. Brown reported.

Novato will pay $13,385 of the total. The study, to be completed by July 14, 1970, will be done by the Sedway-Cooke planning firm in San Francisco.

Progress reports on the Sedway-Cooke study, which has been underway for six weeks, are due Tuesday, Oct. 15, Jan. 15 and April 15.

In other action, the council unanimously endorsed an Assembly bill to provide a $50 million local recreation fund to help local governments meet recreation needs. Brown said if the bill passes, Novato would get $37,570 while Marin County would get $100,239.

The council also opposed legislation that would make police and firemen negotiations subject to compulsory binding arbitration because it would infringe upon home rule by local governments, Brown said.

Novato Man Jailed In Beating

A fast-moving Novato man was booked into Marin County jail twice early today, the second time being held in lieu of $12,500 bail on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

The man, William Heatherton Hovey, 60, of 109 San Felipe Road, attacked his wife with a shovel, Novato police said.

Police said Hovey's wife, Ora, made a citizen's arrest of her husband during a family row and he was booked into the jail in San Rafael on suspicion of assault, a misdemeanor.

Hovey made $315 bail, however, and, according to officers, "beat the police back to the Novato city line." He forced his way back into his house by prying a sliding glass door, breaking a shovel in the process, police said.

He then attacked his wife with the shovel handle, police said. Officers were called again. Hovey was booked the second time on the felony count two hours and 25 minutes after the first booking.

can units have increased patrols and moved in reinforcements to counter the threat of enemy forces moving on foot and by sampan.

In addition, the allied command has concentrated artillery and tactical air strikes on Nui Ba Den, or Black Virgin Mountain, a jungled, 3,232-foot peak that dominates the flat ricelands along the Cambodian border.

A week-long bombardment of Nui Ba Den was climaxed early today when three B52 raids —the first ever against the mountain considered sacred to some Vietnamese—unloaded 540 tons of bombs on its slopes. The mountain is about seven miles northeast of Tay Ninh.

Jury Convicts Oakland Man In Robbery

A jury of eight women and four men in Marin Superior Court yesterday deliberated for six hours before finding a 20-year-old Oakland man guilty of the armed robbery of a Sausalito shop last July.

Convicted after his second trial on the charge was Warren Wilson, who faces similar charges in Oakland, according to Deputy Dist. Atty. John R. Thomas.

A trial earlier this year, also before Judge Thomas F. Keating, resulted in a mistrial when the jury split 7-5 over whether Wilson was guilty.

Judge Keating set sentencing for Monday.

Wilson was arrested 10 days after a theft from the Horn Shop which was followed by a wild shooting fray on Princess Street.

The jury yesterday found Wilson innocent of assault with a deadly weapon.

Mary Perrone Asks Divorce

Mary Louise Perrone, Sausalito businesswoman and recreation commissioner, has filed for divorce in Marin Superior Court to end a 17-year marriage to Lee Patrick Perrone.

Mrs. Perrone charged cruelty.

Her suit asks custody of the couple's son, David, 16, division of community property, which includes the home at 509 Johnson Street, insurance policies and Perrone's employment savings plan, support for herself and the son, and possession of the family home until further court order.

Edgewood, said he wants the testing stopped until Congress is fully informed.

"Frankly, I'm getting awfully tired of the military plunging ahead on so many fronts without consulting Congress," Long said.

Secret testing at the Dugway installation in Utah drew nationwide attention last year when some 6,000 sheep were killed in the area. The commander of the test center which administers Dugway said last Dec. 6 he didn't believe the Army nerve gas caused the death of the sheep, but he said aerial testing had been stopped.

Bel Marin's Budget Rises

A $38,155 budget for fiscal 1969-70 has been approved by the board of directors of the Bel Marin Keys Community Service District, secretary Betty Zoeller reported yesterday.

The budget is $2,625 more than the $35,530 budget for last year, and the tax rate will remain at $1.25 per $100 assessed valuation, she said.

Some $20,000 will be placed in a special dredging fund, she said, and of the remaining $18,155, $13,605 will be used for operating expenses of the district. These include gardening and maintenance salaries, pool maintenance, election costs, insurance and other miscellaneous items.

That leaves $4,550 for capital outlay which will be used to improve landscaping on Caribe Park, Montego Park, the community center and pleasure island, she said.

No Talks Slated On Ferry Strike

No new negotiations were scheduled today in the 38-day strike by marine engineers against Harbor Tours Inc., which has idled ferryboat and tour boats on San Francisco Bay.

About 200 Marin residents formerly commuted to jobs in San Francisco each day from the Tiburon pier.

Lester Bedient, general manager of Harbor Tours, said the company and union are far apart on their proposals for a pay hike in the first year of a three-year contract.

The engineers earned $690 a month when their contract expired and are seeking raises in the first year to about $1,125, Bedient said. The last company offer was $800 a month.

Bible School Dates Are Set

Sign ups are being accepted for the vacation Bible school sponsored by he Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Tiburon. The school will run from July 28 through Aug. 8.

The two-week program is open to children ages 4 to 12 and will be held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Anne Baker and Margaret Billings will direct the program which will be taught by Maud Baker, Tomi Tomrose, Slyvia Frisch, Ann Baker and Gail Rey.

Communists," Thanh said. "We do not say that (they are). They will have to behave as if they are not Communists. If they do not, they will violate the laws of the land."

He said Thieu's proposals do not violate the South Vietnamese constitution which outlaws Communists but did not rule out that changes in the constitution might be considered at the Paris talks.

"Only when the results of the Paris talks touch on the constitution, then at that time the problem will be raised," Thanh said. "At that time proposals for alterations will be made if necessary, but if we raise the questions now, and the Communists keep on fighting, where are we then?"

The foreign minister said further details of the election proposals can be worked out later when the enemy had pledged to renounce violence, the North Vietnamese had gone back to North Vietnam and the NLF had stopped shellings and terrorist attacks.

for the slides are the character of the soft shale and sandstone and the relatively steep coastal cliffs, he said.

"Cliffs at Bolinas Point and Duxbury Point, just south of the slide area, are retreating under the impact of wave attack at a rate of one foot to three feet per year."

"Finally, the proximity of the area to the San Andreas fault is a factor, in that earthquake shocks provide the lateral accelerations sufficient to overcome the frictional resistance to sliding."

Higher Density Before Planners In Mill Valley

The Mill Valley Planning Commission will consider a request by Cal-Fong Investments for an amendment to the city's master plan to allow 5.4 dwelling units per acre instead of the present three at its 8 p.m. meeting Monday in the city council chambers.

The commission also will review the city engineer's plan for the Miller Avenue extension from the city limits to Highway 101, the county sign ordinance and storage of campers, vacation and home trailers in residential areas.

The commission will receive a letter from the California Roadside Council seeking Mill Valley's opposition to "the ultimate atrocity in outdoor advertising" — a system of advertising by projecting a changing series of messages on the walls of buildings.

The Costa Mesa Planning Commission has approved such a system, the first city in California to do so, the roadside council said.

Counties Receive Vehicle Fees

Marin and Sonoma cities have received their shares of a $22,606,113 vehicle license fee apportionment, State Controller Houston I. Flournoy has reported.

Flournoy noted that the funds may be used for local purposes for the first time, under special legislation. Previously the funds had to be used for state purposes.

Marin cities and shares are: Belvedere, $3,694; Corte Madera, $11,653; Fairfax, $10,480; Larkspur, $11,732; Mill Valley, $16,986; Novato, $41,162; Ross, $3,933; San Anselmo, $18,692; San Rafael, $51,875; Sausalito, $9,521, and Tiburon, $8,654.

Russ Warships Likely To See Apollo Launch

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) —A U.S. destroyer escort trailed six Russian warships sailing toward Cuba today along a route that will put them off Cape Kennedy for Wednesday's Apollo 11 moonshot.

The flotilla was en route to Cuba for the first visit of Russian warships. It's due to arrive July 20 and stay through the celebration of Cuba's revolution July 26 and Soviet Navy Day July 27.

It was about 260 miles southeast of Jacksonville.

This is the closest Soviet warships ever have come to U.S. shores. Russian fishing vessels, however, often sail within a few miles of American coasts. The task force includes two guided missile destroyers, one designated for attacks on shipping and one designed primarily for air defense; two fox trot class torpedo attack submarines, the latest of Russia's diesel-powered submarines; one submarine tender; and two oilers.

The flotilla is spread over several miles in classic antisubmarine screen formation.

They were placed under surveillance by a Canadian destroyer one week ago and monitored periodically by U.S. Navy patrol planes from bases along the East Coast.

The destroyer escort Thomas J. Gary has been following about 6,000 yards behind since Wednesday night.

Four U.S. Navy planes, one carrying newsmen and photographers flew over the small fleet yesterday for more than one hour. The Russians seemed not to notice at all.

The United States regards the voyage as one more assertion of Russia's naval power. The United States also concedes the Soviet ships have a right to be where they are and to go where they are going as part of the freedom of the seas.

New Tiburon Fireman Hired

The Tiburon Fire Protection District board Thursday approved the hiring of Craig L. Stannard of 2 Venus Court, Tiburon, to replace Richard F. Wagner in the city's fire department.

Wagner resigned for personal reasons, Fire Chief Franklin J. Buscher said. Stannard's salary will be $644 monthly.

The district board received a report from its scuba firefighting team that it is now able to fight waterfront fires from the water and is constructing a special firefighting float for such purposes.

In other action, the board authorized Buscher to purchase for $1,546 a recorder, walkie talkie and three home receivers.

The board will meet again at 8 p.m. Monday.

Stolen Property Charges Heard

Larry James Stover, 18, of Hilarita Housing, Tiburon, and Curtis Price Jr., 18, of Marin City, were arraigned Thursday in Marin Municipal Court on charges of petty theft and possessing stolen property.

Both were released on their own recognizance to appear Wednesday to plead to the charges.

The two and a third youth, Robert Donzill Price, 17, of Marin City, were arrested by Mill Valley police Wednesday when reportedly caught rifling coin boxes at a car wash.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Phobias Plague Teen-Age Girl, Boyfriend Is No Help, Hinders

DEAR HELEN:

I have lots of fears that I'm trying to get over. Like I used to be terribly afraid of dogs, but I gradually learned to like them by watching a dog from a distance, then getting closer until finally I could pet him.

But I made the mistake of telling my boy friend about my fears and he thinks he'll cure me right now. I'm awfully afraid of heights. So he takes me on steep mountain roads where you have to look straight down, and even makes me get out and look over the edge of cliffs. He says we have to go up to the top of the Empire State Building and I'm afraid to say "no," and scared silly just thinking about it.

I am also afraid of trains, as we almost had a train accident when I was young, and I can still see that big spotlight from the engine bearing down on us. So the other night, my boy friend parked right in the middle of the railroad tracks and held me there while a freight train rumbled closer. When the engine light was almost on top of us, he moved on. I got hysterical and had to stay in bed two days.

I love my boy friend and know he thinks he's doing right, but please won't you tell him he's driving me crazy? —CYNTHIA

DEAR CYNTIHA:

If your boy friend doesn't stop practicing amateur (and totally wrong) "psychiatry," he'll turn your fears into real psychoses! Why don't you consult an expert counsellor — and take your b.f. with you!

A gradual "unlearning" of fears (your "dog" therapy) can save you — not shock treatment. — H

DEAR HELEN:

I seem to be all mixed up and need to talk to someone, but who? Psychiatrists cost money. My minister or school counsellor just couldn't understand, and besides they know my family. I'd be too ashamed. I don't have close friends. That's one of my problems. I've even thought of suicide.

Is there any place where a teen-ager can pour it out without having it come back to his folks? And for free? — DESPERATE BOY

DEAR DESPERATE:

Your city — Lancaster, Pa. — has just what you need: Teen Problems Anonymous. The number is in your telephone book.

Here, you may call an anonymous counsellor who will listen wisely, help you re-think your problems and, if necessary, refer you to an expert who will give further aid. You do not need to reveal your name, and your discussions are completely confidential. — H.

NOTE TO READERS: Other cities have similar free telephone services. In Sacramento it's Youth Life Line; at Los Angeles, Hot Line; and Omaha, Neb., offers Guidelines and Personal Crisis Service.

In addition, many areas now have suicide prevention centers where distraught persons of any age may call for immediate help.

Numbers are in your local telephone book — or you may find them by asking your operator, or calling the Mental Health Association in your city. — H.

Novato Woman Elected Head Of National Church Group

Mrs. Clifford O. Le Rud of Novato was elected national president of the American Lutheran Church Women, an organization of 700,000 members, at the convention held in Minneapolis in June.

She has also been a member at large on the national ALCW board and has served as local, conference and district president during her many years as a member. She is also a member of the Lutheran Social Service Auxiliary of Northern California.

The women of All Saints Lutheran Church in Novato will honor Mrs. Le Rud at a tea from 2 to 5 p.m. tomorrow.

Mrs. Le Rud is a member of the church and all neighboring ALC members have been invited to the tea.

She was a member of Christ Victor Church in Fairfax before moving to Novato. She and her husband, general agent for Central Life Assurance of Des Moines, plan to move back to San Rafael next month where they lived before moving to Novato. They have lived in Marin County 12 years.

The Le Ruds have three daughters. Mrs. Clinton Bell lives in San Anselmo; Mrs. Ronald Thoreson, of San Diego County is married to a Lutheran minister; and Mrs. Steven Jensen is married to a student at the Theological Seminary in Springfield, Ohio. Mrs. Jensen was graduated from Wittenburg University in Springfield last month.

Music and reading are among the new president's hobbies. She says she does not participate in playing an instrument but she is an "encourager" and her daughters play piano and organ and sing and direct choirs. She also says she is interested in politics.

She attended a state teacher's college in Minnesota and taught school there for a time.

She will be traveling a great deal this next year as national president and her first trip will be on July 20 to Houston, Tex., to the international convention of the Lutheran Women's Mission League of the Missouri Synod. As a delegate from the church in July 1970 she will attend the Lutheran World Assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil.

Packaging Can Be Dangerous

NEW YORK (WMNS) — It's child's play for the average child to open most containers of medicine and to swallow a potentially dangerous dose.

This has been established by a team of pediatricians who, searching for child-proof packaging, brought together several hundred children and different types of packages containing attractive candy pellets or mock aspirins.

Confronted with a screw cap bottle, the children, ranging in age from 18 months to four years, needed less than 10 minutes to seize and swallow 10 capsules. The popular snap-type "safety caps" proved almost as accessible. Very young children were defeated by medicine packed in strips but most four-year-olds attained their goal in a few minutes.

Most child-proof of the packaging proved to be the blister pack, in which tablets mounted on a card are individually covered with hard, bubble-shaped transparent plastic, and palm-and-turn (pressure release) caps. These provide virtual inaccessibility to children of the poison-prone age.

TIMOTHY LYNN GOEPPNER claimed Linda Elaine Garner as his bride on Friday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Garner and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goeppner, all of Novato. Following a wedding trip to Canada the couple will live in Novato.

Village Salvage Shop Names New President

A Marin resident since early childhood, Mrs. Bruce McAllister of Tiburon, has been elected president of the Village Salvage Shop Board of Directors.

Muriel McAllister, the former Muriel Scotford, grew up in San Anselmo, where her father, Robert H. Scotford, still makes his home. She was educated at St. Anselm's School, attended Dominican Lower School and was graduated from Dominican Upper School before attending Lux College for Women in San Francisco.

Muriel's husband, Bruce McAllister, is a salesman with All State Plywood, Inc. They have two children, Robert, 10, and Margaret, 8.

A former treasurer of the organization she now heads, Mrs. McAllister has been on the Salvage Shop board for a year. The board is made up of two members from each of the participating organizations which operate the shop. Directors serve for two years. Reed Union School Parent-Teachers Club, St. Hilary's Parish, St. Stephens Guild, and United Presbyterian Women of the Westminister Presbyterian Church staff the Parent-Teachers Club, and is a shop on Tiburon's Main Street, and share the proceeds of the shop, which was founded in 1952.

Traditional special events for the shop are an annual fashion show and boutique, scheduled this year for Oct. 2, and a spring celebration of the organization's founding.

Mrs. McAllister is also active in the Tiburon Peninsula Club and the Bel Aire unit of the Reed Parent-Teachers Club, and is a volunteer in the school nurse aide program at Bel Aire School. She's interested in sewing, tennis, and is a Little League baseball fan.

Other incoming officers are Mmes. William Meyers, secretary; Frank McDonald, recording secretary, and Jack Coleman, treasurer.

G. L. Mills-Wittenmeier Are Married

Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church in Mill Valley was the setting for the wedding yesterday of Gayle Virginia Wittenmeier and George Lawrence Mills of San Rafael.

Gwen Wittenmeier of Mill Valley was her sister's maid of honor. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wittenmeier of Mill Valley.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Mills of San Francisco, had as his best man his brother, James Mills of Berkeley. Ushers were the bride's brothers, Gregory and Gary Wittenmeier of Mill Valley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley. Afterward the couple left for a wedding trip to Dearborn, Mich., to visit the bridegroom's brother and sisters, David Mills, Mrs. Thomas P. Tucker and Mrs. George Danz.

A graduate of Marin Catholic High School and the University of Santa Clara with an A.B. degree and teaching credentials, Gayle is employed with the Tamalpais Union High School District. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. May Wittenmeier of Burlingame.

George was graduated from St. Alphonsus High School in Dearborn and from the University of San Francisco with a B.A. degree and teaching credentials. He is employed in the work study center of San Rafael City Schools.

The newlyweds will live in San Rafael.

Fold Line Creates Problems

DEAR EUNICE,

I forgot that you suggested not using the fold line of the fabric for any section of our garment that will show. I didn't refold my fabric as you told us to do and now I have a crease that simply won't come out, marching right down the center front of my dress.

MRS. S. N.

DEAR MRS. S. N.:

Happily, there are some ideas you may use and perhaps they will give your dress much more zip. You didn't mention the type of fabric you used so I shall give you several ideas. First, you could use one of the marvelous striped grosgrain ribbons straight down the front, perhaps also using the same ribbon for a belt. If the fabric is a solid color, you could use any of a variety of embroidered edgings, some of the very newest looks are achieved by using a band of heavily embroidered cotton lace about 3-4 inches wide as a decorative trim down the center front of your dress. This could be repeated at the hem. If you desire, you can place the lace edging at the hem so that the lower edge of the lace comes at the exact finished edge of your dress. After the lace has been secured, cut away the fabric from behind the lace and you'll have the very newest "see-through" look!

MRS. MILDRED WHITE of San Diego is this week's winner of the Tailor Trix pressing board for her suggestion.

"After completing an A-line skirt with a bias band for the waistline instead of the conventional type waistband, I found that the waist was too large. I was determined not to remove the band so proceeded to use a large darning or needlepoint needle, threaded the small round elastic through my needle and ran it through the bias band. Two rows of elastic could be used if more strength is needed. The elastic has eased the waistband to the right size and is actually the best fitting skirt I have.

DEAR MRS. FARMER:

I am past middle age and don't like to wear sleeveless dresses. Can you tell me how to go about adding a sleeve to a completed dress so it won't have a patched look when finished?

MRS. W. G.

DEAR MRS. W. G.:

You will have to remove the facing from the sleeveless dress and press the seams flat again. You may also have to make the underarm seam slightly deeper. You might pick up one of the colors of your dress, or solid white and cut the sleeves from a dress pattern you already have. Most set-in sleeves will fit in any pattern.

In order to avoid the patched look, you could apply a small band of the dress fabric at the lower edge of the sleeve, (perhaps you could use the belt of the dress for this, or face the hem in order to get a few scraps of your dress fabric).

You could also use a contrast fabric for the sleeves and then repeat the same fabric for a tie at the neck, a bias collar, or whatever, and you'll have the jumper look with your dress.

DEAR MRS. FARMER:

I know you hate to repeat questions, but I am one of your readers who have never before made a dress with a fitted bodice because I was encouraged to learn to sew when all the styles were perfectly straight with no fitting through the bodice.

My first venture with a shirtwaist dress has almost made me give up sewing. I have a large rib cage and when I put the darts in the bodice for a fitted look, it is not the least bit flattering. Please give me a workable answer.

MRS. S. K.

DEAR MRS. S. K.:

For those of you who do have this kind of figure, please clip this column for future reference.

When you select a pattern that has a fitted bodice with a waistline seam, it is better to look for a pattern that has a dart at the side seam as well as one under the bustline for fitting. If there is only one dart in the pattern, it would be too large to eliminate.

You will proceed by making the dart at the side seam but eliminate the dart under the bust. Instead of the dart, you could make one or two small unpressed tucks or simply gather the section under the bust using the same amount of fabric that you would have taken up in the dart. You will have almost the same effect but a slightly softer bodice that won't call attention to the large rib cage.

If you have a problem with sleeves, send for the booklet "All About Sleeves." It gives detailed directions on setting in a sleeve so that it hangs correctly. Please include 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request and mail to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

FAIRFAX ISSUES DEBATED AGAIN

Administrator, Council Pay, Budget Talks Delay Action On Employee Pay

The old arguments over whether Fairfax should have a city administrator and whether the city councilmen should pay themselves salaries reared up again last night as the council eked its way through another budget session.

The council, which has had a half dozen sessions on the proposed budget, again failed to take action on raising the pay of city employees.

It also received but took no action on, a whole new set of budget figures from Councilman Frank J. Egger, which he claimed would give raises up to 10 per cent, boost the city's money reserves and keep the tax rate unchanged.

The proposed 1969-70 budget proposed earlier of about $539,000 would boost the city's tax rate by 6 cents, from $1.74 to $1.80 per $100 valuation.

POLITICS CHARGED

Twice during last night's three-and-a-hald hour session there were suggestions that some council members were playing politics with the budget consideration.

Mayor Francis J. O'Connell kicked off the session with the cryptic remark, "We'll now open the 1969-70 campaign."

Later, during discussion of the council's salaries, Councilman Robert R. Souza said salary opponent Adelaide P. Wilson was "really belaboring the point." He said, "I think it's more political than anything."

Mrs. Wilson, as she had frequently done in the past, objected to council salaries, saying, "I don't feel in the context of the poverty of Fairfax that council pay is valid at this time. We've cut a lot of things from the budget that are more valid."

She said the 6-cent tax rate could be avoided if the council did not pay itself $150 a month, which amounts to $9,000 a year.

She and Egger, however, were one again defeated on the salary question which has come before the council several times before with the same split.

MORE SESSIONS AHEAD

The decision on how much to increase salaries was delayed until the council gets exact figures on how the total budget has changed after cuts and adds that have been made. The council will meet at 8 p.m. Monday and possibly will schedule still another budget session on salaries.

Egger's budget figures made cuts totaling up to $25,199 and adds as high as $22,233 but none of his four alternatives called for a tax increase.

The biggest — and most controversial — item was adding $12,600 for a full-time city administrator and cutting back the salary of Frances Lestanguet, the city clerk who has been doubling as administrator.

Egger, who said he only presented the proposals for council study and not action, had a testy exchange with Mrs. Lestanguet as she went through his proposals line by line, challenging many of his specific cuts or adds.

On the question of city administrator, Egger gently suggested he and Mrs. Lestanguet had "a difference of philosophies." Mrs. Lestanguet snapped back, "What about the work, that's what I'm concerned with, not philosophies."

Later, Souza convinced the council to delay action on reinstituting a city administrator's job until a study of the functions of the city offices can be made by the state Cooperative Personnel Service. O'Connell and Councilman Cornelis Van Vliet opposed the study which could cost up to $500.

Souza also tried to get the city to withdraw from the Association of Bay Area Governments and tangled with Mrs. Wilson, who is a delegate to ABAG. His motion was defeated, this time with O'Connell joining him.

Earlier, the council had voted, with Souza and Egger opposing, to cut $700 from the city's expenditures for attending regional and state organization governmental meetings.

The council defeated an action, with Souza and O'Connell on the losing end, to cut funds for planning consultant services and passed a motion, with Souza again opposing, to cut $750 for the repair of the city office floor.

A motion to increase funds for road resurfacing from $12,000 to $13,000 was defeated, with Souza and Van Vliet voting for the change.

Ballad Opera Wins Honors

The National Federation of Music Clubs has awarded the Dominican College American Music Research Center the 4-star award of merit for its performance of the ballad opera "the Chambermaid," originally presented in 1730.

In 18th Century America people flocked to the theater if ballad operas were being given. "The Chambermaid" is typical of dozens of such operas. The performances were given at Dominican College in February 1969, in Angelico Hall.

Responsible for the production were stage director Arthur Conrad, members of the Dominican College Opera Workshop and musical director Sister Mary Dominic, O.P., who put together 23 original airs by composers of the era with a chorus, overture and dance, fitting the words of the play to them.

SKULDUGGERY OF A PICKPOCKET

Fagin, played by Jamie Norton (right), of Muir Beach clutches the books of Oliver (center) while the Artful Dodger restrains the boy in a scene from the musical, "Oliver!" playing at 8:30 p.m. today at Tamalpais High School. Oliver is Kathi Wood of Corte Madera and the Dodger is Robert Hermann of Kentfield. The play also runs at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday and at 8:30 p.m. next Thursday through Saturday.

Gate Span Directors Drop Lobbyist From The Budget

Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District directors, after an hour of acrimonious debate, adopted yesterday a budget totaling $3,837,919 for fiscal 1969-70.

The budget was up $425,278 over last fiscal year, largely because of a stepped-up program to sandblast and repaint the bridge, said Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring.

The acrimony was over the annual issue of hiring a lobbyist in Sacramento for $16,000 a year — a job held since 1961 by former Assembly Speaker Gordon Garland. For the first time, the appropriation failed to win enough votes, and was stricken from the budget.

The 15 directors present voted, 9-5, to approve the item, one short of the 19 needed. The three absent directors had indicated they would vote against it, thus there was little chance it could be inserted back into the budget in a future vote.

The budget is supported from toll revenues and surplus income from bonds, and often is expanded during the fiscal year to meet unexpected expenses. No property tax is levied by the six-county district.

Director Lowell Edington of Napa County argued in vain for the $25,000 to help pay for a lobbyist "to keep abreast of internal fighting and pressures that go on in the Legislature."

But Director Ben K. Lerer of San Francisco, terming the district "just a little bridge," said, "I don't think our problems are that involved" to require a lobbyist.

Director Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley added "we need a lobbyist like a hole in the head."

All three of Marin's representatives, Meyer, Supervisor Michael Wornum and Joseph E. Sheeks of Belvedere, joined to defeat the legislative item with directors Lerer, John E. Dearman and Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco.

Controversy also erupted over the request by the district's attorney, Jerome B. White of San Francisco, for a raise in his annual retainer from $14,753 to $20,400. White has been criticized by several new directors for giving legal opinions that were "too conservative."

But, after meeting behind closed doors for 20 minutes, they voted unanimously to hike White's retainer to $17,500. White accepted the increase.

One director, who declined to be identified, told the Independent-Journal that the vote was unanimous because White "probably will resign in the near future" since the district may hire a full-time attorney if it goes into the bus and ferry business.

White, 85, has been the district's attorney since 1957.

A third controversial item was $38,500 for public relations, including a $25,000 contribution to the Redwood Empire Association, an $8,500 contribution to the San Francisco Visitors and Convention Bureau, and $5,000 for direct mail and display printing and advertising.

Wornum, conceding he previously intended to oppose these expenditures, said he had concluded that the two tourist organizations "do a great service to the bridge district area, and Marin, and it's better than doing it from the property tax."

Edington moved to approve the annual contracts with the two organizations as soon as the budget was approved, but Wornum and others successfully had the contracts referred to committee for study. Wornum accused Edington of "unseemly haste."

Edington, whose legislation-public relations committee is to review the contracts, said it would report back to the board at its July 25 meeting in Santa Rosa.

In the end, the budget was passed, 14-1, Dearman dissenting because he objected to the Redwood Empire Association contribution.

The motion to pass the budget almost got lost in a maze of cross motions, and a clearly irritated Daniel F. Del Carlo declared he was "sick and tired of hearing you goddamn lawyers practice your profession here." He is a San Francisco labor leader.

The board previously had approved salary increases for other district employees.

The biggest item in the budget was $906,900 for painting the bridge, including a crew of 38 and supplies.

The amount budgeted for toll collecting dropped from $805,023 to $672,076 because of fewer men needed for the one-way system.

In other business, directors referred to the commuters' affairs committee the Arthur D. Little Inc. ferry feasibility study.

Also referred to committee was a proposal by director Carl Daubeneck of Ukiah that Vista Point, at the north end of the bridge, be renamed in honor of the late Clyde M. Edmondson, founder and former general manager of the Redwood Empire Association.

No Charges Filed After Narcotics Raid

No complaint was issued yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against three young men arrested Thursday by narcotics agents in Mill Valley.

Robert Douglas Wayne, 22, of Mill Valley, Eric Williams, 19, of Takilma, Ore., and Elmore Grady Philpot, 21, of Miami, Fla., were arrested on suspicion of having marijuana and LSD when agents served a warrant on Wayne for a 1968 drug sale charge from Orange County.

A BUSY DOZEN YEARS

Frederic Kerr Ready To Try Quiet Life

By PATRICK SULLIVAN

In 1957, the year Russia lifted Sputnik I into space, Marin civic leader Frederic D. Kerr was launching his own projects.

It was the year he merged his accounting firm into partnership with Harry J. Cooper, was elected to a board of freeholders charged with drafting a county charter and was named president of the Marin County Humane Society.

In the busy years since, the accounting firm flourished, the charter proposal was completed, giving him a sense of accomplishment although the voters later rejected the proposal, and the humane society grew to where it financed and built a new, modern facility in Ignacio.

And there was his race for county supervisor in 1960, auditing assignments for Corte Madera, Fairfax, San Anselmo and other communities.

Now, in 1969 Kerr is charting a new, quieter life: retirement on tiny San Juan Island in northwestern Washington State.

Kerr was feted last night at a surprise testimonial dinner held at the Humane Society building in Novato to honor the popular, husky-voiced civic leader.

"I don't know where those last 12 years went," he said in an interview.

Kerr, 58, is not the type to look back longingly. He is such a forward-looker that he is able to predict confidently that the coming years will prove to be the best of his life.

He thoroughly scouted the island on several visits earlier in the 60s, made a checklist of what the place offered in the way of opportunities and then five years ago bought a one-acre plot on the west side of San Juan Island with a view of the lights of Victoria, British Columbia's island city across the Haro Strait.

The inducements he found were a chance to put his do-it-yourself inclinations to work on a new home, a local government that seems to be in need of his talents as an accounting specialist, and, nearby, his two brothers, who already have settled on the 54-square-mile island.

The three will be together for the first time since Kerr was 8, in a place he finds inspiring.

"You feel like it is a whole different world," he said. "The ferryboat pulls in, you drive up a ramp and then see this little, old-time place with a main street about two blocks long.

"If I hadn't found this place I'd probably never leave Marin County," he added.

The only sizeable town on the island is Friday Harbor, population about 400. Kerr's home will be on the west side, about eight miles away. He will have a view of freighter traffic on Haro Strait and schools of whales that pass through during the migratory season.

Kerr retired from the humane society and as Mill Valley finance director July 1, after earlier phasing out of the San Rafael accounting firm of Cooper and Kerr.

However, it is with perhaps the most reluctance that he leaves the humane society, he indicated.

Over the years as it grew, culminating in the completion of a modern animal shelter and humane education center last year, the society provided him rich experiences, he said.

Kerr said he was over and over again touched when he would see the look on the faces of children who visited the center to feel and learn about animals.

"It makes you realize the tremendous potential in using animals to help people," Kerr said. Involvement with animals, he believes, aids persons to learn how to give of themselves and remove their thoughts from their own private concerns.

"I am a believer in animal welfare to aid people welfare," he said.

Kerr and his wife, Bernice, plan to complete their move later this year. He is planning a preliminary trip to the island some time this month.

Pope's Next Trip—Africa

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, who recently made a historic visit to Geneva, Switzerland, the heartland of Calvinist tradition, plans another "first" — a trip to Africa this month.

Nearly every one of his trips has been a "first" of some sort.

When he traveled to the Holy Land in January 1964, it made him the first Pope to fly, the first Pope to use a jet, the first Pope since the time of St. Peter to go to the Holy Land and the first Pope to set foot in Moslem Jordan and Jewish Israel.

In December 1964, he traveled to India, becoming the first modern Pope to visit an Asian land. His trip to the United Nations in New York in October 1965, was the first papal transatlantic crossing in history and the first papal visit to America. He was in Fatima, Portugal, in May 1967, for a first papal visit to that country.

He was the first Pope in 12 centuries to go to Turkey, when he visited Istanbul in July 1967 and he was the first Pope to go to Latin America when he flew there last August.

The last Pope to leave Italy before Paul was Pius VII. Napolean had him seized in Rome in 1809 and kept him a political prisoner in France until 1814. John XXII made a 400-mile train trip within Italy in 1962 and his successor, Paul, set the new pattern for the jet age in his self-styled mission as "an apostle on the move."

When Pope Paul carries out his current travel plans this summer, he will have flown by jetliner more than 44,000 miles — almost twice around the earth.

On July 31, he will head for the heart of Africa on his first visit to that continent and his eighth trip abroad. His purpose is to consecrate a shrine to 22 black martyrs in Kampala, capital of Uganda on the north shore of Lake Victoria.

Uganda, which straddles the equator, has 2.8 million Catholics among its population of 7.75 million. It also has other Christians, Moslems and animists, those who believe there are spirits in all objects.

The Uganda martyrs, slain in the late 19th Century during religious persecution, were canonized in 1964.

Besides dedicating the shine in Kampala, the 71-year-old Pope said he would meet prelates at the first All-Africa bishops' conference.

Referring to the 29 million Roman Catholics in Africa, the Pope told a crowd at a papal mass in March:

"We have been repeatedly and pressingly invited by many bishops and the faithful to make a visit to Africa, particularly to Uganda, where the new sanctuary is being busily constructed and where an altar has been raised to the honor of the African martyrs whom we have had the blessed fortune to canonize."

A CATHOLIC DRIVE

Parochial School Support Is Noted

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The Roman Catholic Church has made some headway during the past six months in its drive for public support for parochial schools.

It is not enough to suit Catholics who see their school system threatened with financial disaster, but more than enough for opponents who view state aid to religious schools as unconstitutional.

A survey by the National Catholic Educational Association reveals that bills were introduced in legislatures of 26 states this year to provide some form of assistance to non-public schools.

The biggest Catholic victories were won in Connecticut and Rhode Island. Both enacted laws — patterned after one which Pennsylvania adopted last year — under which the state will pay part of the salaries of parochial school teachers who instruct students in secular subjects.

Similar legislation passed the House of Delegates in Illinois but was killed in the State Senate.

In Michigan, a bill to provide up to $44 million annually in indirect state aid to parochial schools was defeated on the initial test vote in the House of Representatives, but is eligible for reconsideration later.

The Massachusetts legislature approved an amendment to the state constitution to authorize public assistance to religious schools. The amendment must be approved in a state-wide popular referendum to take effect.

In New York, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has announced he will appoint a commission to study state aid to nonpublic schools.

Pennsylvania's experiment with state aid began with a modest fund of $4.5 million a year. A bill to boost the contribution to $40 million in the coming fiscal year was passed by the House of Representatives, but is hung up in the State Senate education committee, whose chairman told UPI that passage at this session is "highly unlikely."

The constitutionality of the Pennsylvania plan is being challenged in federal court by Americans United For Separation of Church and State, a predominantly Protestant organization opposed to use of public funds for religious schools.

The Pennsylvania plan is based on the theory that the state is not supporting religious schools as such, but is merely purchasing services — secular education of children — in the same way that states have long contracted to buy medical care for the indigent from church-sponsored hospitals.

Another approach is for the state to make payments to parents in partial reimbursement of tuition paid at nonpublic schools. Bills to provide for such tuition grants have been introduced this year in the legislatures of Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, New Mexico, Texas and Wisconsin. So far, none has been enacted.

A UPI count indicates that half of the 50 states now extend some kind of public aid to parochial schools or their students.

The most common kind of aid found in 23 states, is free bus transportation. In some cases, this is limited to routes along which public school buses would be moving anyway.

Six states — New York, Connecticut, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico and Hawaii — provide textbooks for parochial school students.

ST. FRANCIS OF THE GUNS GOES ON TOUR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 9-foot statue of St. Francis of Assisi is being carried to 10 early Franciscan missions en route to San Diego where it will be part of San Francisco's contribution to California's bicentennial.

The statue, St. Francis of the Guns, by Benny Bufano, is scheduled to arrive in time for display at opening ceremonies Wednesday at Mission San Diego. Franciscan Father Junipero Serra founded the mission, the first in California, July 16, 1769.

The statue, partly cast from guns turned in after the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy, depicts four fallen national leaders on the friar's tunic.

It was dedicated as a memorial to Abraham Lincoln, John F. Kennedy, Robert F. Kennedy and Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

The statue departed from Mission Dolores yesterday on the 550 mile journey.

TO DIRECT EVENT — A "Kid's Krusade" will be given for children of all ages starting at 7 p.m. Monday and continue nightly through Friday at the North Marin Assembly of God at 1370 South Novato Boulevard, Novato. Rev. and Mrs. Norman Kaupanger will conduct the event which features prizes, puppet shows, flannelgraph stories, magic object lessons, chalk artistry, special music and many othe rattractions. There is no charge for the crusade which is open to the children of all denominations.

Teacher Wins Baptist Contest

J. Winston Pearce, professor of preaching at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry, has won top honors in a contest to encourage preaching on the Southern Baptist Conventionn's 1969-70 theme, "Living the Spirit of Christ in Belief and Relevance."

Pearce was awarded $150 first place prize in the contest sponsored by the 70 Onward Committee of the Southern Baptist Inter-Agency Council.

His sermon was entitled: "Go Tell it on the Mountain . . . and Don't Forget the Valley."

Retired Chaplain Will Fill Pulpit

Rev. Howard Scholten, retired chaplain from Hamilton Air Force Base, will fill the pulpit at the 7:30 and 9:15 a.m. services tomorrow through Aug. 3 at St. Francis Episcopal Church in Novato, while Rev. Lloyd Gebhart is on vacation.

Schelten is now serving as the chaplain at the San Rafael Military Academy and at the Mill Valley Air Force Station.

Special Sermon On Spage Age Slated Tomorrow

Rev. George P. Carter will discuss "The Ethics of Outer Space" at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the Methodist Church of Mill Valley.

In the sermon, Carter will call for the development of a responsible social foundation for outer space and will specify five demands made by Space Age living if a responsible social and political basis for cooperation in outer space is to be found.

Two barriers to the establishment of such a foundation, according to Carter, will be the usual separation of technological matters from moral decision making and the thrust of national sovereignty which seems to block effective cooperation in outer space.

RELIGIOUS SHOCKERS

Scholar Sees Disappearance Of Sermons, Sunday Services

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Out of the murkiness of the present commotion and changes in the churches, a Protestant scholar has taken a long look at the eventual results of it all—and he sees some shockers ahead.

Among them: The disappearance of sermons and Sunday morning church services; growing interest in Jesus and less in the mystery of God; broad church consolidations; multiple memberships by some believers in more than one church.

Rev. Roland W. Tapp, of Philadelphia, a United Presbyterian specialist in religious education, says "part of the upheaval now going on in the churches is temporary, but much of it will have permanent effects."

RESEARCH TOUR

Recently on a three-month research assignment for analysis and planning, Dr. Tapp said in an interview that indications are that the organizational structures of churches "are not going to make it" to the end of the century.

"The long-range prospects are good for essential Judeo-Christianity, but not for the institutions," he said.

Dr. Tapp, a one-time missionary, California pastor and World War II bomber pilot, is a former professor of psychology and philosophy of religion at Kentucky's Center College and of Biblical languages at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

LIVELY PREVIEW

On his denomination's Board of Christian Education for the past decade as associate editor of its publication house, Westminster Press, he offered his lively preview of the future church at a recent gathering of religious publishers.

Items on the forecast included:

A renactment of the fundamentalist-liberal fight of 50 years ago . . . It already has resulted in a marked polarization of the church at all levels...The split may become irreparable.--

With Protestants and Roman Catholics "no longer in real dispute" over major doctrines, they will move increasingly toward "merger at practical levels"—between fundamental Protestants and fundamental Catholics, and between liberal Protestants and liberal Catholics.

Most institutional members will be 45 years old, and up. "There will be a steady decrease in total membership...fewer youths will join the church."

On the other hand, there will be "increasing interest in religion and Christianity" among college students and young adults but "they will continue to avoid the institutional church."

Christian teachers will see themselves "more as fellow-seekers" rather than "transmitters of a heritage." They "will be more interested in Jesus and less in God" even though this seems a "flat contradiction in Biblical terms."

TEETH GNASHING

The Consultation on Church Union will bring unification of major Protestant denominations amid "great wailing and gnashing of teeth," but the new connective church "will be no more of a monolith than it is now."

Christian educational curriculums henceforth will be produced interdenominationally, on a national or regional basis. Church school teaching will be by 3-D color TV hookups among clusters of churches.

"Sermons are out. And so is the Sunday morning worship service at 11 o'clock. The death rattle will be long and loud and gruesome."

MAIN SHIFT

The main theological shift will be away from the doctrine of divine transcendence toward a "doctrine of panentheism," which holds that "God is in everything," in contrast from pantheism, which says "God is everything."

Racial integration "will be a fact within the churches . . . It already is a workable everyday fact at headquarters levels."

Church property, valued totally at $80 billion, will go on tax rolls. "In a pluralistic society with Christians rapidly becoming a minority, this kind of tax-exempt wealth simply cannot be tolerated. It won't be."

GUEST SPEAKER — Rev. Richard A. Williams will be the guest speaker at the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services tomorrow at the North Marin Assembly of God at 1370 South Novato Boulevard, Novato. At the present time, he is the director of college campus ministries for the Assemblies of God of Northern California. He will be assisted by a student from the University of California, Bill Tenant, who will relate his experience of finding Jesus Christ.

Guest Speaker

Rev. Norman Campbell, missionary to Argentina, will speak at the 11 a.m. service July 20 of the Southern Marin Assembly of God church, Mill Valley.

SLEEPY HOLLOW! SLEEPY HOLLOW!

This Valley was once a prehistoric river bed. Later an Indian burial ground, and about 1840 the Mexican bandit "El Imperator" made the Valley his hideout. Today this prime residential community offers a way of life, a setting of lush luxuriant growth unequalled in Marin. Two excellent elementary schools, parochial school as well, miles of horseback riding trails; a complete recreation center with supervised Olympic sized swimming pool. Minimum ⅓-acre building sites, 100-ft. street frontages. Wide tree-lined streets. We are pleased to offer the following residences listed with our office.

Firemen Rescue Baby From Pool

Firemen saved a 1-year-old Corte Madera child with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation Thursday after she fell into a swimming pool at the rear of a vacant dwelling at 21 Staghound Passage, Fire Chief Frank L. Nelson reported.

Bridget Meriwether, daughter of Lydia Meriwether of 13 Staghound Passage, was taken to Marin General Hospital where she was found to be in good condition. The mother was advised to take Bridget to her own doctor.

Mrs. Meriwether, who telephoned firemen at 11:15 a.m., said she had pulled the baby from the pool. Nelson said the pool is fenced but that a gate was left open.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Arterial Reconstruction For Clogged Blood Vessels

VAN DELLEN

The surgical treatment of clogged blood vessels is an established procedure and our vascular surgeons have profited from more than two decades of experience. Many of these specialists are not concerned about the immediate results of arterial reconstruction, but the condition of the graft 10 years later. When an obstructed segment of a large artery is removed and replaced with a normal vessel of similar size, the circulation is restored.

ALTHOUGH the graft may hold up for 10 to 15 years, it may degenerate due to arteriosclerosis and become obstructed. Or, perhaps, the wall weakens and bulges out like a balloon (aneurysm). These complications are less likely to occur when a synthetic prosthesis is used or the obstructive material is reamed out. Reaming can be likened to cleaning debris out of a drainage pipe.

JOHN DEVELOPED symptoms of poor circulation in his right leg. Despite excellent care, he failed to improve. Following the injection of a chemical that outlines the blood vessels, a special X-ray study was done. The man had a blockage of the leg artery high in the groin. The obstruction, confined mainly to a four-inch segment, was caused by arteriosclerosis. The rest of the artery seemed to be normal.

The obstruction was bypassed by inserting a tube of knitted Dacron. A plastic graft made of woven teflon or Dacron was also considered. None of these are perfect; the body merely tolerates them.

THE SURGEON could have done an alternate procedure in which the vessel is opened and obstructive material is removed (endarterectomy). This technic is not difficult; the inner lining and middle layer of the artery along with the crud is easily peeled away from the outer wall. The remaining tube is strong enough to convey blood. Some surgeons introduce a fluid or carbon dioxide gas into the wall in order to separate the layers.

CREW CUTS

J. B. writes: Are extremely short haircuts for men and boys healthy in the summertime when the sun is beating down on their heads? More hair would give more protection. I dislike crew cuts so am trying to think of a good answer when someone says they are healthy.

REPLY

Try again. Most baldheaded men go hatless and remain healthy. Crew cuts have the advantage of being cool and easy to keep clean. In contrast, long hair has not kept the dirty hippies cool or clean.

SHOULDER PAIN

Mrs. V. writes: Is arthralgia of the shoulder and arthritis one and the same?

REPLY

"Arthr" refers to a joint and "algia" to pain. When the two terms are combined it means pain in a joint. However, it gives no clue as to what is causing the distress. Consequently, pain could stem from arthritis, bursitis, or injury.

HATS NOT GUILTY

D. B. writes: Do you believe that wearing a hat causes dandruff and baldness?

REPLY

No. Ordinary baldness is hereditary and dandruff stems from a dry scalp. For a long time there was an erroneous idea that hat bands shut off circulation to the scalp.

REPLACING A LENS

C. O. writes: After cataract surgery, can a person see out of the treated eye without glasses?

REPLY

Not as a rule, because glasses are required to replace the lens that was extracted.

Kennedys In Spain

Marin's Unique Civic Center Is Growing

Architect Frank Lloyd Wright's vision of a harmonious complex of structures forming a complete civic center for Marin is slowly becoming a reality on the Santa Venetia hills and flatlands east of Highway 101. Standing out in its fresh coat of paint is the Hall of Justice (right center) scheduled to open this fall, which will contain the sheriff's office, jail, courts and other law enforcement offices, leaving the county courthouse in downtown San Rafael deserted. The massive new structure is linked to the Administration Building, a tourist attraction in itself. Starting to take form is the Veterans Memorial auditorium (left center) of circular design, a complement to the circular children's island in the lagoon, all a part of Wright's architectural pattern. Faced with the reality of the motor age, the design includes a new roadway (lower center) and a new parking lot adjacent to the Hall of Justice. This aerial view extends beyond the Santa Venetia hills to San Pablo Bay beyond. Linking the Civic Center grounds with the bay is Gallinas Creek (upper left) which borders the Gallinas Village area and extends into a turning basin, which appears as a dark oval area at the upper left. The open space (upper center) bordered by homes is the grounds of Santa Venetia Middle School, along North San Pedro Road, cutting diagonally across the scene. Skirting along the foreground is Highway 101, and the line of homes (lower) is clustered in the San Rafael Meadows.

NEW CANAL PLAN FOR SAN RAFAEL?

Army Engineers Question Silt, Other Problems In Discussing Dredge Plans

"We feel there should be a reanalysis of the (San Rafael Canal) project," an Army Corps of Engineers representative said yesterday in what appeared to be a pitch for a new study.

James Wolfe, assistant chief of the construction operations division of the corps, at a luncheon meeting at Dominic's Restaurant told a group of San Rafael businessmen and yachtsmen any changes in the canal "would be up to you to initiate."

A new study would determine where the silting comes from, he said.

"Maybe it's too shallow, maybe too narrow for the boats using it now," he said.

A new study might also pave the way for enlarged yacht harbors and beautification, he indicated. "We are now doing beautification, thanks to Corte Madera Creek," said Wolfe, referring to controversy that has erupted this spring and summer over esthetics of flood control.

Wolfe, who was in San Rafael to discuss the dredging maintenance project scheduled to begin soon on the canal, pointed out the original study had been done from 1910 to 1919 and it is still being used.

The original work was done in the 1920s when the canal was based on commerce — exports from the city's glove and cheese factories and imports, he said.

That first project cost $74,000 and since then, $600,000 has been spent on maintenance.

The current project, to restore the channel to its authorized depth of six feet and width of 60 feet between Grand Avenue and the mouth of the creek, and a depth of eight feet and width of 100 feet from the mouth to the Birdcage marker at the edge of the bay mudflats, will cost about $170,000.

Wolfe said the current project is expected to get underway about Aug. 1, the projected completion date for dike-building at the fill site north of Francisco Boulevard and east of Kerner Boulevard in east San Rafael. The contract is for 90 days.

The fill site worried several marine-oriented men who hope to have private dredging done while the equipment is here, after Wolfe reported all corps work has to be finished before private work starts because the fill site might not hold everything.

Floyd Crites of West Coast Dredging Co., the contractor for the corps work, said his firm is working on another spoils area to hold fill from private yacht harbors and other areas. He reported the second site is not definite because there is some question on drainage.

However, Norris M. Rawles, head of the city's department of public works, said the site, near the San Quentin dump area, is not expected to present serious problems.

As the meeting ended, Paul Ciampi, chairman of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce committee on the east San Rafael area, called for a committee to begin working on development of the canal. The committee, headed by Ciampi, will meet at noon Wednesday at the Red Kettle Restaurant, San Rafael.

Civic Leaders From Sonoma Hear Zone Plans

I-J Special Report

CLOVERDALE — Mayor Talbert W. Bean of Sonoma was elected chairman of the Sonoma County Mayors and Councilmen's Association at a meeting Thursday at the Grapevine restaurant.

Bean succeeds Mayor Helen Putnam of Petaluma who served as chairman of the 1968-69 year. Councilman Ralph J. Poltrone of Cloverdale was named vice chairman and Daniel Clark, Sonoma city manager, as secretary.

A panel discussion on fringe area zoneing was presented by George Kovatch, county planning director; Kenneth Blackman, Santa Rosa planning director; and Robert Byrd, director of the California office of Harstad Associates, Inc., planning consultants.

The planners told the city officials of the importance of making zoning codes uniform and stressed cooperation between the county and cities so that development of the county areas blends well with development of the cities.

TAKING THE BUGS OUT OF THE BOTTLENECK

Bids will be opened July 22 on the $200,000 San Anselmo Hub improvement with work to start this summer. Traffic lights and an increased number of lanes at the intersection are expected to give more control, smoother flow. Though Center Boulevard is shown here as four lanes, westbound traffic in the first stage of development will gradually merge to one lane before Bridge Street while the same section eastbound will be widened to two lanes. Greenfield Avenue will be one-way from the Hub for about 260 feet, then two-way. The development moves the center of the traffic-troubled Hub a little south, emphasizing Center Boulevard, according to assistant engineer John T. O'Rourke.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Being Alert Sometimes Is Key To Making The Contract

We save ourselves the trouble of thinking by developing habits. At the bridge table, for example, we see two low clubs in the dummy and K-x-x in our own hand; and we immediately plan to lead one of those low clubs from the dummy toward the king. The habit usually works well, but we sometimes wake up at the end of a hand wishing we had been more alert at the beginning.

Opening lead — ◇ Q

DOWN ONE

Declarer took the ace of diamonds, drew two rounds of trumps and led the four of clubs from dummy to his own king. West took two clubs and a diamond, and eventually South had to give up a heart. Down one.

You can say a few things for the way South played the hand. It didn't take long. Nobody had to strain a single muscle of his brain. All four players could go on to the next hand without the slightest fatigue.

But you might also say that South should have made his contract. Declarer should draw the trumps ending in his own hand so that he can begin the clubs by leading the deuce toward dummy's jack.

WELL-PLACED QUEEN

If West has the queen of clubs he must step up at once. Otherwise the jack either wins a club trick (when West has both the ace and queen) or drives out the ace (when the ace and queen are split). As the cards lie, West would take the queen of clubs and (at best) lead a heart.

Declarer wins in dummy with the king of hearts and leads the jack of clubs to force out the ace. South wins the heart return with the ace and cashes the king of clubs to discard the losing heart from dummy.

STILL MAKEABLE

What happens if East rather than West has the queen of clubs? Then dummy's jack loses to the queen of clubs. Declarer wins the heart return in dummy and leads the other club toward his own king. He still makes his contract if East has the ace of clubs. In short, South makes his contract whenever East has the ace of clubs and also whenever West has the queen. The actual declarer could make his game only if East had the ace of clubs.

Today is Saturday, July 12, the 193rd day of 1969 with 172 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1862 the Medal of Honor was authorized by the U.S. Congress.

In 1933 a new industrial code was established to fix a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour in the United States.

In 1941 German armies cracked the "Stalin Line" in Russia and began what was to be an unsuccessful march toward Moscow.

In 1961, 73 persons died when a Cezhoslovakian plane crashed in Africa.

A thought for the day: Henry Thoreau said — "The man is the richest whose pleasures are the cheapest."

Unable To Palm Off Trees To Farmers

HARLINGEN, TEX. (UPI)—George Pletcher makes his living selling palm trees, but he said recently they're on the decline in the semi-tropical Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas, where they are native.

Pletcher, who gets as much as $36 a foot for some of the 20 varieties in his nursery, said farmers in the valley tend to look upon palm trees as little more than tall weeds. Cities in other areas of Texas, however, buy palms from Pletcher in thousand-tree lots—just as they do in Florida, California and Arizona.

Giants Good And Lucky In 6-4, 10-Inning Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The old saw "I'd rather be lucky than good," could apply to the San Francisco Giants.

The Giants were both lucky and good last night. San Francisco was given one run at a most opportune moment, but the Giants also manufactured five legitimate ones en route to a 6-4, 10-inning victory over Los Angeles.

The loss dropped the Dodgers back into second place in the topsy-turvy National League West.

"Coming to Los Angeles actually gives us a lift," Giant Manager Clyde King commented. "The big crowds here make a lot of noise and that gets our adrenalin moving. We just had to do good here. We can't let these guys get too far in front of us."

And the Giants haven't. The win was their 11th in 14 games as they moved up to third place, just two games back of the Atlanta Braves and 1½ behind the Dodgers.

It looked like a Los Angeles victory as Willie McCovey tapped a ground ball to rookie second baseman Ted Sizemore with two out in the ninth inning. Sizemore fielded the ball cleanly but made a wide throw to first base that pulled Wes Parker off the bag as Bobby Bonds scampered home with the tying run.

The Giants won it in the 10th when Bonds, who had three hits, lined a two-run single to center off Dodger relief ace Jim Brewer.

The Giants will try and make it three in a row over the Dodgers tonight when they send Ron Herbel, 4-1, against Claude Osteen. Herbel has not started against Los Angeles since throwing a 4-0 shutout at them in September of 1967. Osteen, a lefthander, will be shooting for his 12th victory against 7 losses.

A disconsolate Sizemore refused to blame his still bruised right forearm for the bad throw that turned apparent victory into defeat.

"I was making good throws all night," he said. "This was just a bad one."

Brewer, who entered the game with a brilliant 1.47 ERA, was roughed up for five hits and three earned runs in his 2 2-3 innings of work. He readily accepted part of the blame.

"I'm as much to blame as anyone," he said.

"I walked the leadoff batter and there is no way I should do that and get away with it."

The Giants held a 2-1 lead when the Dodgers broke through against starter Gaylord Perry for three runs in the seventh. Willie Davis, who had four hits in a losing cause, singled home two and Parker, breaking an 9-for-15 slump, singled in the other.

The Giants got one back in the ninth on a walk to pinch-hitter Bobby Etheridge, Bonds' double and a sacrifice fly.

Then came the ground ball to Sizemore. The one that got away.

Jacklin Is British Open King

LYTHAM-ST. ANNES, England (AP)—Tony Jacklin ignored the blustering breezes off the Irish Sea and won the British Open Golf title today with a final round 72 that gave him a total of 280 and a two-stroke margin over Bob Charles of New Zealand.

Although he spends most of his time in the United States now, the 25-year old Jacklin is the first Briton to have won the title since Max Faulkner did it in 1951.

Weather conditions for the final round differed from those of the first three rounds. It was much cooler and the winds raced over the 6,848 yards of the Royal Lytham links on the shores of the Irish Sea and toughened its par of 35-36—71.

Jacklin, who not only plays the rich U.S. pro tour but also is connected with a Georgia resort course, started the final day two strokes in front of Christy O'Connor and Charles, the left-handed New Zealander who won this title over the same course in 1963.

TOUGH SCORE

He whipped through the front nine in 33 strokes, a spectacular score in the wind. At the final turn he was seven under par for the 63 holes played and held a three-stroke edge over Roberto DeVicenzo of Argentina.

DeVicenzo faltered coming home for 72 and 283. Charles, who was Jacklin's playing partner during the final round, finished with a 72 and 282.

The aging Argentine and Peter Thomson of Australia, five time winner of this event, tied for third. Thomson also had a 72 for a 283. O'Connor fell to a 73 for a 284 total.

DOWN THE LIST

Gary Player of South Africa, the defending champion, finished well down the list. His final round of 74 gave him a total of 292, eight strokes over par.

For the first time in recent years the U.S. contingent failed to mount a major threat.

The best American scores were posted by Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, and Davis Love of Atlanta, a non-touring pro. Each had 285. For a brief time in the final round Nicklaus appeared to be on his way but he finished with a 74.

Love, the surprise of the tourney, finished with a par 71. It was his first tournament ever in England.

CASPER BLOWS

Orville Moody of Killian, Tex., the newly crowned U.S. Open champion, finished at 291 on a final round 76 while Bill Casper of San Diego, Calif., twice the U.S. Open winner, blew to a final 78 and 293. Lee Trevino of Dallas, also had a 78 for 296.

Miller Barber of Sherman, Tex., had a fine final round of 69 that gave him a 288 aggregate. Ray Floyd of Lake Havasu, Ariz., one of the very early starters, posted 76 for 296 and Bert Yancey of Tallahassee, Fla., finished with a 77 for 291.

Gay Brewer of Dallas, had to be content with a 75 that sent his aggregate to 290.

Nine-Year-Old Girl Part Of Huge Junior Net Field

There will be no Rod Lavers or Billy Jean Kings at the 16th annual Marin Junior Tennis Tournament co-sponsored by the Independent-Journal and the San Rafael Recreation Department.

But Jan Graham will be there when the tournament starts Monday. Nine-year-old Jan is probably the smallest and one of the youngest youngsters in the tournament.

At four feet, one inch and 52 pounds, she barely can peek over the net, but she'll be an active competitor in the ten and under division.

This is the second tournament for the Marin County Day School fourth grader. She's already appeared in an earlier tournament at Sleepy Hollow.

A veteran netter of sorts, Jan has played since age eight, although she says she first "hit a ball when I was seven."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Graham of San Anselmo, Jan has a pair of younger sisters.

She reports that she has "a pretty good forehand." Her athletic ability isn't limited to tennis. Right now she's also dabbling in baseball where she's "trying out six different positions."

Jan will be part of a large (170 entries) field of youngsters who will kick off play Monday.

Here are Monday's pairings. Action starts at 9 a.m.

Marinites Gain Titles At Belvedere

The final day of the Belvedere Junior Tennis Tournament at the Belvedere Tennis Club turned out to be one of mixed results for Marin County youngsters yesterday.

Darby Auerbach of Belvedere was blasted by Kathle Latham in the girls 18 finals, 6-0, 6-1, but Bee Kilgore of Belvedere took the girls 16 crown by whipping top-seeded Mary Miller, 6-1, 6-4. Bob Knight of Tiburon captured the boys 16 crown with a 6-3, 9-7 conquest of John Hursh.

Misses Kilgore and Auerbach teamed up to take the girls 18 crown and gain a measure of revenge by dumping Kate Latham and Julia White, 6-3, 6-4 while Anne Lamott and Andrea Barnes of Tiburon took the girls 16 crown.

Spitz Wants Record

SANTA CLARA (AP) — Mark Spitz, who has already tied one of his own world records, shoots for one of somebody else's today. Don Schollander may not be pleased with the results.

Spitz, the 19-year-old Indiana University star, swam the 100-meter butterfly in 55.6 seconds yesterday at the Santa Clara International Swim Meet, tying the world standard he set last year.

Today, Spitz swims the 200-meter freestyle in which he hopes to break the world standard of 1:54.3 set last year by Schollander, now retired from active competition.

Though he was cautious in comments after his performance yesterday, Spitz has made no secret of his hopes to break the record set by his former Santa Clara Swim Club teammate.

"I should feel good about the race," said Spitz, who beat his nearest competitor by three full seconds yesterday. "I'm just going to try to do my best."

ANOTHER RECORD

Another record could come today in the 200-meter breaststroke, which figures to be a rerun of the race at the 1968 Olympics. Mitch Ivey of the Santa Clara club hopes to write a new ending to the story, though.

At Mexico City, Ivey led Roland Matthes of East Germany for the first half of the 200, only to lose to Matthes' finishing kick. Yesterday, Matthes topped Ivey in the 100-meter backstroke, winning in 58.5, one-half second off his own world mark. Ivey, however, likes his chances in the longer race better.

JOB OVER MUNOZ

In other races yesterday, meet records came from triple gold medal winner Debbie Meyer in the 400-meter freestyle, 4:26.4; Kaye Hall in the 100-meter women's backstroke, 1:07.1, and Brian Job in the 200-meter breaststroke, 2:25.8.

Job beat Mexico's Olympic champion Felipe Munoz.

Washington Inks 49er Contract

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers announced yesterday the signing of Gene Washington, Stanford flanker and the National Football League team's No. 2 draft choice.

Washington, who is 6-1, 185 pounds, said he had been signed to a three year contract and though he would not divulge the terms he added: "I'm very happy, very satisfied."

Jack White, general manager of the 49ers, said: "We have followed Washington very closely. We consider ourselves very lucky and we are happy to have him."

The signing leaves the 49ers with only one of their major draft choices unsigned. He is Ted Kwalick, Penn State's All American tight end.

Washington leaves tonight for Chicago and the college All-Star game training camp.

Marin Attorney Has Big Trophy To Show

San Anselmo attorney Jasper C. DeDobbelier has got a big trophy to bring home from Ranch Buena Vista, south of La Paz, Baha California, Mexico.

It's a 132-pound marlin, caught during his vacation trip. In addition to the marlin, DeDobbelier caught 13 dolphin and 9 rooster fish, it was reported from the resort yesterday.

Paper-Thin A's Triumph Behind Krausse, Reggie

OAKLAND (AP) — Manager Hank Bauer of the Oakland Athletics may have to put himself on the active list, the way things are going.

In today's game against the California Angels, the A's were down to only 19 healthy players.

Five other players are on duty with armed forces reserve units for the weekend and injured Bert Campaneris is only available as a pinch runner.

Jim Hunter, 6-7, was nominated to pitch for Oakland against Andy Messersmith, 6-6 of the Angels.

"What we need is another game like the one Lew Krausse pitched," Bauer said. He was talking about the slick seven-hit shutout Krausse pitched to beat the Angels 3-0 last night.

"If we get another game like that, we won't need any extra players," Bauer said.

The only extra players Bauer had available today were catcher Gene Tennace, and infielders Ramon Webster and Tony La Russa.

Tennace was called up from the Des Moines farm club just for the weekend, because the A's had only one other catcher left.

In the service today and Sunday are catchers Dave Duncan and Larry Haney, in addition to pitcher Marcel Lachemann and outfielders Rick Monday and Joe Rudi.

Krausse's performance last night was as good as any he has turned in since he made his major league debut against the Angels in 1961. Ironically, Krausse pitched a shutout against the Angels in that game too. He has had only one other shutout in the eight seasons in between.

Krausse struck out nine batters and did not walk a man. "I was hitting the corners with my pitches and could get all of them over," Lew said.

Krausse had figured he was going to spend the entire 1969 season in the bullpen. Since his promotion to the starting rotation he has won two games and lost a tough 2-0 contest to Chicago.

Reggie Jackson provided the big hit for the A's with a two-run double in the fifth inning.

Jose Tartabull had two hits for Oakland and also provided the best defensive play of the game. He saved Krausse's shutout by throwing out the Angels' Aurelio Rodriguez at the plate in the third inning.

The victory was the third for Oakland in four meetings with the Angels this season.

Stockton Concerned With Winning

EDINA, Minn. (AP) — Dave Stockton, unlike many of his companions on the pro golf tour, isn't concerned with simply making money.

"I want to win," Stockton said. "It's as simple as that. Oh, the money's fine. But I want to win."

Stockton, who took over the top spot in the $100,000 Minnesota Golf Classic yesterday with a four-under-par 67 for 135, has collected $48,683 this year. But he hasn't won a tournament.

"I'd a lot rather have $15,000 and have won a tournament," he said.

Stockton, a 27-year-old who won two tournaments and more than $100,000 last year, held a one-stroke lead over defending champion Dan Sikes, Frank Beard and newcomer Hale Irwin going into today's third round.

Irwin and Beard each had a second-round 67, Sikes a 69.

Hugh Inggs, a South African who has been on the tour only five weeks, matched the record for the 6,913-yard, par-71 Braemar Golf Club course with a 65 and was alone at 137.

Stockton, a five-year tour veteran, took note of Sikes' comment that a tournament should not be held the same date as the British Open, as this one is.

"I don't think I can agree," Stockton said. "I won at Milwaukee last year the same dates as the British Open and am in good shape in this one."

But he had to whip some putting trouble to get in good shape.

RUMORS FLY

Will Joe Show At Jet Camp?

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will he or won't he?

That's the question buzzing around—again—in pro football circles today about Joe Namath and his career with the New York Jets.

But hold on, breathless fans, you'll probably have an answer before sunset Sunday. That's when the super quarterback is supposed to report to the Jets' training camp at Hempstead, N.Y.

If he does show up, he probably won't play because Commissioner Pete Rozelle is likely to suspend him before he can lace up his celebrated white shoes.

For the benefit of anyone who's been in hibernation for the past month, Namath would be suspended because Rozelle has said a million times if he's said it once that the 26-year-old folk hero has to give up his interest in a New York night spot if he wants to play football because the restaurant's clientele includes undesirables.

Jets' president Phil Iselin said yesterday he didn't know anything about the latest reports that Namath had changed his mind and will show up at camp Sunday. Neither did a spokesman for Rozelle. Neither did Coach Weeb Ewbank.

WELCOME

"He'll be welcome," Iselin said.

"There's no change in the situation at all," said the commissioner's spokesman. "He's still retired. We've had no indication he's changed his mind."

The man in question—Namath, of course—was unavailable for comment in Corona, Calif., where he's winding up work on a movie. He was reported to have checked out of the motel where he was staying.

In other pro football news, the Buffalo Bills of the American Football League, who would like to settle their contractural problems with O. J. Simpson, have another headache. It seems they're having problems with a projected $50 million domed stadium.

UNHAPPY

Owner Ralph Wilson is unhappy with the prospects of having to deal with a private management group for use of the stadium, and said so in a letter to the Erie County executives. Wilson said he wants to deal with Erie County and not the private firm, which wants to operate the stadium under a lease from the county.

In major signings, the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League said they've signed their No. 2 draft choice, flanker Gene Washington of Stanford. Washington said he signed a three-year pact and added he's very happy with it.

The Washington Redskins of the NFL said their No. 1 draft choice, defensive back Gene Epps, ended his holdout and reported to camp. Coach Vince Lombardi said the Texas-El Paso star looked quick in his first workout.

Cubs, Mets Run Into Trouble

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Mets and the Chicago Cubs started a brief breather from each other ... and wound up gasping.

The Los Angeles Dodgers ran into Bobby Bonds ... and wound up second.

The Mets, who took two of three games from the Cubs in New York this week, were stunned 11-4 by lowly Montreal last night, while almost-as-lowly Philadelphia came from behind to knock off the Cubs 7-5.

That left the front-running Cubs and the Mets, who resume their crucial showdown in Chicago Monday, separated by four games in the National League East.

Bonds, meanwhile, singled in two runs in the 10th inning—after keying a tying ninth-inning rally—as San Francisco dropped Los Angeles out of first in the West with a 6-4 triumph.

Atlanta, which rallied for three runs in the last inning to beat San Diego 6-3, took over the top spot, one-half game ahead of the Dodgers.

St. Louis stopped Pittsburgh 6-1 and Houston trounced Cincinnati 13-2 in other NL games.

The Expos, who had a four-game losing streak and the worst record of any NL team, assaulted the Mets with a 15-hit attack, including a double and two singles by pitcher Mike Wegener, good for four RBIs.

NEEDED HELP

Wegener, a 22-year-old rookie, won his fourth in 11 decisions, but needed late help from Dick Radatz.

The Cubs grabbed a 5-3 lead with a pair of runs in the eighth, but Philadelphia came right back in the ninth on homers by Ron Stone and Johnny Briggs and Tony Taylor's run-scoring single.

Briggs slammed his eighth of the year, and second of the game, to lead off the inning before Stone hit his first of the season.

EARLY LEAD

Pinch-hitter Bob Aspromonte singled in two runs and Felipe Alou singled in one in the ninth as Atlanta handed San Diego its fifth straight loss.

The Padres took an early 2-0 lead, but the Braves came back in the third with three runs on singles by Alou, Felix Millan and Clete Boyer and Rico Carty's two-run double.

However, San Diego tied it in the third when Larry Stahl tripled after Van Kelly singled.

Lou Brock and Vada Pinson each drove in two runs in a five-run seventh that carried St. Louis past Pittsburgh for its seventh victory in eight games.

Houston exploded for nine runs in the sixth—most ever scored in one inning by the Astros—in halting Cincinnati's five-game victory streak.

Dennis Menke led the way with a double and a triple for four RBIs, while Jim Wynn had three singles and Doug Rader hit his sixth homer.

THE HAWK FLIES HIGH AND LOW — It's a matter of extremes for Ken Harrelson of the Cleveland Indians as he slams his helmet to the ground after striking out, then crosses the plate after a grand-slam homer, his second of his career. (UPI Telephoto)

Yaz Joins July Slugging Parade

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Carl Yastrzemski has joined the Harmon Killebrew-Ken Harrelson July slugging parade and he's brought the whole Boston Red Sox squad along for the ride.

Yastrzemski walloped a homer in each game last night as the Red Sox romped over Baltimore twice, 7-4 and 12-3. That gave Yaz four homers in Boston's last four starts, a pace comparable to the ones Harrelson and Killebrew are toting around the American League.

Harrelson's grand slam helped Cleveland rip Detroit 8-1 and was his fifth homer in eight days. Killebrew unloaded a pair of shots in Minnesota's 9-3 drubbing of Seattle and raised his totals to 27 for the season and nine in the last 10 days.

Yastrzemski and the Red Sox clawed Baltimore pitching for 30 hits in the doubleheader, 22 of them in the second-game romp that reduced the Orioles' East Division lead to 11½ games.

Elsewhere, New York nipped Washington 4-3, Kansas City topped Chicago 8-5 and Oakland blanked California 3-0.

Yastrzemski and Reggie Smith drove in nine runs and scored eight more between them as the Red Sox ripped the Orioles. Smith tagged a three-run homer for Boston's winning margin in the opener after Yastrzemski's seventh-inning homer had snapped a tie.

Then Yaz blasted a three-run shot in the first inning of the nightcap. Mike Andrews had five straight hits in the second game and Smith rapped seven hits in the twin bill, extending his streak to 19 games, longest in the American League this season.

Killebrew drove in four runs with his two homers and a double, lifting his major league leading RBI total to 90. His nine homers in the first 11 days of July make him a threat to the single month record of 18 set by Rudy York in 1937.

Ted Uhlaender also had a two-run homer for the Twins.

Harrelson, who has hit four homers in Cleveland's last five games, unloaded in a six-run third inning. It was his second career grand slam and made things easy for Sam McDowell, who won his 11th with a four-hitter.

Jim Price homered for the Tigers' only run, depriving McDowell of his shutout with two out in the ninth.

Mel Stottlemyre scattered 10 hits and won his 13th game of the season, beating Washington for the Yankees.

Bob Taylor's eighth-inning pinch single drove in the tie-breaking run and then Paul Schaal singled a pair of insurance runs across, helping Kansas City top Chicago. Bill Melton drove in three runs for the White Sox, one of them with his 14th homer of the season.

Marin County Little League Tourney Starts

A hefty package of seven games kicks off the 1969 Marin County team Little League championship tournament Tuesday in a purely local affair.

The tournament will pit champions from each Marin County league, and is not to be confused with the All-Star tournament, which will feature the best players from each league forming teams in a meet that will determine the Marin representative in further play. This tourney gets underway the following week.

The opening round of the Marin team championship consists of Marinwood vs. San Geronimo at Marinwood; San Rafael American vs. Kentfield-Greenbrae at Strawberry; Gallinas Valley vs. Twin Cities at Twin Cities in Corte Madera; Mill Valley National vs. Mill Valley American in Mill Valley; Tiburon vs. Hamilton-Loma Verde at Hamilton Air Force Base; Sausalito vs. Novato American at Sausalito and Novato National vs. Strawberry at Novato. San Rafael National has a first-round bye.

U.S. Pro Tennis Title Goes Under

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — The U.S. pro tennis championship is headed for Australia for the seventh straight year.

To the surprise of no one, four lads from Down Under made up the field today in the semifinals of the $33,000 tournament at Longwood.

King Rod Laver, bidding for his fourth straight title and fifth in six years, was favored to go all the way and collect top prize money of $8,000.

However, countrymen Ken Rosewall, a two-time U.S. pro champ, John Newcombe and Fred Stolle hope to upset the odds favoring the 30-year-old southpaw, who admittedly is looking ahead to the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, N.Y., in late August.

Rosewall, still sprightly at the age of 34, got the first shot at Laver in the semifinals today. Second-seeded Newcombe, runner-up to Laver here in 1968 and last week at Wimbledon, met Stolle for the right to play the winner Sunday.

Challenge To Annex Win Streak

Nine games ago the Italian Club downed Annex Motors, 2-1, in the Joe DiMaggio League opener.

Annex Motors hasn't lost since then in sweeping to a big lead in the Northern Marin Division standings while the Italian Club got involved in a hot race in the Southern Division, in which it is currently second, a half a game behind Toby's Truckers.

Tomorrow, the two teams meet again at Novato High School at 5:30 p.m. in the key game in DiMaggio League action. In another biggie, Toby's hosts ambitious Mill Valley Chiefs at Marin Catholic at 1 p.m.; Holiday Magic goes against Herb's Pool Service at Drake High School at 1 p.m. and Healdsburg is at the Presidio, also at 1 p.m.

Bill Kelly will try to hold off the Mill Valley Chiefs for Toby's. The Chiefs, 1½ games behind Toby's, will counter with Mike Johnson.

Greenwood May Be Man To Watch In Champ Golf

GEORGE GREENWOOD
One Handicapper

Looking for a man to watch in the Marin County Tournament of Golf Champions at Meadow Club in Fairfax tomorrow?

Take a good look at George Greenwood of San Rafael, the champ at Indian Valley in Novato. He may be the one who winds up with the trophy gold.

George, a partner in a manufacturing agent company in San Francisco, had to beat George Scherba, the first Tournament of Champion titlist in 1967 and Indian Valley champ two years running. Greenwood won last year's Indian Valley Championship by four strokes.

Greenwood is a one-handicapper and a veteran golfer who's played for the past 40 years, beginning as a teen-ager in the Southwest, where he won junior titles in Tucson, Phoenix and Douglas, Ariz.

He's played in the national Amateur (1959) and was low amateur in the Southern California Open in Palm Springs.

"I've played in a lot of tournaments," Greenwood said. "But I've never won anything really important. The last thing I won was the San Rafael Jaycee Tournament. I shot a 70 at San Geronimo to win it last year."

George hasn't played at Meadow Club for a couple of years but thinks it's "a lovely course, just beautiful to play on."

He figures Don Lazzarini, the Meadow Club champ and Peacock Gap representative Jack Culp are the fellows to beat.

"They both play sound golf," he said. "They're real fine players."

Greenwood doesn't consider himself a spectacular golfer.

"I don't do anything particularly well," he said. "but I don't do anything very badly either. I guess you could say I'm a steady golfer, most days."

Golfing is popular in the 53-year-old Greenwood's family.

Both his sons play it, and so does Mrs. Greenwood, a regular name on the Indian Valley golf result sheets.

"She's a real tiger out there," Greenwood said.

San Rafael Braves Vs. San Jose

San Rafael Braves open play in the San Jose Peninsula Traveling League tomorrow, but they'll get a good look at their opponents tonight.

The Pied Pipers of San Jose come to Albert Park in San Rafael tonight for an 8 o'clock practice game with the Braves. Tomorrow the teams meet in a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m., also at Albert Field, but these two will be for keeps.

A CHANGE

Braves manager Joe Anselmo announced a change of league schedules which calls for 14 games in the eight-team league, each team playing the other twice. Games will be doubleheaders, so will not be home-and-home arrangements as originally planned.

The Braves are led by Rocky Shone, former San Rafael High School athlete, with a .436 mark, and shortstop Tom Corder, ex-star at Novato High and current star of the San Jose State team, who is hitting .410. First baseman Art Blunt is team leader in home runs, 7, and runs batted in, 25, two more than Shone. The Braves are batting .315 as a team, with an 18-6 record.

14-3 RECORD

The visiting San Jose nine has a 14-3 record and were champs of a San Jose area spring league, and finalists in the State Regional baseball tournament in the Santa Clara County area. The team draws players from San Jose State, San Diego State, Humboldt State, Nevada State and Hartnell Junior College.

Leading pitchers are Jim Deach (1.39 earned run average) from Nevada State and Carl Warren (1.06) from Hartnell J.C.

BOWLING NOTES

First 600 Is Right On Button

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Tom Graham, 157 average, bowled his first 600 series and didn't have a pin to spare in the Splinters League at Country Club Bowl.

Graham had games of 190, 154 and 256 to hit that six right on the button. Also in the Splinters, Luke Kelly, 156 avg., rolled a 587 series.

Sharon Peicich also rolled her first 600 ever, a 604 set in the Sleepers League at the San Rafael lanes. Her scores were 213-170-221. High scores in that league came from Bea Hoffmann and Peg Quezada, each with a 237.

THIS AND THAT — Dick Spear, bowling in the Twilight Twirlers League, rolled an all-spare game, coming out of it with a 183 line. ... In the Bowlerettes at Country Club Bowl, Lila Giambra (151 avg.) rolled a 220 line and 566 series, Betty Conti (140 avg.) had 202-537, and Leemoi Bekey went up the ladder by ones, 146-147-148. ... In the Keglerettes League, Jessie Hill and Dori Simeone picked 4-7-10 splits and Dori also made good a 6-8-10; Gayle Graham (135 avg.) went all the way to a 223 to lead scores.

DOWN THE LANES — High series score of the week at Country Club came from Terry De Young, an 877 four-gamer led by a 253. ... At Nave Lanes, Bill Nave III beat out father Bill Jr., 629 to 623. ... In the Hi-Lo's League at Country Club, Jim Leiting (136 avg.) rolled a 214; Joe Brusatori (153 avg.) rolled a 234, Jean Beckwith picked up a 4-7-10 split and Harry Hicklin the 6-7-10. ... Dave Mendelsohn, 144 average roller in the Greenbrae Lanes Adult-Junior League, rolled a 590 series to show the big guys how a junior does it. ... Marg Rossback rolled her highest score ever in the Hits and Mrs. League at Greenbrae Lanes, 205-543.

MORE ON NANCY — The 12-year-old bowling marvel, Nancy McPherson of San Rafael, hasn't slacked off one bit. She beat the juniors (13 through 18) and even the pros in the Fourth of July Pro-Am event of the Professional Pacific Coast Bowlers tournament at Serra Bowl in Colma.

Little Nancy (all 100 pounds of her) rolled games of 231, 191, and 210 for 632 scratch and won first place in the Prep (12 and under) division. It was higher than any of the other bowlers (all older) could do.

Next stop for Nancy will be Mel's Bowl in Redwood City, where she was to compete today in the State Junior Tournament, in singles and doubles. On July 26 she'll bowl at King's Bowl in Millbrae in the team event of the state tourney.

Carlos Wins In Tuneup Race

HONOLULU (AP) — John Carlos won both dashes and breezed through a relay leg last night as most of the members of the U.S. track team that will meet the Russians next week competed in a tuneup meet.

Carlos won the 100 in 9.4 and breezed to a 220 victory in 21.3. Peter Norman of Australia, who beat Carlos for the Silver medal in last year's Olympic Games at Mexico City, was third in the 220.

Carlos' time in the 100 established a Hawaiian record.

Blackfin Continues To Lead In Trans-Pac Race

HONOLULU (AP) — Windward Passage predicts she'll hit the Diamond Head finish two hours before Blackfin, which continued to lead the Los Angeles to Honolulu Transpacific Yacht Race by some 20 miles at last report.

The 73-foot ketch Blackfin, commanded by Kenneth DeMeuse and from the St. Francis Yacht Club of San Francisco, radioed yesterday he expected to reach Diamond Head at 7:42 p.m. tomorrow Honolulu time.

The Blackfin was less than 600 miles out of Honolulu on a pace breaking the old record of nine days, 13 hours, 51.2 minutes set in 1965 by Robert F. Johnson of the Portland Yacht Club with the Ticonderoga.

But about 20 miles astern of the Blackfin aboard his new boat, Windward Passage, Johnson radioed yesterday he expected to arrive at Diamond Head at 5:30 p.m. tomorrow. Race officials admitted there was some confusion as to Johnson's course.

Behind the two leaders, other front runners were Pursuit, of the San Francisco Yacht Club; Rascal, from the Santa Barbara YC, and Kamalii of the Los Angeles YC.

Tom Lavine's 37-foot sloop Quest lost its rudder and when crew members were unable to rig another to bring the yacht under control the boat dropped out of the race yesterday afternoon, race officials said. The Quest, of the California YC, left the race at the halfway mark and a commercial tug will tow the disabled yacht to port, the Coast Guard said.

Meanwhile, the condition of Eugene Bricker, 47, Fresno, Calif., was reported improved. He fractured his skull and had his right side partially paralyzed when struck in the head Thursday by a boom aboard the sloop Mahia.

He is being taken to San Diego by the Navy destroyer USS Black, now expected to arrive in port Sunday afternoon.

Van Dillen Scores Another Big Upset

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — An 18-year-old just out of high school made it big in the 1969 U.S. Amateur Tennis Tournament Friday.

Poker-faced Eric Van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif., seventh-seeded and the youngest player in the tournament, had just beaten second-seeded Joaquin Loyo-Mayo of Mexico in a stunning five-set upset. It was Van Dillen's second long match in as many days.

"Yes, I guess you can call it the best tennis I have ever played," he said after rallying to beat the Mexican Davis Cup player 6-8, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

But there will be other fine victories for this young player, whom many observers have picked as definite top-notch material.

Sonics Search For Coach

SEATTLE (AP) — The sudden resignation of fiery Al Bianchi as coach of the National Basketball Association's Seattle SuperSonics left his players stunned and his general manager scrambling for a replacement.

Bianchi, 36, citing "personal reasons," announced his resignation yesterday. He had one year remaining on his three-year contract.

"Al told me of his decision Thursday, so I went into shock a day earlier that most," Tom Meschery, team captain, said. "I think Al was a heck of a coach. I don't think he should resign, but it's up to him."

Center Bob Rule said he couldn't believe it when he heard the news. "I had no idea this was coming. What happened?"

NO OFFERS

Bianchi, who came to Seattle when the team was accepted into the NBA two years ago, said he preferred not to go into the reasons for his resignation. He said he had no job waiting and no offers.

"I've been kind of thinking about quitting since the middle of last season," he told newsmen. "I was not happy with the way things went, or our sixth-place finish.

"Another coach with new ideas and philosophies could perhaps do a better job.

"There are certain things as a coach you want to accomplish," Bianchi said. "I don't think I can do it here, or maybe not anywhere else in basketball. This is a different era. Maybe I have to change my ways,"

Bianchi said he told general manager Dick Vertlieb and club president Sam Schulman of his decision Monday and was told to think it over. "I came to the same decision," he said.

Babe Ruth Tourneys Set Today

District Seven Babe Ruth tournaments get underway at two different locations tomorrow in the first steps of a junior baseball tourney trail that spirals toward a world series at the end of the rainbow.

Three Marin County teams are entered in the Santa Rosa District Seven meet at Santa Rosa's Doyle Park tonight and tomorrow.

In the 5 p.m. opener, Northgate (Las Gallinas) takes on Vacaville. At 8 p.m. it's Santa Rosa against Mill Valley.

Rohnert Park takes on the winners of the Northgate-Vacaville contest at noon tomorrow. That will be followed by a 3 p.m. contest between the winner of the Santa Rosa-Mill Valley game and Novato.

At Sonoma, Central Marin goes against Antioch at 1 p.m. today and Redwood Empire and Vallejo tangle at 4:30 p.m. Travis Air Force Base and Sonoma have a first round bye. Action continues tomorrow at 6 p.m.

Winners in both tournaments battle it out July 21,22.

Claude Osteen of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Ray Sadecki of the San Francisco Giants lost the most games in the National League last season. Each lost 18 times. Osteen gave up the most runs, 109.

Court Balks Federal Try To Halt Takeover

NEW YORK (UPI) — Federal Judge Hubert L. Will in Chicago yesterday refused the Justice Department's request for a preliminary injunction to block the tender offer for shares of B. F. Goodrich Co. of Akron by Northwest Industries, Inc., the Chicago railway holding company.

The offer had been barred for some weeks by a temporary restraining order.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Richard McLaren expressed disappointment at Judge Will's ruling and said the Justice Department will seek an early trial of its suit to block the acquisition on its merits and also will ask Judge Will to forbid Northwest to combine with Goodrich pending the trial and appeal should the tender offer be successful.

Judge Will promptly said he would issue such an order and that Northwest has been trying to get control of Goodrich since January and the move had been resisted stoutly by the Goodrich management as well as the Justice Department.

It is known that very few Goodrich shares have been tendered to Northwest so far.

Judge Will's decision was regarded as a clear rebuff by the court to the Nixon administration's announced policy of seeking to prevent by all possible means mergers involving very large corporations.

However, the terms of the order Judge Will said he would sign made it clear that if Northwest does get a majority of Goodrich shares, the railway holding company will be allowed virtually no voice in the management or policies of the rubber company pending trial of the antitrust suit on its merits, which might take months or even years counting the appeal.

The Goodrich management has taken the view all along that it might not be able to keep its shareholders from selling control of the company to Northwest without a legal barrier. However, the Goodrich management has insisted that the terms of the Northwest offer are not really attractive on a long term basis.

Another large merger proposal Friday saw Georgia-Pacific Corp. of Portland, Ore., agree to buy Louisiana Forest Products for $60.5 million in cash and securities.

Georgia Pacific would get a new hardwood pulp mill at Port Hudson, La., 20,000 acres of nearby timberlands, a wood chip mill at Sammondsport, La., and 100,000 acres of pulpwood rights.

Two of Holland's larger companies, Aku Co and Royal Salt Organum announced a merger plan that would create a $1.68 billion combine.

Virginia National Bank of Norfolk and First National Bank of Quantico announced plans to merge, exchanging one share of the Quantico bank for 2.15 shares of Virginia National.

Stanwyck Corp. of Arlington, Va., called off a proposed merger with Dunlap and Associates.

Securities Trade Faces Big Shock

NEW YORK (UPI) — A New York Stock Exchange committee on Thursday will recommend, reluctantly and under pressure, a rule change which will rock the securities industry and affect investors, big and small, it has been learned.

After weeks of deliberation, the committee will recommend that members be permitted to "go public," that is sell stock in their own firms.

For decades, the exchange has forbidden members to do so, contending the regulation was necessary to control membership and to prevent power institutions such as mutual funds and insurance companies from extending their influence on the market and avoiding large commission charges.

Such a recommendation would require approval by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the NYSE membership.

"If it happens," said the head of a major Wall Street brokerage, "We're in a new multibillion dollar ball game. No place for the weak or faint of heart."

Late in May, Dan Lufkin, chairman of Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette, attended his first board of governor's meeting and shook establishment members by announcing that his firm intended to go public. Lufkin said 800,000 shares had been filed for registration with the SEC and noted that this was against Exchange rules. Even thoush DLJ derived 63 per cent of its $30.4 revenues in 1968 from NYSE commissions, Lufkin said it would resign from the Exchange unless the rule was changed. He urged the board to recommend such action and suggested several amendments to skirt the institutional problem.

The "young Turk" segment on the Street applauded. They were eager, as is DLJ, to build more capital to meet block positioning needs, rising costs and expansion expenses brought on by market bigness and backshop backlogs.

The old guard elements were shocked and bitter. Some complained that Lufkin, because of possible antitrust involvement, "had a pistol at the NYSE's head." Others saw it as encouragement for other houses to flee to the "third market" where listed stocks are sold in over-the-counter fashion.

"It was a bitter battle, but it's all settled now," said the highly-placed Wall Street source. "Next Thursday the public ownership committee of the board will report favorably on Lufkin's proposal. At the same time it will promise to hammer out appropriate amendments and offer them at the September meeting for submission to the SEC and a mail vote by members. Everything could be approved and settled by as early as Nov. 1."

Lufkin refused comment on the report. Exchange officials also shied away from comment. The head of one major Wall Street brokerage said, "It's possible. But the public ownership boys may find they have less support outside New York than they figure. Could be a close vote."

If at least half of the 1,366 NYSE members vote, it would take only a majority of the mail votes to approve such a rule change.

Wall Street executives predicted such a development would lead to:

A rush by brokerage firms, big and small, to incorporate and merge. Smaller houses would be looking for protection, the bigger houses for added facilities and expertise.

Restructuring of NYSE commission schedule on a dollar rather than a share-bought basis. This probably would lower costs for the big traders and increase them for the small trader.

Wall Street's Small Summer Rally Fizzles

NEW YORK (UPI) — The tiny summer rally in the stock market that danced on the horizon last week vanished like the mirage this week. Stocks went down and most other business news was on the downside.

The Commerce Department reported retail sales fell on a month-to-month basis in June for the second consecutive month. The drop from May was only 1 per cent. The June sales still were 2 per cent above a year earlier but that gain was less than the rate of depreciation of money.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said the growth rate of new orders for merchandise was considerably slower in June than in May. Only 27 per cent of the purchasing men reported order gains for June and many reported production down. However June, traditionally, is a slower month in wholesale merchandising than May.

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed that installment credit jumped $846 million in May, the biggest monthly increase since last October.

A plan to lay off 4,000 workers of Grumman Aircraft Engineering Co. of Bethpage, N.Y., by yearend focused attention on other layoffs of around 19,000 workers in the aerospace industry.

Nevertheless, there were big new procurement contracts in the industry. Even Grumman landed one sizable military order and McDonnell-Douglas of St. Louis got a $356.7 million continuing order for F4 Phantom jet fighters and reconnaissance planes.

The layoffs in aerospace had no effect on the general employment level. The government said unemployment dropped in June to 3.4 per cent of the labor force from 3.5 per cent in May in spite of the influx of June graduates into the labor market. However, a corrected figure for the second quarter showed the total number of jobless persons rose by 140,000 during the quarter to 2.8 million, the first sizable such advance in two years.

President Richard M. Nixon sent a bill to Congress that would extend unemployment insurance to about 4.8 million more workers and would raise from $3,000 to $6,000 the wage base on which employers pay a tax to finance unemployment insurance.

The University of Michigan's periodic survey of consumer buying moods, which has maintained a steadfastly optimistic tone in recent years, at last turned pessimistic. The latest survey by the Michigan economists said consumers are sufficiently worried over inflation to be reluctant to buy and most of them expect many more price increases this year. In consequence the Michigan index of consumer buying intentions had dropped to 91.6 at the end of June from 95.1 in February.

West Germany agreed to spend or invest $1.5 billion in the United States in the next years to help offset the $900 million a year cost of keeping American troops in Germany.

For the first time since 1958, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board will make long-term loans to savings and loan associations. Chairman Preston Martin told a news conference in Sacramento the first such five-year loans will be financed by the some of $200 million in 8 per cent debentures.

Humble Oil and Refining Co. said it now has made a major offshore oil discovery in the Santa Barbara Channel off California. Previously the Esso Company had minimized the importance of its drilling in the area.

A group of Negro businessmen with the backing of Negro banks in New York and Philadelphia offered to buy Blatz Brewing Co. of Milwaukee, from Pabst Brewing Co., which has been ordered by a federal court to divest itself of the company. The court already had two offers for Blatz from other brewing firms.

A review board of the National Association of Broadcasters has recommended that cigarette advertising be phased entirely out of television by 1973 to avert more federal regulation of TV ads.

The Board of Trade, Chicago's famous grain futures market, may soon have its first full fledged female member. Members voted to end the rule excluding women and 26-year-old Carol Jean Ovitz is expected to be admitted to full trading membership in mid-August.

Are We Threatened By Our Own Contamination?

In our preoccupation with the possibility of extinction from one big nuclear holocaust, we overlook the smaller forces that are gnawing away at our vitals from within.

Our civilization is threatened by the very forces let loose by the process of civilization—contamination and pollution from smoke, pesticides, leaking oil, and war surplus gases and bacteria for which we must find disposal sites.

A series of unrelated news stories that hit the headlines during recent weeks give some hint of the gradual erosion of environment that is taking place worldwide.

OUT OF GERMANY comes the report that a sackful (about 220 pounds) of insecticide dumped into the Rhine had brought instant death to millions of fish on a 12-mile stretch of the river and jeopardized the health of 3.5 million Germans served by the Rhine.

In California, DDT spray is now considered so indestructible that householders are warned not to dispose of the contents into the sink or on the ground for fear that water and soil will be contaminated.

And in Washington, the military was all set to cart 27,000 tons of obsolete chemical munitions including nerve gas over rail from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Colorado to New Jersey, then barge them out into the Atlantic for burial. Because of public outcry over the potential danger of shipping cross country over accident-prone rails, the Pentagon announced it would burn most of the chemicals.

FROM STOCKHOLM comes the disquieting report that a gold mining company had dumped 7,000 tons of deadly arsenic into the Baltic Sea in the 1930's. We were assured that the arsenic, enough to kill all the people in the world "three times over," were safely imbedded in concrete and sunk to the bottom of the sea.

But experts are quoted as saying the concrete will eventually erode, and the arsenic may contaminate the water in the future.

If a sackful of German insecticide can kill millions of fish in the Rhine, the kill potential of 27,000 tons of chemical gas rumbling cross country over rail or the 7,000 tons of arsenic locked for the moment at the ocean bottom is staggering to contemplate.

Leading nations of the world including ours vie with each other to produce super aircraft, super weapons, and super sprays, with little or no planning on how the leftovers and residues from the super products will be disposed of and how the disposals will affect environment.

AT THE RATE we're going, we may soon find ourselves choking in self-created smog, self-invented sprays, and self-polluted waters.

Montana Senator Lee Metcalf, a leader in conservation, recently warned that erosion, pollution, and contamination of the country's natural resources constitute a more imminent danger than the H-bomb.

"I do not think that we are going to destroy ourselves in a nuclear holocaust," said the senator.

"But if we keep on poisoning the water we drink, destroying the soil upon which we depend, contaminating the air we breathe, destroying our natural habitat . . ., we will fade out quickly as a race of men, anemic, sickly, corrupted. The poet is indeed the prophet. For this is the way the World ends, not with a bang but with a whimper."

Control of DDT and other chemicals that permanently damage environment is essential.

Creation and production of dangerous chemicals should be accompanied by researchc on safe methods of disposal.

The war against smog and anti-pollution of waters and soil should be stepped up.

Otherwise, we'll all fade away in a whimper while wheezing at the top of our diseased lungs at the dangers of nuclear holocaust.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A MOTORIST was tootling along the Pennsylvania Turnpike when he suddenly ran into an almost impenetrable fog. Finally, he made out a sign ahead, and got out of his car and struck a match to read it.

It was a familiar picture—and the caption read, "Smokey the Bear Says Put Out That Match!"

In his new book, "The Game of Baseball," Gil Hodges, Met manager and enormously popular ex-Dodger first sacker, tells about one of the most confusing days of his life. First, his Dodgers won a key World Series contest, 2 and 0—and it was Gil who batted in the only two runs. Then he came home expecting a royal welcome from his son, Gil, Jr., then aged 5.

Gil, Jr., however, was watching TV. His only comment when his father entered the room was, "Gee, Daddy, you just missed Captain Midnight."

The editor of a popular fashion magazine contended recently that a sense of style was inborn. "As proof," she continued, "I could show you apprentice girls on my staff who haven't got the brains of a button — but turn them loose at the fashion previews and they come back with the best hat or shoes or dress of the season. They SMELL what's good and it has absolutely nothing to do with intelligence."

Hippies Did Not Hamper Firemen

We wish to correct misinformation printed on the front page of the I-J on July 5 under the captions "Hippies Hamper Firemen During Muir Beach Blaze" and "Marin Celebrates Glorious Fourth."

As residents of Muir Beach, we were participating in our annual July Fourth picnic on the private beach. . . . We were on the scene about 10 minutes before the first truck arrived, and we stayed until most of the people had gone. None of us saw any hippie hamper any fireman. . . . Some of us did see one long-haired young man attempt to help put out the fire.

In the other article, the I-J included this statement: " . . . Firemen had to enlist the help of law officers to 'quiet the hippies' before putting out the fire." This sensationalized statement . . . is fabrication or, at best, conjecture. What means were used by "law officers to 'quiet the hippies' "? The fact is, none — because none were needed. We witnessed no confrontation between law enforcement officers and hippies.

Nearly every sentence of these two articles having to do with the Muir Beach incident is incorrectly reported. . . .

The article further states that hippies "went down on the beach and set several other fires." While we noticed the three campfires on the main beach, we should point out that it is a rare evening when there is not at least one campfire there. As we sat around our own bonfires on the private beach, some of us saw the bonfires on the main beach earlier in the evening — long before the debris had been ignited.

Our purpose in writing is not only to offer our observations, but to encourage the I-J staff to be more ambitious in reporting the news accurately. It is much too easy to sensationalize, and by doing so, to create situations which are harmful to the community at large. We depend on the I-J to provide us with accurate and honest reports, particularly of local news, but we are often disappointed.

Ladies Will Get Recreation Center

You will rue the day you antagonize the Little Old Ladies on their recreation center. They are all lovable. I know many of them but they have the vengeance of a Borgia, the sting of a disturbed nest of wasps and the venom of a cobra.

I would rather build a recreation center myself than incur the wrath of the cornered female.

They have their minds made up to have a new center. They will have one. Press and Politicos might as well concede.

I love you ladies.

LINES ON LIVING

Be Constantly On Move Or Life Will Stagnate

By Rabbi
HAIM KEMELMAN

A restful soul in perpetual ease, is like restful water in a stationary tub, always in danger of becoming stagnant and rustful.

John Burroughs articulated this truth when he concluded that "An idle man is a wretched man." Idleness is festering scum and death. And if life has any comprehensible meaning to us at all, it is in the saving grace which is to be found in our daily tasks and responsibilities that lie immediately at hand, which alone can redeem us from our ferocious explosiveness.

Observe life and you'll find its immediate purpose and fulfillment. What is that end of life? It is, as best as we know, to dignify the means by which we live and to add beauty and nobility to our name which will be added to the guest list of lodgers on this planet. And since we are not owners and perpetual masters of our earth, we must pay for our ticket with saving toil so as to enjoy every sweet movement of our ride on God's global merry-go-round.

WE MUST constantly be on the move. We must have something to do. We must have some challenge, some work, some cause in which we can invest our creative energies. We must, for our own safety and security, invest ourselves in a love, in an ideal, in a project which will transcend us and redeem us.

Every person, by reason of intelligence adn potential power, is a danger to himself. There is enough flammable material and latent energy within us to make us explode like fire crackers that go up destructively in fury and smoke. The wise counselor pleads for self-expression, not self-explosion. The power that is in us must be harnessed constructively or it will be wasted; worse yet, it will being us to personal disintegration and individual waste.

THE PATTERN of growthful fulfillment is unique: life is on the move. The birds build their nests in the trees, the trees grow into bloom in the sun and man grows as he moves in creation and among men.

If you would crave for a life that will hold its savor to its very end; if you would pray for living never to become empty and stagnant and rusting; if you would join the army of watchers of sunny skies, the listeners of thrilling laughter, the gazers of beauty in distant hills — then, by all means, invest your life by being on the go.

The imprisoned soul needs the freedom of the whole world, not the tinkering with one's self, the pre-occupation of one life, no matter how unique that life may be. In the surrender of the fulfilled self toward an extension in a greater world of living and experiencing, we become the electric poles that will carry light to that open and bright city which is the City of God. Because when we shoulder a burden and move from a selfish pre-occupation to a selfless interest, we objectify our individual life and transmute it to a total of life of self-extension and self-enlargement.

W. BERAN Wolfe taught the ghostly malcontents of his day that by absorbing themselves only in their own interests and desires they have failed to derive the deeper joys that are inherent in human relations and involvement, thus creating their own misery and unhappiness. He wisely noted that human fulfillment is not to be sought "as if it were a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow, but among human beings, who are living richly and fully the good life. If you observe a really happy man you will find him building a boat, writing a symphony, educating his son, growing dahlias in his garden . . . living 24 crowded hours of the day."

And if we have none of these life-absorbing, life-sustaining hobbies, we can still earn our life by leaving "no tender word unsaid," no sweet melody unheeded, no beautiful sight unglimpsed. Keep moving, we must!

Finch Lost Big Chance When He Turned Down Veep Offer

WASHINGTON — Shortly before Robert H. Finch became secretary of Health, Eduation and Welfare he got sage advice from one who had been through the HEW grind. For two and a half years while Congress was adopting a series of long-delayed programs in education and health John Gardner, as secretary of the mammoth department, learned the hard way about the fierce pulling and hauling centering around interests most directly touching every voter.

Gardner, today head of the Urban Coalition, told Finch that he must, above all else, keep on good terms with the professionals who at the working level carry out the orders issuing from HEW. These were his primary constituents. He might have the trust of the President and the Congress, yet without the confidence of the workers in the vineyard across the land, he would be gravely handicapped.

In light of what has happened in recent weeks with Finch on a roller coaster of sharp ups and downs and his authority in question, this advice is singularly pertinent. The unhappy Finch must now try to regain a hold on his principal constituents in order to be effective in an office of far-reaching influence. That is, if he is to stay as HEW secretary.

FINCH CAME into the Nixon administration as the bright young star. Elected lieutenant governor of California when he was not yet 40, he had a promising political future. Manager for Mr. Nixon in earlier campaigns, he had shown a high order of political skill. He was rated a moderate in the California tradition that has generated a long succession of governors and senators contributing to the state's remarkable growth.

It has now been disclosed that Mr. Nixon offered the vice-presidency to Finch before he turned to Spiro T. Agnew. He said no, because of his closeness to the presidential candidate, both of them having their origins in the west. In retrospect this seems for his own future and for the Nixon administration to have been an unhappy error in judgment. After eight years of a Nixon administration he would at 52 have been in a perfect position to try for the No. 1 place.

TODAY EVEN his friendly critics are saying his usefulness has been so impaired by having been publicly overruled on issues of great substance that he should resign.

Stepping out, Finch could pursue his own political fortunes presumably with the blessing of his good friend and patron, President Nixon. The difficulty, however, is that in his home state the door to opportunity is closed with a sign marked conservative.

Sen. George L. Murphy, the 67-year-old former song-and-dance man, intends to run next year for a second term. His career in the Senate thus far has hardly been brilliant. But he may suit the current mood, an amiable smiling figure always ready with a speech for home and mother and a knack for keeping out of unpleasant controversy.

Far more important is the fact that he has the backing of the forces that have taken over the Republican Party in California and installed the conservatives in power.

Reagan is up for re-election in 1970. While there are reports that he is fed up with the governorship and his quarrels with the Democrats in the Legislature, he is regarded as certain to run again.

So the door to the future in Finch's own state is marked not only conservative but "don't disturb." The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare is, moreover, a loyal team player and the odds are strongly against his embarrassing his president by any precipitate act.

Jackie Had Personal Problems? Nothing Compared To My Wife

WASHINGTON — The memoirs of Jackie Kennedy Onassis' secretary, Mary Gallagher, have titillated the world. Jackie's most secret thoughts and observations soon will appear in book form, after being serialized in the Ladies Home Journal. I was as fascinated as anyone to read about Jackie's money problems, her attitude toward her White House guests, her penchant for clothes and her method of handling gifts sent to her for her children.

I'll admit that at first I was critical of Jackie's behavior, but then the thought occurred to me what would happen if my wife had an upstairs secretary and the secretary wrote about all the things my wife did. It would go something like this:

"Annie Buchwald was quite lavish with money and never seemed to be able to make this books balance. Mr. Buchwald called me in one day and said that he was sick and tired of paying all of Mrs. Buchwald's bills and he wanted a complete record of everything she spent.

"WHEN I informed Annie of this, she became enraged and told me to tell the caterer that the next time we had a party, he was to use leftover wine from glasses to refill the glasses of people still drinking.

"I always worked upstairs in the bedroom, so no one knew that Annie had a secretary. Once, the people from Newsweek came to the house to interview Annie, and she made me hide in the broom closet.

"She wanted everyone to think she answered her own mail.

"Annie could be kind and at other times she could go into fits of rage. Once, I remember, the Salvation Army came to the door and she cleaned out the attic. But another time, when Mr. Buchwald lost $100 at poker, she wouldn't talk to him for two days.

"IT WAS DIFFICULT to get work done because Annie was always on the phone, either talking to her friends or to her sister. I remember one hot day when we had to write a letter to Sears and Roebuck about a broken washing machine and she said, 'Let's not work today, it's so lovely outside.'

" 'Wonderful.' I said, 'What should we do?' " 'Why don't you clean the swimming pool?'

"It was this kind of thoughtfulness which made me want to work for Annie forever.

"BUT MONEY was always a problem. I once asked for a raise and she said, 'Of course you need one. Ask my husband.' I asked Mr. Buchwald and he said I should ask Annie. I went back to Annie and she became furious and said, 'If I give you a raise, it will have to come out of my own pocket.' I went back to Mr. Buchwald who said, 'I don't know what we'd do without you, Margie.' And I said, 'Does that mean I can have a raise?' and he said, 'Yes, but the next time we have a party, tell the caterer to mix ginger ale with the white wine. No one will know the difference.'

"I think one of the things that got Mr. Buchwald particularly mad was Annie's extravagances when it came to redecorating the house. Annie never seemed to get it the way she wanted it. One time she told Mr. Buchwald she wanted new slipcovers and he got infuriated and said, 'That does it. From now on we're not going to serve any wine.'

"I DON'T know what happened to turn Annie against me. One day she called me up and accused me of telling the Washington Post society editor that we weren't serving wine any more at our house. I protested it hadn't come from me, but she was in such a state she wouldn't believe me.

"So I decided to write these memoirs. It will be a good lesson to her, and it will make her think twice about hiring another personal secreetary.

Space: Something Out There For All Mankind

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Men have been flying to the moon for 2,000 years. But in imagination only.

Somebody once said that what man can imagine, he can do.

The Apollo 11 flight of astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins, and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., due to begin Wednesday, will be a magnificent test of this proposition.

On May 25, 1961, in an address to Congress, President John F. Kennedy said:

"I believe that this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal before this decade is out, of landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to earth."

His speech fired the imagination of both the people and the Congress, and the Apollo program to land not one but two men on the moon was launched.

TOTAL COST

Total cost of the program is estimated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) at $23.9 billion. This includes $350 million for each Apollo manned flight and $2.4 billion worth of permanent facilities such as the monster $1.04 billion Apollo launch unit at Cape Kennedy.

There are those who feel this is a waste of money. Why go to the moon, they argue, when there is so much misery to be relieved on earth?

A famous scientist in a recent interview, made this reply:

"I do not share this view. The exploration of the cosmos—the moon and the planets—is a noble aim ... our generation has the right to be proud of the fact that it has opened the space era of mankind ...

The scientist was Aanatoli A. Blagonravov, Soviet academician, and the interview with him was published in Komsomolsksys Pravda, the Communist youth newspaper.

Whether man has any business to want to explore the moon, and also the planets, when he has so far failed to cope successfully with his troubles on earth, is a matter about which there probably can never be universal agreement.

But man, the curious animal, has almost always been at odds with man, the prudent animal.

There have been times when the interests of both have coincided, and history has given those moments decorative labels—the "glory" of Greece, the "grandeur" of Rome, the "renaissance" of Western civilization. The space exploration era may be another of those moments in time.

From the day of its birth in 1958 the civilian agency, NASA, will have spent on space activities alone nearly $38 billion through fiscal 1970. The fact that nearly $24 billion of that total is for manned flight, as distinguished from scientific and other space projects, gives an idea as to the priorities involved.

SOME ARGUE

There are those who say too much emphasis has been placed on man-in-space and, consequently, too little on instruments-in-space.

It was instruments in space that discovered the earth's Van Allen radiation belts, measured the "solar wind" and the strange magnetic fields of interplanetary and near-earth space, photographed the moon and Mars, hung communication relays in orbit, investigated the climate and atmosphere of Venus, created a brand new navigation system based on satellites, and provided a fabulous method of looking down on earth from orbit to get never before obtainable information about our planet's weather and its water, agricultural, and mineral resources.

What do we do now?

Well, the space enthusiasts argue that we've got our feet wet in space and we can't back out now.

After this month's Apollo 11 lunar landing attempt, NASA has three additional moon flights programmed, each carrying new scientific experimental packages to be planted on our satellite. It also is asking authorization for six more missions, carrying Apollo through 1972.

SPACE STATIONS

In addition, it is seeking approval for permanent space stations, with 50 scientist-astronauts living in orbit for up to a year starting in the late 1970s or early 1980s. These stations would be supplied and their crews relieved from time to time by reusable rocket craft serving as space shuttles capable of leaving and returning to earth from spaceports in much the same way transport planes operate from today's airports.

The space age which is now carrying us to the moon was born in an atmosphere of shocked surprise when the presumably backward Russians launched the first artificial earth satellite on Oct. 4, 1957.

They followed with a sensational list of "space firsts"—the first man in orbit, the first woman in orbit, the first "extravehicular" maneuvers in orbit, the first invasion of the thick atmosphere of Venus by man-made instruments, and many others.

LAGGED IN RACE

But despite this head start, the Russians have lagged in the race to put men on the moon. Since the time when the United States finally decided to catch up, this country has pushed ahead of the USSR in many significant phases of space competition.

Even so, there is no indication the Russians are resigned to losing the space race. NASA administrator Thomas O. Paine recently told a Congressional committee that his agency's budget would eventually have to climb back toward the $6 billion a year level to keep us even with the Russians. He noted that they are spending a larger share of their wealth on space activities than we are.

There also is no sign the Russians have abandoned hope of putting men on the moon soon. Cosmonaut Aleksei A. Leonov who in March, 1965, became the first human being to move around in space outside of his life-supporting space capsule, told a group of Japanese journalists in Moscow on June 2 that Russians would land on the moon in 1969 or 1970. He promised the Japanese that they would be able to exhibit some moon matter brought back to earth by Russia at the Osaka Worlds Fair in 1970.

CAN ONLY GUESS

U.S. space experts can only guess why Russia hasn't tried to send men to the moon by now. It looks to some American observers, however, as though the Russians decided to put off a lunar landing attempt until they could perfect a rocket powerful enough to shoot for the moon directly from earth orbit instead of taking on the chancy problem of a descent from lunar orbit, as planned by the Apollo astronauts.

For more than two years, now, it has been understood in this country that the Russians were developing a direct ascent rocket with some 10 million pounds of booster thrust, compared to Saturn 5s 7.5 million. If they have, they haven't let the world know about it. But if Leonov knew what he was talking about last June 2, they must have.

The question remains as to why should either Russia or America want to explore the moon. The answers are many.

Perhaps the uneroded moon holds clues to the origin of the earth and the solar system.

Perhaps somewhere in its crust there is evidence of how life began.

Perhaps the moon is a great repository of valuable mineral wealth.

Perhaps it would make an ideal base for further exploration of the universe, not only by man but by man's instruments.

IDEAL SITE

Perhaps with its airlessness and low gravity it would be an ideal site for manufacturers whose products are best produced under conditions which are hard to establish on earth.

Dr. George E. Mueller, NASA associate administrator for manned space flight, told a Congressional committee recently that:

"Another objective of lunar exploration is to learn about man as a space explorer—his capabilities and limitations. Some day man will move on to other planets; the moon is the training ground."

So also will be the big space platforms, in which Russia, too, has manifested much interest. Mueller has said that before we can think of sending men to Mars we must find out how they get along in earth orbit for periods up to a year.

Some NASA officials have predicted that the United States will be gearing up for manned missions to Mars in the 1980s. Nobody knows what such a project would cost. But $100 billion seems a reasonable guess.

For the time being the United States is not planning any grand projects comparable to or dwarfing Apollo in cost, but we have already sent robots winging toward Mars which will fly by the planet this summer, and we have well under way plans to drop two instrumented spacecraft on the Martian surface in 1974.

IN 10 YEARS

Dr. John E. Naugle, associate NASA administrator for space science and applications, ventured in a recent talk to speculate about what the U.S. space program would be like 10 years hence in 1979.

We will have, Naugle said, men living more or less permanently on the moon, much as they are living in the antarctic today.

We will be placing the first large permanent astronomical observatory in space. Astronomers all over the world will take part in planning its work.

We will have made four to six instrument landings on Mars and will know whether life exists there. If we find it doesn't we will consider plans to seed Mars with earthly organisms to learn whether it is possible to transplant life from one planet to another.

We will have taken close-up photos of the surface of little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun, and also of Venus, earth's enigmatic sister planet.

We will be able to communicate, thanks to satellites, between any two points on the globe and to watch television programs originating anywhere on earth.

THIS WEEK In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The pronounced lull in the Vietnam War has entered its third week, prompting speculation by Allied commanders about the real meaning of the diminished fighting. Are the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong reducing contact with American and South Vietnamese forces in a purposeful effort to hasten peace, or are they merely preparing for another wave of increased fighting?

The clearest indication of the lull was the new casualty figures. In the week ending last Saturday, 153 American soldiers died in military action, the lowest weekly total since the second week in January. South Vietnamese and Communist casualties also dropped to new lows.

The first 814 soldiers of the 25,000 to be pulled out of South Vietnam arrived on the West Coast.

In Paris, the peace negotiators clung to their previously stated positions. Chief North Vietnamese negotiator Xuan Thuy said President Richard M. Nixon does not really desire peace in Vietnam and has followed the policies of former President Lyndon B. Johnson. U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge replied that no negotiated settlement of the war is possible until North Vietnam and the Viet Cong modify their demand for a complete withdrawal of American troops.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

Cape Kennedy: The countdown began on schedule for the Apollo 11 flight to the moon. Space agency officials carefully checked the astronauts so they will know if the men undergo any changes or contaminations from their walk on the moon's surface.

Cairo: Egyptian soldiers crossed the Suez Canal twice to raid Israeli-held positions and artillery exchanges continued, a tense situation that prompted United Nations Secretary General U Thant to warn that "open warfare has been resumed" throughout the cease-fire area. Israel said its jets shot down seven Syrian MIG21s in a spectacular air battle.

Moscow: Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko called for friendlier relations with the United States and showed interest in a summit conference with President Nixon.

Behind The News

THE SYMINGTONS DIFFERENT TYPES

Father, Son Go Their Separate Ways In Busy Capitol Hill Duties

By WILLIAM CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stuart Symington, 68, has an unusual kind of common bond with his son, James, 41.

Both men serve in the U.S. Congress. The father is senior senator from Missouri. The son is a freshman congressman from Missouri. Both are Democrats.

Beyond these similarities, the two congressional Symingtons are quite different types of men, and they reached their present positions through sharply divergent career paths.

ONE OTHER

There is only one other father-son combination in Congress—the widely publicized team of Sen. Barry Gdolwater, R-Ariz., and Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif.

Unlike the Goldwaters, who are very chummy, the Symingtons tend to go their separate ways in Washington.

They see each other less frequently than one might think. They talk now and then about their work and occasionally make joint announcements of things affecting their Missouri constituencies.

But they also can disagree—as they did early in this congressional session on the "reluctant elector" controversy.

James Symington contended a presidential elector should be free to vote his own convictions. Stuart Symington contended an elector has a moral obligation to vote for the presidential candidate to whom he was pledged.

DIFFERENT AREAS

Most of the time, they find themselves working on different problems so there's no occasion for agreement or disagreement.

Stuart Symington came to the Senate 17 years ago, after a distinguished career as a business executive and appointive government official.

After graduation from Yale, he went to work for the Emerson Manufacturing Co., in his home town of St. Louis, and rose rather quickly to its presidency. He was summoned to Washington in 1945 by his fellow-Missourian, President Harry S Truman, who named him chairman of the surplus property board. This was the first of a series of important government jobs for the elder Symington.

He was in succession head of the surplus property administration, assistant secretary of war, secretary of the Air Force, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

SENATE IN '52

Symington resigned from the RFC to return to business, but he had already contracted Potomac fever and decided to run for the Senate in 1952.

He won in a landslide on his first try and subsequently won reelection by even bigger margins in 1958 and 1964. He plans to run again next year.

The senator is a voracious reader of books and articles. A few years ago he took a speed-reading course so he could wade through books at a rate of more than 1,000 words a minute. He likes to write his own speeches, and even takes a hand in answering his mail. He puts in long days on Capitol Hill and nearly every night packs his briefcase with "homework" to be studied at his northwest Washington home.

In 1960, Symington was a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Although he lost out to John F. Kennedy, he has continued to be one of the most powerful Democrats in Congress.

He is the only senator who served on both the armed services and the foreign relations committees. He is also an ex-officio member of the appropriations committee, with a vote on matters affecting armed services and space.

James Symington was born Sept. 28, 1927, in Rochester, N.Y.

LAW DEGREE

After prep school at Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts, he enlisted in the Marines at the age of 17, just in time for the closing year of World War II. He came out a private first class and went to Yale and then on to Columbia for a law degree. He was an assistant city attorney in St. Louis, then was with the firm of Cobbs, Armstrong, Teasdale and Ross. After a two-year stint with the U.S. Foreign Service, he went with the Washington law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter.

President Kennedy made Symington deputy director of the Food for Peace program and in 1962, Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy named him an administrative assistant. Symington held that for a year, then returned to private law practice until appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson as chief of protocol in the State Depatrment in 1966.

On the first day of his new job, Symington hurried from the swearing-in ceremony to escort the Ambassador of Sudan to the White House. Once there Symington ushered the ambassador to a door, opened it, and discovered it was a White House closet.

ELECTED IN FALL

Last fall, he won election to the House from Missouri's second district.

The younger Symington feels his experience as chief of protocol has been helpful to him as a congressman.

"Congress has its own protocol," he said in an interview.

"Having worked in protocol, I've learned how to make diplomatic suggestions. Each congressman judges the work of his fellows by taking into consideration the total past experience.

MEET THE SYMINGTONS — Sen. Stuart Symington, 68, and his son, Rep. James Symington, 41, both Democrats from Missouri, chat on the steps of the Capitol. There is only one other father-son combination in Congress—the Goldwaters. (UPI Telephoto)

Winnie Judd Extradition Delayed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Arizona sent California extradition papers in hopes of getting 1931 trunk murderer Winnie Ruth Judd back. Instead, Arizona got its papers back.

Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday temporarily rejected the Arizona request for Mrs. Judd, 65, now in a Martinez jail after she was recaptured recently in Danville. She had escaped seven years ago from an Arizona mental institution.

In 1931, she murdered her two female roommates, jammed their dismembered bodies into trunks, and shipped them to Los Angeles. Blood was seen dripping from the trunks and Mrs. Judd was arrested when she tried to claim them.

Mrs. Judd's attorney said he had been told Arizona's papers were returned because they were incomplete.

Pair Cleared By Jury In Pot Sale Case

A Marin Superior Court yesterday chose the stories of two young men on trial for drug sale and their friends over the testimony of narcotics agents.

Acquitted on a charge of marijuana sale were Edwin Michael Richmond, 20, and Steven Riall Moore, 21, both of Corte Madera.

A narcotics agent had identified them as the men who sold him a kilo of marijuana at a house in Woodacre where they were then living. Richmond and Moore, however, maintained they were not in the house the evening of Sept. 27, 1968.

Their stand was backed up by two friends who also testified in the courtroom of Joseph G. Wilson that Richmond and Moore had gone with two girls to the Avalon in San Francisco that night.

When they returned home, they were arrested, they said.

Law officers said, however, that the pair was arrested when they attempted to flee through the back door of the house.

The young men were defended by San Francisco attorney Terrence Hallinan.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas, who had accompanied officers the night of the arrest in Woodacre, prosecuted the case.

Bomb Scare Empties Fairfax Theater

The Fairfax Theater was emptied of about 300 film viewers last night when an anonymous caller said a bomb was due to explode at about 10 p.m., a fire department spokesman reported today.

He said firemen searched the building without finding any trace of a bomb.

Terra Linda Pets Win For Children

The dogs of Anne Little and Edward Little were first place winners yesterday at a youth pet show at the Terra Linda Recreation Center.

Ann Little's dog, Sam Sr., was adjudged best big dog at the show, while Ginger, belonging to Edward Little, was selected as the best small dog.

Other owners of winning pets were Barbara Blue, Mary Buckley, Alan Boyce, Pat Townsley, Joan Silva, Jim Miller, Jessica Middleman, Roxanne Iacovetti and Mark Boyce.

Hayward GI Convicted Of Desertion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pvt. Buddy J. Shaw, of Hayward, was convicted yesterday of desertion and sentenced to nine months at hard labor.

Shaw, 18, one of 27 soldiers charged with mutiny at the Presidio stockade last October, also was given a bad conduct discharge for leaving his work detail for three days last Nov. 2.

In the Presidio mutiny case he had received a dishonorable discharge and 15 months stockade time.

The sentences of both cases, which are unrelated, are subject to automatic review.

In Shaw's desertion trial, which lasted two days, his father, an invalid with emphysema and a heart condition, testified that his son had left the Presidio stockade last November to go home and help the family. His mother runs a coffee shop in Hayward.

Regents Vote New Lecture Regulations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— The University of California has eliminated its ban on guest lecturers adopted last fall when Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver was hired as a speaker in an experimental course on the Berkeley campus.

Gov. Ronald Reagan and almost all other U. C. regents voted for the provision yesterday. The change, suggested by U. C. President Charles J. Fitch, set up a new policy on guest lecturers, holding department chairmen accountable for their appointment.

Hitch said his new proposal still was "the strictest regulation on guest lecturers of any university in the United States."

On other issues, regents discussed in private the hiring of a controversial professor at U.C. Santa Barbara, took another step toward building students housing on Berkeley's disputed "people's park" land by allocating $130,000 for plans and gave Berkeley Chancellor Roger W. Heyns a three-months paid vacation.

Regents also voted unanimously for stricter campus regulation of experimental courses at Berkeley and UCLA.

Lawmakers Seek Viet Veterans' College Aid

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An effort has been started in the Assembly to get the University of California and state colleges to admit Vietnam veterans who meet entrance requirements.

Assemblyman Robert G. Beverly, R-Manhattan Beach, yesterday introduced a resolution asking the university and the colleges to admit veterans they feel "show promise, motivation and ability to complete a program of higher education."

Beverly said a study showed only a small percentage of Vietnam veterans are entering colleges compared with the large numbers of World War II and Korean War veterans who enrolled.

He said many of these failed to meet entrance requirements but were admitted under a "veteran special admission" category that was eliminated in the 1960 Donohoe Higher Education Act.

"Because of the apparent lack of emphasis today on the education of our returning veterans, many are moving into the business sector of our communities untrained for the jobs which are available," Beverly said.

Mill Valley Man Injures Shoulder

Russell Rafael Otton, 47, of 6 Plymouth Circle, Mill Valley, was treated yesterday for a left shoulder injury at Marin General Hospital following a motorcycle accident at 8 p.m. on Shoreline Highway near Loring Avenue in Tamalpais Valley.

Further details of the accident were unavailable today, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Restaurant On Agenda Again

The Mill Valley Architectural Advisory Committee will review a new master plan for a controversial Taco Bell restaurant at 497 Miller Avenue at its 8 p.m. meeting Tuesday in the board room of the Mill Valley Library.

The committee, planning commission and city council have rejected earlier plans for the take-out restaurant.

The architectural advisory panel also will consider plans for the Gulf Oil station at East Blithedale Avenue and Camino Alto and revised landscape plans for entryways into Enchanted Knolls.

Prefabricated Housing Gets Boost In Bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A bill to encourage mass production of prefabricated dwelling units, thus reducing housing housing costs, has moved to the Senate.

The measure by Assemblyman Pete Wilson, R-San Diego, approved 58-0 yesterday by the Assembly, would set up statewide standards for factory-built units and prevent local jurisdictions from setting up hundreds of differing regulations.

Wilson said manufacturers are "ready and willing but unable to engage in volume production because of the lack of uniformity of code requirements."

He said his plan will cut labor costs and produce savings in interim financing, building and professional fees and vandalism at conventional construction sites. And he said that as costs are cut so is the need for government subsidies for publicly assisted housing.

Many smart London shops price their wares in guineas, although the gold guinea, equivalent to one pound and one shilling, was last minted in 1813 and has vanished from circulation.

Federal Aide Denies Evidence On DDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture says it has no evidence DDT is unsafe even though the department temporarily has banned use of the pesticide in its own operations.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., charged earlier this week that the department is unwilling to permanently end all use of the chemical because "the Department of Agriculture is locked in with the agricultural interests who use DDT."

But Dr. George W. Irving, administrator of the agricultural research service, says the department has found nothing to warrant canceling registration of DDT for interstate shipment under current regulations.

"To do that, we would have to find that DDT is either ineffective or unsafe," Irving said in an interview. "We have no evidence that it is either."

The department has ordered a halt to use of nine persistent pesticides—including DDT—in government pest control programs pending completion of a study in early August.

The temporary USDA ban affects only a small percentage of pest control programs involving use of DDT and the eight other persistent, long-lasting pesticides, Irving said.

Concern over DDT's effects has been growing since early this year when the federal Food and Drug Administration seized 21,000 pounds of Great Lakes salmon found to contain DDT residues.

Irving said the effects on fish and wildlife do not enter into his agency's consideration of whether or not to register pesticides for interstate shipment, sale and use.

"There is nothing in our law which is explicit on that," Irving said. "That would be an extension of our authority that our lawyers aren't willing to grant us yet."

Suspect Held In Burglary

James Nichol Shyrock, 20, of 208 Morningside Drive, was booked into Marin County Jail early today on suspicion of burglary after he was arrested inside a Larkspur firm.

Details of the burglary were not available from Larkspur police today.

Shyrock was held in lieu of $6,250 bail for arraignment in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

BECAUSE COLIN BEATTY is so often on the road with the Ice Follies as one if its skating stars, he and his family especially cherish the hours they are able to spend together in their San Rafael home. He holds youngest son Andrew, 5. Oldest son Christopher, 9, is in the center, and wife Molly, herself a former professional skater, is on the right.

Skating Star Colin Beatty Picks Marin

Ice Follies Favorite And Family Like San Rafael

After 18 peripatetic years of touring the United States, Canada and Europe as ice skating stars, Colin and Molly Beatty are doubly happy to have a permanent "home base" at 289 Ellen Drive, San Rafael.

The decision to establish a home was reached four years ago when Mrs. Beatty also decided to retire from skating to the life of a housewife.

The couple, as members of the famed Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies company, had long been accustomed to spending their summers in the Bay Area. It was natural, therefore, that they should decide to locate in Northern California.

BUT WHY San Rafael in particular?

Answers Beatty: "The entire Bay Area is beautiful, but San Rafael appealed to us especially because of its ideal weather."

Then he smiles: "Since both Molly and I were born and reared in England with its dreadful climate, I guess it is to be expected that we would be weather-conscious."

HE ADDS: "Also there was San Rafael's easy accessibility to such places as Lake Tahoe and Lake Berryessa, as well as San Francisco. And the town just seemed like home to us, with all of the people so very nice."

So now Molly Beatty and two sons, Christopher, 9, and Andrew, 5, are year-around San Rafael residents, joined by Colin when he is not on the road with the Ice Follies in its 27-cities-a-year touring schedule.

Says Mrs. Beatty: "I thought retiring meant to take it easier. But I have never worked so hard in my life as I have as a housewife and mother."

WITH COLIN away so much of the time, she is also the gardener in the family. The profusion of blooming plants and shrubs and the lush green lawn attest to her English "green thumb."

Additions to and decorating of the house have also commanded much of her attention.

And while she is involved now in some community work, she is awaiting the enrollment of younger son Andrew in school in the fall before she plunges into greater participation in such activities.

THE BEATTYS were skating in Germany as a team when they were signed for a six-week engagement in Chicago that first brought them to America. That performance run stretched into 11 months, and they were spotted by Ice Follies talent scouts. Soon they were an integral part of that colorful show.

Now Colin is best known to Ice Follies audiences as a peg-legged but nevertheless swashbuckling pirate, performing a comedy routine with partners Bob Leduc and Bill Jack, both also San Rafael residents.

He appears as well in a num-

BEFORE MAKING skating his profession, Beatty was a professional soccer and ice hockey player and remains an avid fan of both sports.

However, he says: "While soccer and hockey are great, skating has always been my first love. It is wonderful entertainment as well as a most enjoyable sport.

"For the skater, there is the constant challenge of keeping in top form. Even with years of experience, one must practice and practice very day." At 43, he remains a trim five-foot-eight inch 145-pounds.

HE DESCRIBES the Ice Follies company as "very much like a large family, most congenial, all fun-loving. The skaters enjoy what they are doing, and I am sure the audiences can feel that."

The best part of the extensive travel schedule, he feels, is the opportunity to make friends in so many cities.

But right now the Ice Follies is on what is for Beatty the best part of its itinerary. A one-week run at the Oakland Coliseum ends tomorrow, and then the company will be performing Wednesday through Aug. 31 at Winterland in San Francisco.

IT IS A favorite time with Beatty because the short commute to Oakland and to San Francisco enables him to live at home in San Rafael and to spend considerable time with his family.

Do the boys skate?

"Yes," answers Colin. But he adds that they will make their own choices of careers.

Andrew, he adds, seems to be a budding young showman who may well follow in his father's footsteps, or rather skate patterns.

THE BEATTY family enjoys skating together. And while Colin is on tour, Molly continues to work with the boys on their skating.

In Marin County, the Beattys note, they have joined a growing colony of show people who maintain either summer or year-around homes in San Rafael, Tiburon, Sausalito, Mill Valley and other communities.

Along with the fine weather and the congenial atmosphere, Beatty believes the opportunities for outdoor activities such as boating, fishing and swimming are prime attractions for these people.

"When you are on the road and working hard for so much of the time, you look forward to breaks in which you can get outdoors and do something different," he explains.

BEATTY SAYS that after he has completed his skating career he and his family will remain in San Rafael.

"We will open a restaurant," he says. "We are in Marin to stay."

"Why Doesn't My Husband's Sports Shirt Retain Its Colors?"

Continual launderings will cause colors in sports shirts to loose their glamour long before the shirt has out-lived its usefulness. When a man has a sports shirt he likes, he wears it and wears it on all occasions, but its brightness is due to fade from repeated launderings.

Our suggestion will save you a lot of labor in the hot, humid summertime and preserve the colors your husband enjoys in his sport shirts. Send them to your professional drycleaner. They'll come back with clear colors and a crisp appearance. They'll hold their press longer and shed soil better. You'll be a happier housewife, too. Try it.

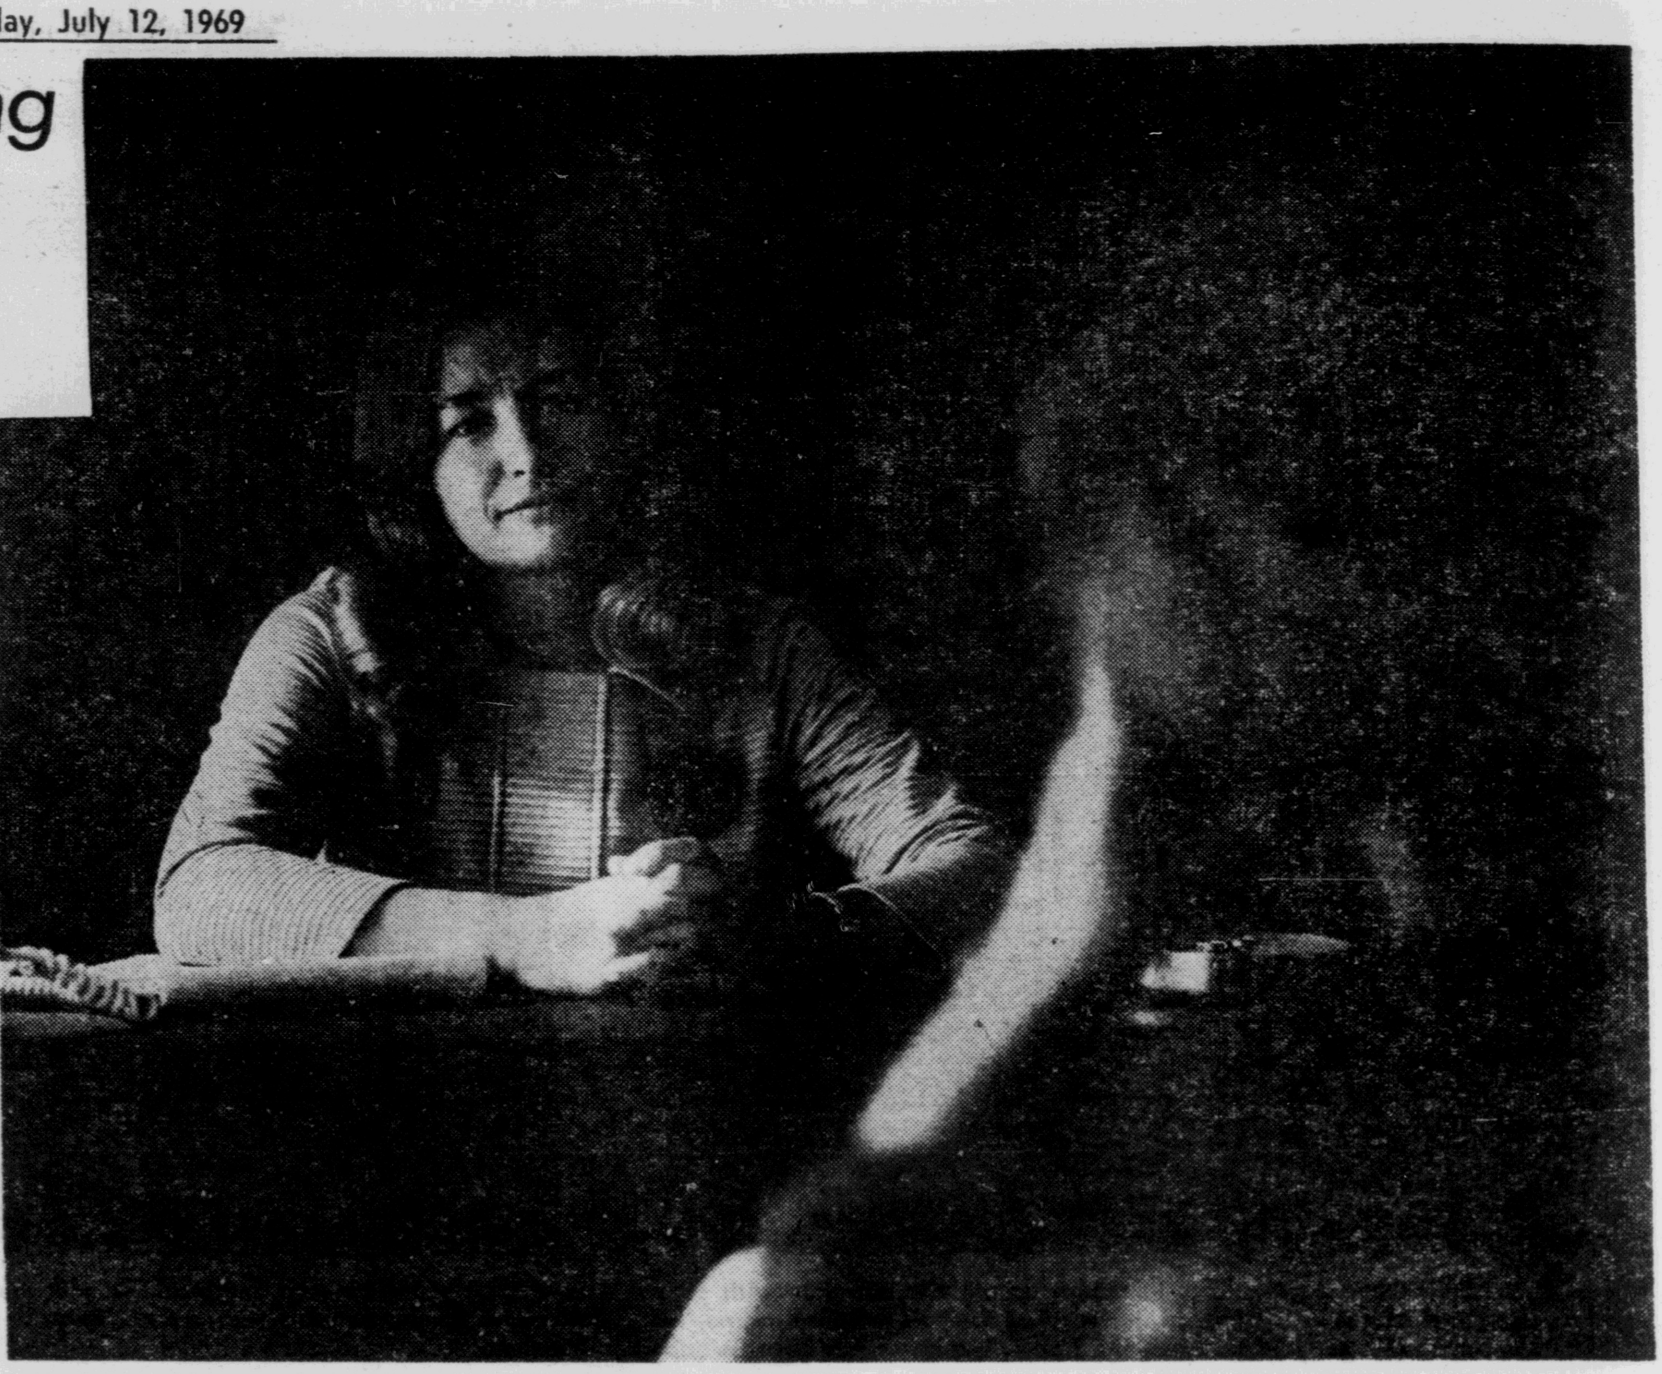
The Rewarding Career Of Helen Rossini

She Enjoys Health Center Challenges



FACING THE CAMERA and a mentally disturbed patient, Helen Rossini listens pleasantly and with interest to the problems of the young woman. Then she will offer her professional counsel. The scene is the Pacific Heights Home Health Center in San Francisco, where Mrs. Rossini, a Mill Valley resident, is a staff member. (Photos by Vano-Wells Pragliano Photography)

Eleven years ago when she graduated from the University of California, Helen Rossini, who lives at 161 Ellinor Avenue in Mill Valley, could not make up her mind whether to get her masters degree in journalism or social work.

Today, watching her at work at Pacific Heights Home Health Center, a rehabilitation facility located at 2246 Lombard Street, San Francisco, it's crystal clear she made a rewarding choice.

Whether it's group therapy with middle-aged women, most of whom live alone on painfully inadequate budgets and need to be constantly encouraged to reach out for contacts with the rest of the world, or the emphysema group, Helen's sense of drama, honesty and above all her concern for people is obvious.

NOT LONG AGO during a routine staff meeting it was brought out that many patients with emphysema (a disease which impairs the ability to breathe), worried constantly about dying suddenly, undergo personality changes and occasionally resist treatment.

In addition, although smoking is a contributory factor in the disease, the majority had not given up cigarettes. Not that they hadn't tried. One had gone to a smoke withdrawal clinic, without success; another had spent several weeks in a sanitarium trying to break the habit.

To lessen anxiety and to fight cigarette addiction, Helen suggested group therapy.

ALL THESE patients were men in their 50s who, for the most part, had retired early because of the debilitating effects of the disease. (The U.S. Public Health Service estimates that emphysema disables one out of every 10 wage-earners over 45.) Among the group was a blind merchant seaman, a professional ball player, a lawyer, a psychologist, a teacher, a few laborers and several white collar workers, all with tremendously different backgrounds.

The initial meeting started with a discussion of the purpose of the group and topics which might be helpful.

"Why go through all this hanky-panky?" one of the men growled. "We'll probably talk about nothing but sex. Sex is all psychiatrists ever talk about."

HELEN TURNED to him, "And what would you answer if I asked how your sex life was?"

He retired in confusion. The meeting was off to a good start.

Helen requested another patient — a chain-smoker — to sit in a chair and pretend a cigarette was sitting in the vacant place by his side. He was instructed to act out the part of both human and cigarette, trying to break off a relationship.

As the cigarette he asked, "Why the devil do you continue to smoke me, when you know you have emphysema and I make your condition worse?"

HIS ANSWERS, in varying forms, were: "You keep me from going completely crazy, from being committed to Napa when I'm so up-tight because I can't breathe. You settle my nerves."

"I need you to relieve the stress and strain of living when I'm too sick to do anything I really enjoy."

After a few minutes Helen Rossini took the part of the cigarette, obviously enjoying her role.

"YOU KNOW you're my slave?" she asked, tossing her blonde head.

He grinned and nodded.

"Don't you think you're a very weak man to let me dominate you like this?"

He agreed, but quickly added the comfort he received from her more than made up for any health hazard. When the meeting ended, the first patient paused near Helen on the way out.

"YOU ASKED about my sex live . . ."

"No, I didn't," she corrected gently. "I asked what you would do if I inquired about your sex life."

At the next staff meeting she reported that most of the emphysema group meeting had revolved around the issue of Mr. T's smoking: She had him do a psycho-drama scene which revealed how difficult it would be for him to quit, adding that he really sees the cigarettes as holding him together, controlling his anxiety and anger.

SOME PATIENTS require weeks of individual consultation before graduating to a group. An example is the 40-year-old widow referred to Pacific Heights Home Health Center for chronic depression.

Her main concern was her 16-year-old daughter who she said was "bright as a silver dollar, and the spitting image of her dad." In order to assure the girl of a college education the widow had two jobs: housecleaning in the daytime, baby sitting at night. Bronchitis coupled with arthritis was making it increasingly difficult and unwise for her to carry this heavy schedule but despite doctors orders she refused to slow down.

At the start of the second month's treatment she announced that her daughter was pregnant. Weeping freely she said she couldn't accept the fact that the girl was overjoyed by the idea of motherhood, although not married, and had no thought other than to keep the infant.

"I DON'T SAY mean things, but I think them."

When questioned about the "mean things" she revealed that she felt the daughter had become pregnant deliberately in order to secure her independence. Also that she wanted to call the mother of the prospective father, who was refusing to allow the couple to marry because the boy was still in high school. The daughter threatened to leave home if the mother made the call, so although she felt she should "arrange a marriage for my little girl" she hesitated in doing so. All this added to her already overburdened mental condition.

THE PROBLEM OF a Pacific Heights Home Health Center patient who refuses to use the hand bar is discussed by Helen Rossini with Star Carpenter, physical therapist at the center and a Tiburon resident.

At this time the patient was referred to group therapy. After sitting quietly for a few moments she suddenly began talking about her daughter. This led to a tremendously moving psycho-drama between her and another patient, a 20-year-old divorcee.

THE YOUNGER woman, who was married two months before the birth of her child, expressed hostile feelings toward "mother" as well as a poignant longing to be accepted. The two women wept copiously and all kinds of stifled emotions were evidenced, both in the actors and those who watched.

"What do you want from me?" the widow finally cried. "I haven't scolded you. . . . I haven't thrown you out of the house."

"Neither have you tried to understand why I want to keep my baby," the "mother" shouted. "You act as though nothing happened, as though if we don't talk about my baby it won't come. You haven't helped me. You haven't loved me."

"BUT I WILL honey, I will."

After the drama the patient began to accept her unborn grandchild and was, in fact, beginning to take pleasure in the idea of being a grandmother. She also convinced herself the daughter didn't really want to marry, which relieved her of the burden of trying to arrange a marriage.

Exploring anxieties, both hidden and exposed, of troubled people is old hat to Helen Rossini. After graduating from the University of California, she worked for 18 months in the psychiatric ward of New York's Bellevue Hospital. Then, as she puts it, "I became nostalgic for the warmth of California and accepted a post as psychiatric social worker in the children's ward of Napa State Hospital."

SHE STAYED in what she calls "the world's most challenging, rewarding — and frustrating — job" for several years. So many of the youngsters, particularly those who were there because of the weaknesses of their elders, drinking or emotional parents, quickly responded to treatment. Lack of staff and foster homes for the children was a constant source of frustration.

In 1963 Helen joined the staff of the San Francisco Day Treatment Center, a five-year pilot program in mental health funded by the federal government. The majority of patients were either mentally or emotionally disturbed young people in their early 20s.

"Working with them was a tremendous experience and I learned a great deal," Helen says in a nostalgic mood. "Today's college students are braver and more honest than they were in my time, when one's image was so important.

"THEY'RE FAR more open to their emotions, but realistic, too. They look at us with clear, fresh eyes, and see how few adults are truly happy, merely dragging their way through life with neither purpose nor enjoyment. They've watched their parents struggle through loveless, unhappy marriages; their fathers commute day after day to jobs they hate. They are not willing to accept our way of life, or 'compromise,' a word my generation believed was synonomous with maturity.

"They are demanding change; not always going about it in the right way, and occasionally letting enthusiasm erupt into violence. But they're getting results."

Last summer, when the San Francisco Day Treatment Center closed, Helen was asked to join the mental health staff at Pacific Heights Home Health Center, a rehabilitation facility that was about to open at 2246 Lombard Street, San Francisco. In addition to the mental health program the center offered speech, recreational, physical and occupational therapy, with both podiatric and respiratory clinics.

THE CENTER, which serves handicapped people in San Francisco, Marin and San Mateo counties, is constantly shaping and reshaping programs to fit the needs of the community.

With her combined duties, there are days when Helen Rossini especially looks forward to 5 o'clock when she returns to her house on the hill, to husband, Oscar, and what she laughingly refers to as her "demolition team," their going-on-3-years-old twin sons.

Tow-headed Alejandro is a sturdy duplication of his mother. Miguel is dark, a junior edition of his father whom Helen met at the International House while both were students at the University of California. They dated off and on for 11 years and were married in September, 1963.

AS SHE RUSHED out of the office a few months ago Helen Rossini stopped at the desk of the secretary.

"You know, I never realized how quickly children talked, once they began. A few weeks ago my boys scarcely said a word. Now they put sentences together. Last Sunday I told them if they went out on the veranda and were good boys until I finished the cake I was baking, I'd let them lick the frosting bowl. Halfway to the door Miguel asked, 'What's good, Mommy?' "

Helen Rossini looked over the typewriter at the secretary. "How could I answer that? I couldn't say being good is doing what Mommy says or . . ."

And shaking her head she went to her car and headed down Lombard Street toward the bridge and home.

Lyrics By Alex Herrmann

Talented 19-Year-Old Creates A New Musical

By JOAN LUBAMERSKY
and MARSHA MESSER

Alex Herrmann got his first taste of creative writing as an 8-year-old, pounding away at the keys of a small typewriter in the rear of a Volkswagen bus that was carrying him around Europe.

Alex explains: "My older brother, Ted, and I were touring Europe with our parents (Mr. and Mrs. Jiri Herrmann) in a Volkswagen. The monotony of travel was driving us crackers, so we began using the portable typewriter to keep a journal of our trip.

"The results were our own children's travel guide to Europe, plus a scrapbook in which we pasted the short stories we had written while on the move."

Another trip, this time to Barbados, afforded the Herrmann brothers another opportunity to write.

THEY BEGAN writing, editing and publishing The Teddy News which they distributed to other residents of the Caribbean resort where the Herrmanns were staying.

"Of course," says Alex, "Ted, being a year older, was the editor-in-chief and star reporter. He let me write stories about the tide rising, and also permitted me to deliver the papers to all the resort rooms — at 5 o'clock in the morning."

Now 19, Alex says: "I really think I began writing seriously because of that sibling rivalry. Ted was always better. Everyone thought he was so talented, and I just wanted to show them that I could do just as well."

THE LATEST product of this long-lasting creative surge will be seen starting next Thursday on the stage of the Fine Arts Theater at the College of Marin, Kentfield, when the Young Actor's Company begins a run of performances of his musical play, "The Unconventionals."

It can be seen Thursday through Saturday of next weekend, and then again Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of the following two weekends, with an 8:30 o'clock curtain-time.

Herrmann wrote the book as well as the lyrics for the songs, and he will also be appearing on stage.

"FOR MARIN, this may be a first. I doubt if ever before has there been a play produced here that was written, directed, choreographed and performed entirely by people under 25," he says.

And while the youthful company works without remuneration, Herrmann promises a polished, interesting production. "We think we have the elements of success," he says, "with a good script, an excellent director and a talented cast."

Even though he is still a teen-ager, "The Unconventionals" is not Alex Herrmann's first experience at writing a musical. A year ago he put together "For Lack of a Better Name," which was presented at Redwood High School in the spring.

"THAT I wrote backstage while I was appearing in the College of Marin's production of 'Billy Budd'," he says. "Since I was only on stage for about five minutes, I had plenty of time to write.

"The script and lyrics were my own. The music was borrowed from Rodgers, Hammerstein, Lerner and Loewe."

Herrmann will also be a member of the cast for "The Unconventionals."

Like his writing, his acting goes well back into his childhood.

HE REMEMBERS being cast as an eighth grader for a role in "Twelfth Night."

"Then," he says, "a week before the opening I went into a coma, and it was found I had diabetes. It came as quite a blow to learn that I had been replaced in the play by a girl."

Alex, born in San Rafael, lived in San Francisco for the first 11 years of his life, then returned to Marin County in 1961, attending Adaline E. Kent School and Redwood High School.

THROUGHOUT his high school years, he was active with the Young Actor's Company which provided him with the opportunity to play such diverse roles as an eagle, the President of the United States, and Bob Dylan singing a Coca-Cola commercial.

"The YAC has always been my first love," he says. "It is unique in that it gives us a chance to act, to sing and to write our own material. We learn all the disciplines of the theater — the quick changes, the comedy timing, and how to react when a skit bombs, as they do occasionally.

"Experience in the company has helped several of its members to go further in show business."

AND HE cites Dennis Gribbon, now playing Boy in "The Fantasticks" at the Ghirardelli Square Theater in San Francisco.

Along with valuable experience, the YAC has also provided some ordeals, young Herrmann admits.

"I remember one time," he says, "when, because of a wrong exit and a too-short allowance of time for a costume change, I wound up playing a preacher, half-dressed and barefoot. I've always wondered if the audience noticed."

HE SAYS the original idea for "The Unconventionals" came from watching the 1968 political conventions. "Most of the first draft was written in front of the television set."

Originally, he continues, the play had strong political overtones. "But as it evolved in second and third drafts, it became more people-oriented with a theme depicting the human side of politics — the personal problems of the candidates, and all the scheming, wheeling and dealing that is part of the behind-the-scenes action."

Before Herrmann could complete his project, he first had to find a composer to do the music.

HIS METHOD was to post a sign on the University of Southern California music department's door reading: "Talented composer-musician needed — fame and fortune will be yours, if you call my number."

Herrmann and Nichol are both members of the Young Actor's Company which will be presenting the original musical. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

Herrmann, who will be a sophomore at USC next fall, says: "The response was not overwhelming. In fact, I got only one reply, and that applicant proved entirely unsatisfactory. So at that point I really didn't know what to do."

But a friend suggested that Herrmann contact fellow USC student Emmet Acterman.

"I DID SO," recalls Herrmann. "Emmet played a piece

he had just written for me, and I was so impressed that I asked him at once to work with me on the show."

Acterman accepted, and the team produced the needed songs, as well as working the composer's "audition number" entitled "What Can I Say?" into the show.

With script, lyrics and music all finished, Alex arranged for the use of the College of Marin Fine Arts Theater for the show.

"MY NEXT important problem was to find a director," he says. "I called everyone I knew who might be of assistance, and this proved rather expensive, since I was at USC and most of my friends were in the Bay Area."

But those contacts put him eventually in touch with James Watson of the American Conservatory Theater who agreed to lend his talent and experience to the project.

Watson, a former jazz ballet performer and teacher with classical training at the London Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, had appeared in such ACT productions as "In White America," "Room Service," "Grailles" and "Alice in Wonderland," and had also served as director and choreographer for a number of stage productions. He staged and wrote the music for "The Wonderment of Gleep."

"I'M ALWAYS intrigued by new material," he says.

And on Alex Herrmann's work, he comments: "The writing style is light, slightly reminiscent of the 1940s and 1950s. It has to be approached from that standpoint. Yet we have compromised with the time, adding projections, light shows and interesting twists.

"The play is not without a message. But we don't hit you over the head with it."

WATSON'S responsibilities have included those of choreographer as well as director.

While major roles are played by Roy Stevens from New Zealand and Marin residents Petra Chambers, Don Carroll, John Bamberger, Ray Azevedo and Trudi Ferguson, for director Watson there are no "bit players" and no "chorus." Instead, he refers to "star groups one and two."

Mary Rosenquist of Terra Linda is another major contributor to the undertaking with original orchestrations.

"THESE YOUNG people have put a tremendous amount of time, effort and devotion into the play," Watson says. "I truly hope the community responds."

As for Alex Herrmann, he is not yet certain as to the exact direction his future course will take.

"Sometimes I see myself as a lyricist, and sometimes as an actor," he says.

AND HE ADDS: "Certainly I will also go on to get my drama teaching credentials. For the theater is a tough profession, and it is always wise to have something to fall back on, should the going get really rough."

The important thing, Alex Herrmann indicates, is that whatever he winds up doing for a living and for his creative inner satisfaction, it must have some connection with the theater.

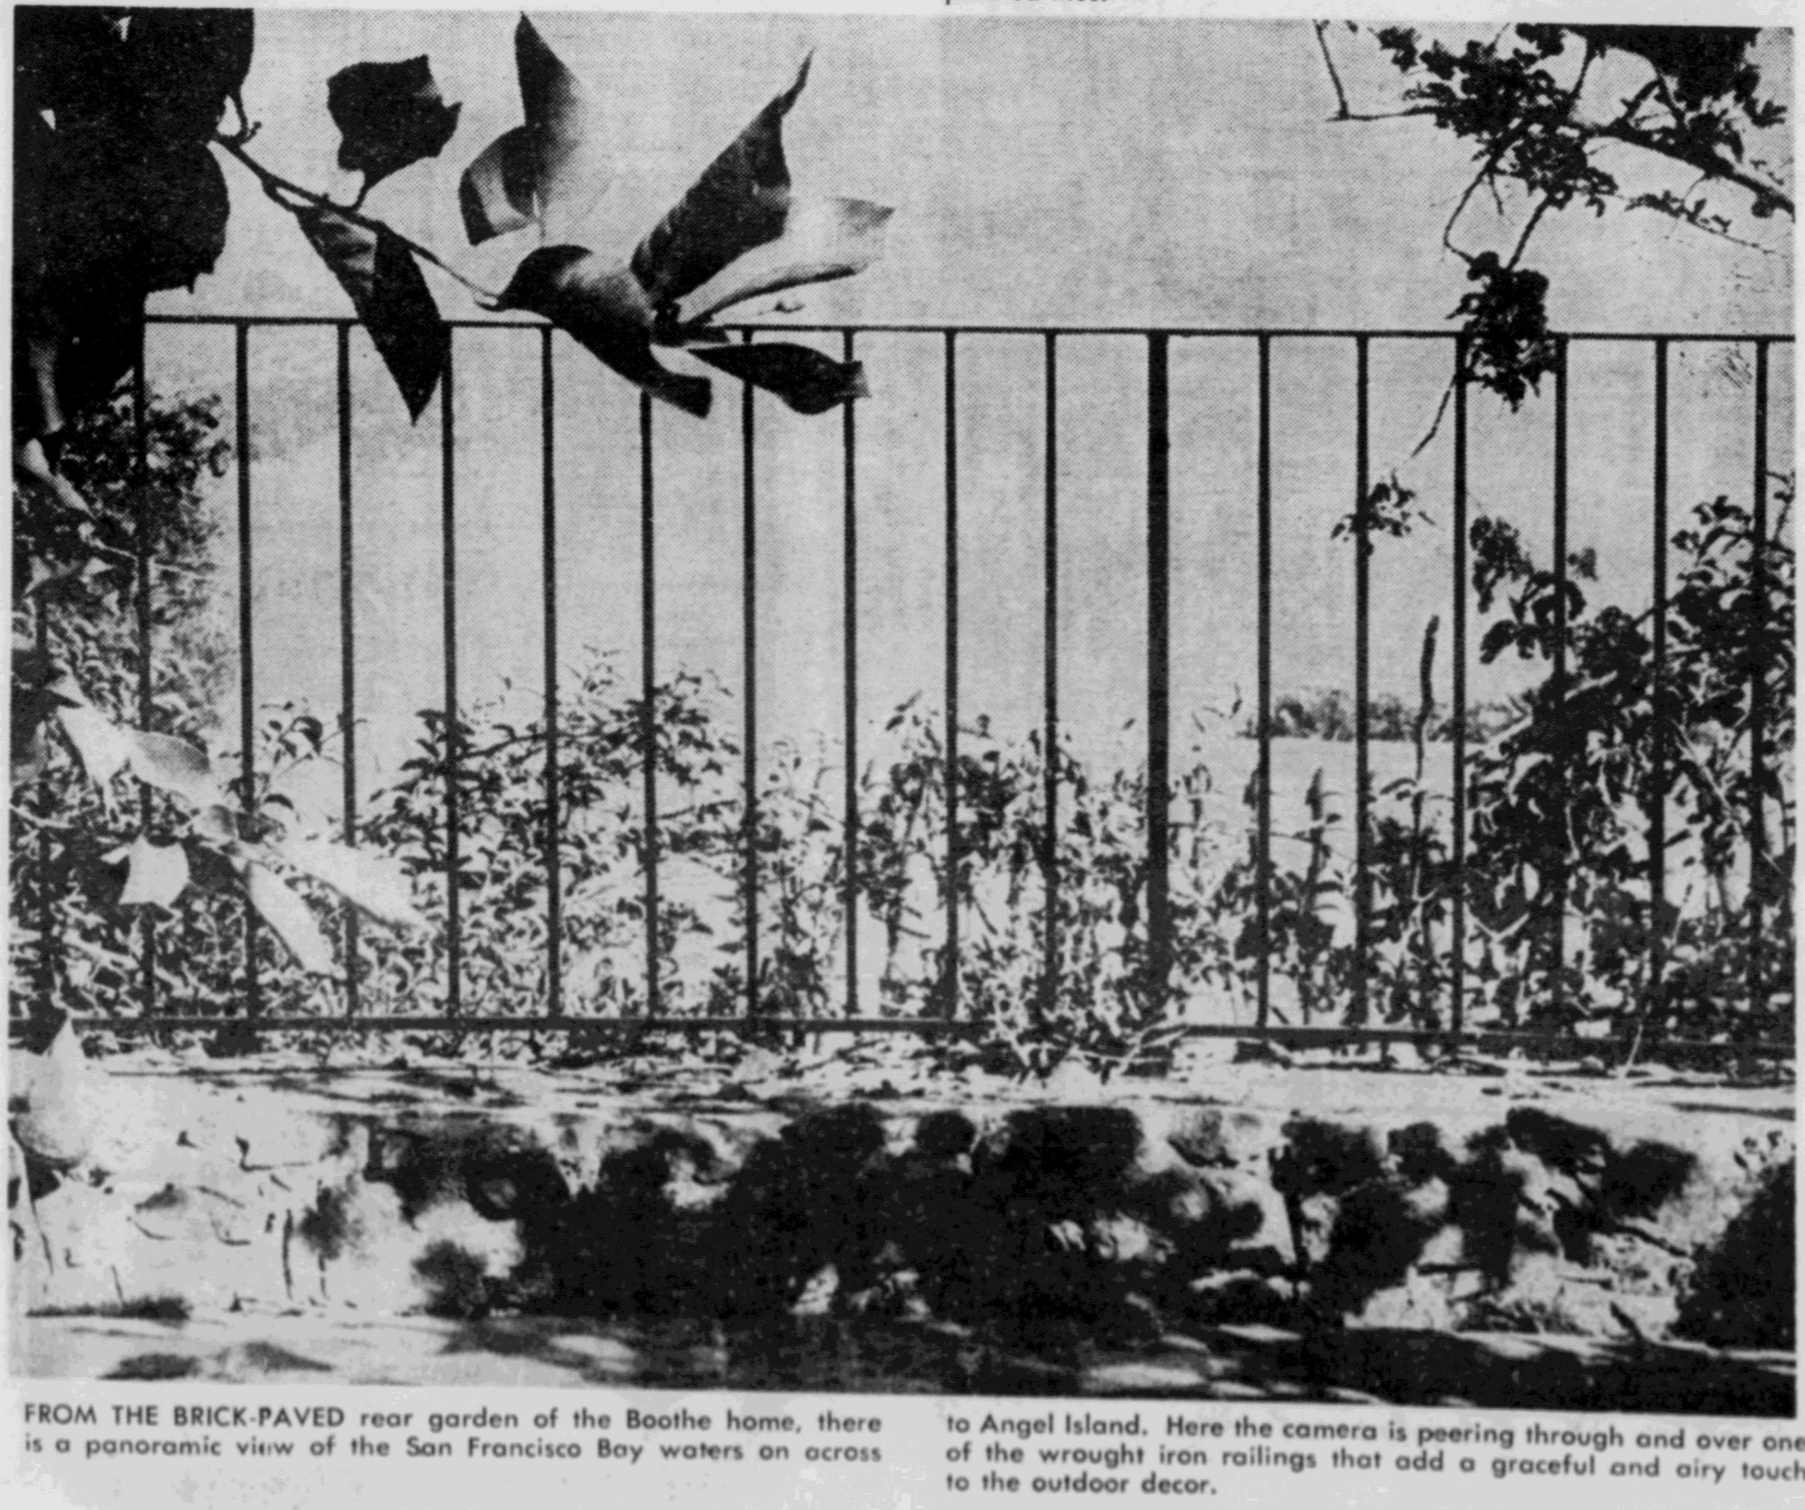
THE ENTRY GARDEN is but one of three gardens that grace the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Boothe of Sausalito. As designed by landscape architect Sidney M. Lewin, the entry court is a restful, colorful area, with its cheerful furniture, plantings and hand-painted tiles.



FROM THE BRICK-PAVED rear garden of the Boothe home, there is a panoramic view of the San Francisco Bay waters on across to Angel Island. Here the camera is peering through and over one of the wrought iron railings that add a graceful and airy touch to the outdoor decor.

The special pride of the Boothes and the landscaper is the fountain. The Boothes chose the tile design from a photograph in Lisbon while traveling in Portugal, and from that picture the tiles were individually hand-painted and fired. Six months later, the tiles arrived in San Francisco. Lewin had ready a facade to receive the tile, and had also designed the basin pool, completely lined with hand-painted tile.

The basin's brick cap matches the adjacent brick paving in the entry court.

THE REAR GARDEN of the D. P. Boothes was designed by landscape architect Sidney M. Lewin for both shade and sun enjoyment. There is an elegance, yet a comfortable gracious feeling, to the design and its execution.

Cruising Up The Inside Passage

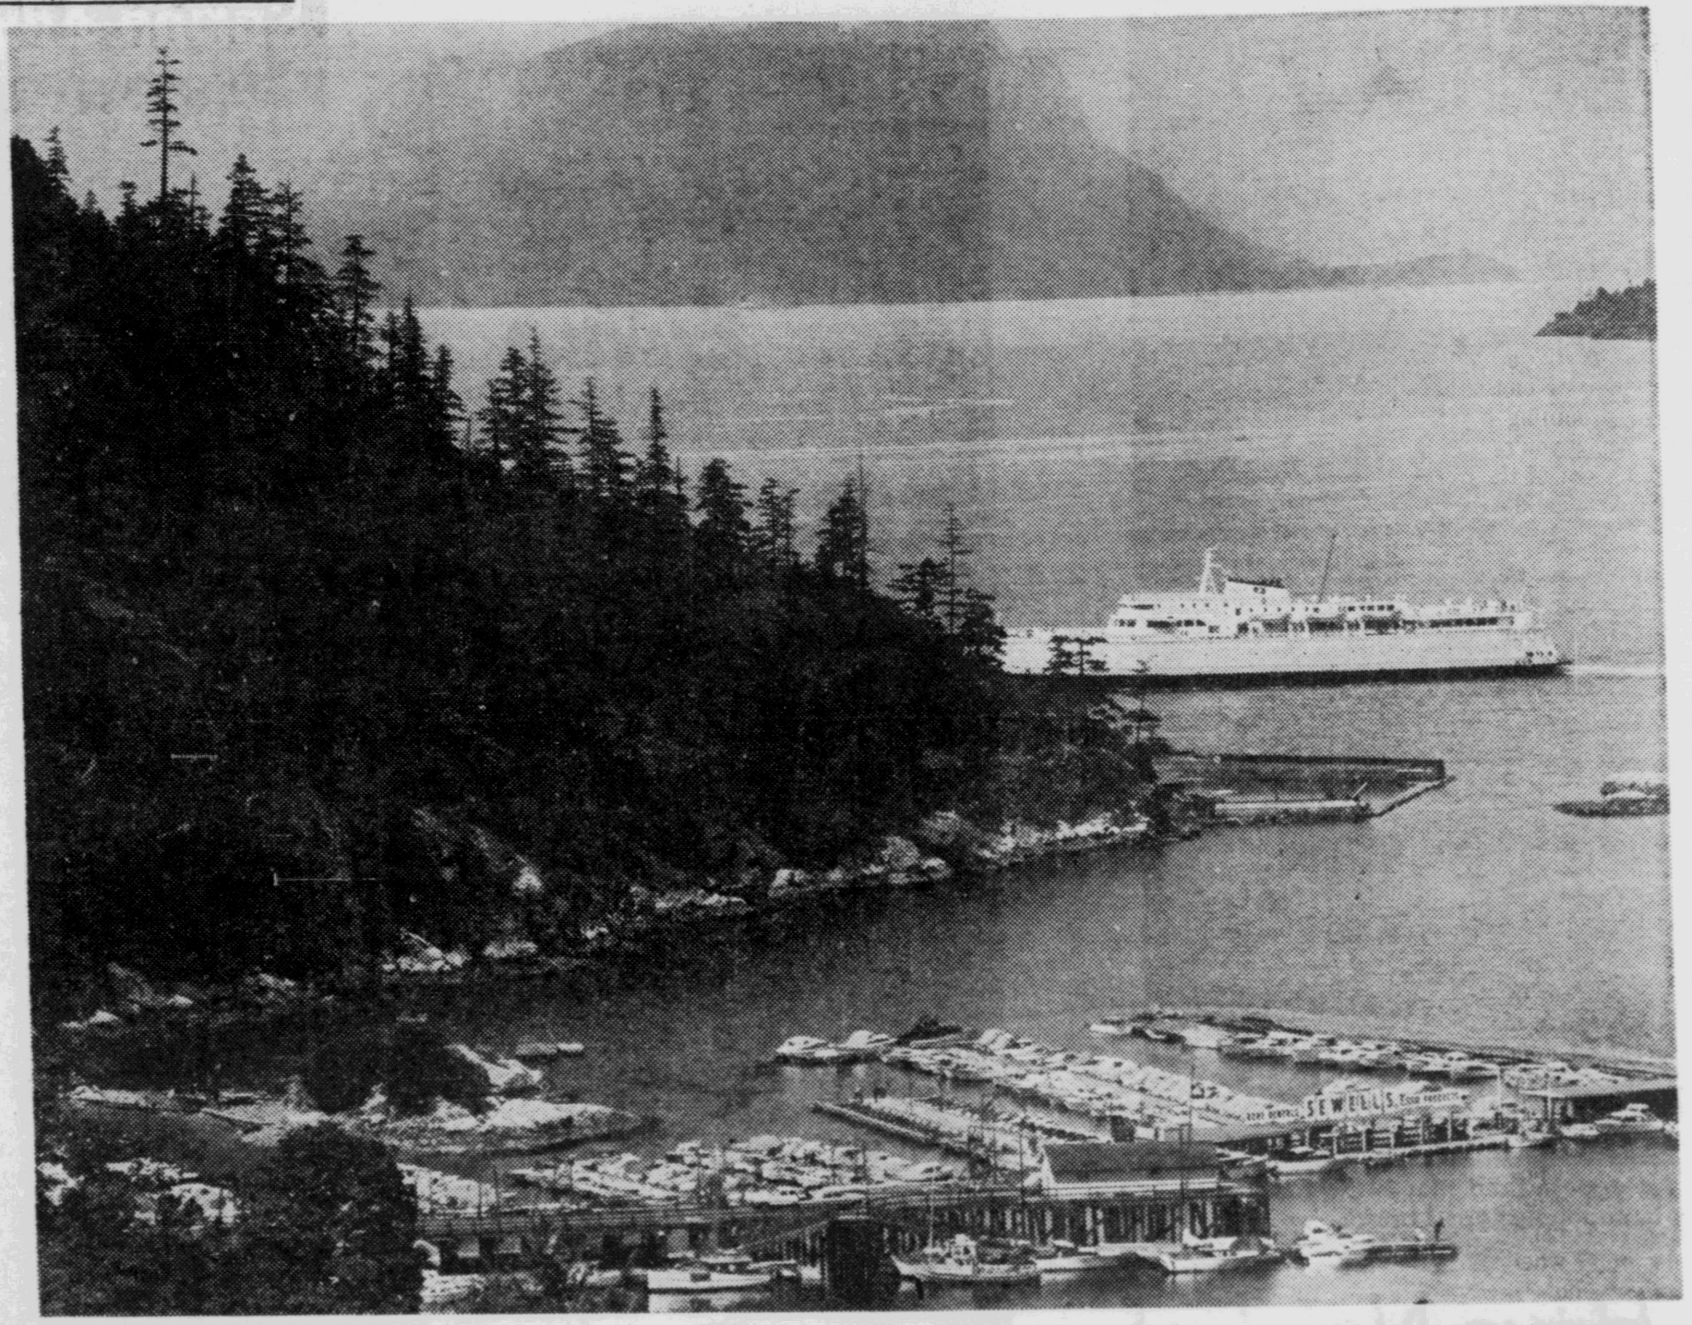
Takes You Back To The Pioneers

Marinites with a yearning for the tall, silent country of the pioneers can still find it in the Far West by heading north toward Canada's Pacific coastline and the Alaskan Panhandle.

They'll find there a region essentially unchanged since the days of the Indians, the explorers and the first sourdoughs.

And one of the best ways to see this lovely area is to cruise the "Inside Passage," past coastal fjords where mountains plunge into glassy still waters, and where just occasionally you spot a wisp of smoke rising from a log cabin and even less frequently an isolated fishing village or lumber camp.

Several shipping companies offer the trip, with some of the ocean liners departing from San Francisco, and others from Seattle. Most of the Canadian cruise ships sail from Vancouver, B.C.



A FERRY PULLS into Horseshoe Bay near Vancouver, B.C., departure point for many of the popular cruises up the Inside Passage along the Canadian coast into the Alaskan Panhandle. Passengers sail past fjords, forests and fishing villages, moving through waters as still as glass and along land untouched since pioneer days.

BOTH THE Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Steamship companies operate pleasure cruise ships between Vancouver and Skagway. These are luxury vessels that offer cocktail lounges, deluxe suites, game rooms, nightly dancing, and, in the case of the Princess Patricia, a heated swimming pool.

Costs vary according to accommodations and the season. But on the Prince George, for instance, round trip fares begin at $188.

Although there are many channels through the Inside Passage, most ships follow approximately the same route as they steam northward to the land of the midnight sun. By the time passengers reach the "Trail of '98" into the Yukon, there is no darkness at all in summer — only a warm twilight.

WINDS, WARMED by the Japanese current, give the Pacific Northwest a particularly favorable climate from mid-April to October. Days are warm and nights refreshingly cool.

However, it is advisable to take a warm wrap or jacket for evenings.

Heading north from Vancouver, spectacular peaks rise as a backdrop against evergreen islands indented with coves and fjords. Often there are fleets of boats fishing for British Columbia salmon.

LEAVING THE protecting bulwark of Vancouver Island behind, the ship moves on north, weaving through the galaxy of smaller islands past lone lighthouses and fishing towns until it reaches its first port of call, Prince Rupert. Located on Kaien Island, overlooking a magnificent harbor, Prince Rupert is a thriving town — an important fishing center and supply port for the Far North.

Game fish are abundant in the rivers near the town. The world's record steelhead trout (36 pounds) was caught near there. The Skeena River, nearby, yielded the record tyee salmon (92 pounds).

Curio and souvenir shops carry a varied assortment of Indian work. Indian totem poles tower from street corners and parks.

SHORT TOURS of the city are available while cruise ships are in port.

From Prince Rupert it's just 50 miles to Alaskan waters, and such romantic names as Ketchikan, noted for its totem poles; Wrangell, take-off point for a four-day Stikine River steamer trip to the old mining town of Telegraph Creek, B.C.; Juneau, once a wild and woolly gold rush town, and Skagway, starting point of the famous "Trail of '98" across the Chilkoot Pass to the fabulous Klondike gold fields.

Today the White Pass and Yukon Railway follows the trail through spectacular mountain scenery to Lake Bennett, where the adventurers built boats to sail 500 miles down the Yukon River to Dawson City. The train leaves Skagway in the morning, returning the same afternoon, so passengers have ample time to sightsee and shop before boarding their ship once more.

ON THE RETURN trip, some ships dock at the small Indian village of Alert Bay on Cormorant Island. In the Nimpkish Community Lodge there, Kwagutl Indians perform their colorful native dances.

Travel Tips For Gals

Some Things You Should Know Before You Head For Overseas

Now that you've had your passport picture taken, and you're dreaming of all the faraway places you're about to visit, here's a list of tips all good girl travelers should know:

1. Ask your hairdresser to prepare a plastic bottle of your special color rinse, so you'll be happy with your hair on your trip. Better beauty salons around the world carry famous-name rinses, but they don't always mix them the way you like.

2. Don't laugh — but if you have a capped tooth (doesn't almost everyone?), take along a spare. How would you like to break one of the "jackets" in some remote part of the world and have to delay your trip while you have a new one made (even if you could be sure of the dentist)? Also, take duplicate glasses, if you wear prescription lenses.

3. Ladies who are afraid of getting lost in a foreign city find it useful to carry a matchbook of the hotel where they're staying. Just show it to your cabdriver, or a friendly native, and he'll tell you how to find your way back.

4. Learn the basics of money exchange of the countries you visit. But don't drive yourself mad over every last penny.

5. When you have more than one coat to carry over your arm, put the lighter one inside the other, sleeves first, for easy carrying.

6. If you're traveling by ship, there will be costume parties on board. Be a smart girl and bring the ingredients from home.

7. Don't buy a lot of new clothes for your trip. Your old ones will be new to your fellow travelers.

8. Don't buy giant, economy-size containers of such articles as hairspray. They're bulky, take up valuable space and cosmetic cases often won't close over them. Unless you're off to the furthest reaches of the Sahara desert, you can buy popular brands of American necessities when you need them.

9. Don't overlook that admonition to wear comfortable shoes, but also don't go overboard on it. If you start early enough, you can find shoes that are attractive as well as comfortable.

(And don't take along a lot of handbags. You can go all over the world with one daytime bag if it's black alligator or calf—but not patent.)

10. Take along a transistor radio. Turn it on the minute you're in your hotel room. You'll get the feeling of the local scene at once, even if you can't understand a word of the news.

And don't forget to take along your best smile and happy spirit. Make friends for your country while you're at it!

A Defense Of Student Rebels From An Ivory Tower Thinker

STUDENTS WITHOUT TEACHERS by Harold Taylor; McGraw-Hill, 321 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College, says in the introduction that he intended writing "Students Without Teachers" 10 years ago, "but circumstances intervened."

His theme in this volume is that college and university students are rightfully in rebellion because they have not been allowed a voice in deciding what should be taught and how the colleges should be run. Further, he contends, in the 1960s "the students became the chosen instruments of social and educational change because the society had arranged itself to make this possible, and by its own default, necessary."

Violence on campus becomes, in philosopher Taylor's view, a predictable and unavoidable component of a revolt he claims to have foreseen 10 years ago. The students are right, he holds; schools and society are patterned to obsolete and decadent forms and purposes; the schools, to do their part, must "return to progressivism" and restructure themselves to become what the students want.

All this is bound to be welcomed by besieged college administrators as well as by those faculty members who would rather agitate than teach. Taylor has given them a 321-page philosophical justification for everything that has happened at their schools — and a perfect alibi. As for the student minorities that have created the havoc, he regards them not as minorities at all but as the outspoken spokesmen for their whole generation.

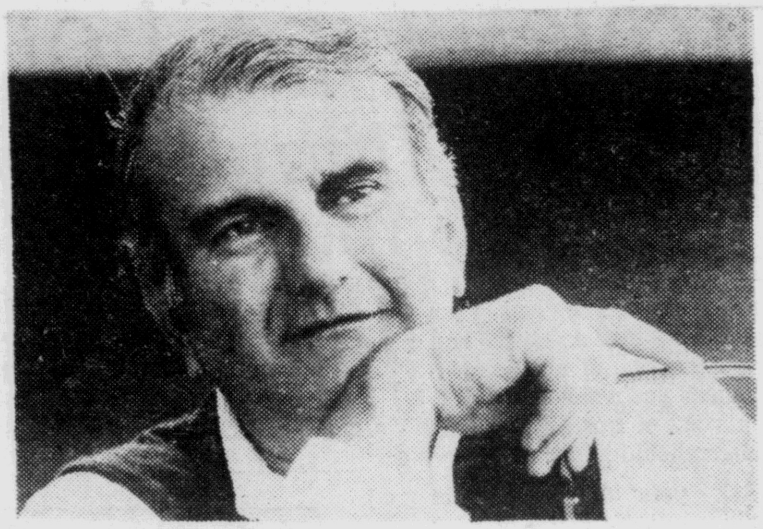
The view that turning college campuses into a sort of combination of Hyde Park and the Cuban revolution is wrecking the educational system is blind and simplistic, as seen by Taylor. That his own view may be blind and simplistic does not, of course, occur to him.

Taylor draws heavily on his 14 years of experience as president of Sarah Lawrence College for his interpretation of what has happened and is happening on public campuses across the nation. He never senses the incongruity of equating the carefully selected "upper strata" girls of that exclusive school with the mobs at Berkeley, San Francisco State or Columbia.

To the pure, all things are pure; and to Taylor, this applies to all the "now generation." He describes the beginnings of Students for a Democratic Society in glowing terms of praise — and, in his optimistic (and simplistic) view, sees the SDS today as having the same motivation and ideals he professes to have found in some of its early leaders whom he "recognized (as) the educational allies of Sarah Lawrence students who already held the rights and responsibilities in educational policy and political action for which the students on other campuses were beginning to struggle."

Harold Taylor is the very beau ideal of college administrators. His educational qualifications are impeccable, including a Ph.D. from the University of London — which still in the late 20th Century carries prestige beyond that of any merely American institution. He more than looks the part — slender, wavy-haired, clear-eyed and clean-jawed (the girls at Sarah Lawrence must have swooned over him).

He is also the very personification of the Ivory Tower, of the academic view of the world, of those who propose to remake society while not really a part of it, and to understand what they have never known.



HARRY MARK PETRAKIS
Some so-so short stories

Much-Honored Writer Disappoints This Time

THE WAVES OF NIGHT by Harry Mark Petrakis; McKay, 230 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Twice Harry Mark Petrakis has been nominated for the National Book Awards fiction prize, for his novel, "A Dream of Kings," and for his first collection of short stories.

Coming from an author who has been so honored, this group of so-so short stories is a disappointment.

Son of a Greek Orthodox minister, Petrakis grew up in and around Chicago, and evidently had a photographic eye for the Old Country customs and tastes still strong in these first and second generation Americans. The artless Grecian flavor that permeates most of his stories is easily the best thing about them.

His style is simple and at times lyrical; actually he is presenting something very like fables, or pastorals, of the Chicago tenements, and this calls for a delicate hand indeed. Too often Petrakis' characters tend toward the syrupy, and the course of their conflicts is predictably, even sentimentally, set.

The best of the stories are the title novella, which tells of the comfortable Greek Orthodox priest who begins to question the meaning of it all, and "The Bastard of Thanos," an unrepentant death-bed sinner who baffles another priest.

A Cliche-Loaded Novel By A Best-Selling German Author

LOVE IS JUST A WORD by Johannes Mario Simmel; McGraw-Hill, 474 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Margaret Terrien.

This novel, written by a 45-year-old German (and translated into English by Rosemarie Mays), is a compendium of plot and character cliches, but it moves right along in skillful, professional fashion.

The cliches are some of the most reliable in the business. Sensitive Young Man (21), who has a corrupt, industrialist, former Nazi father and a neurasthenic mother, pursues doomed love affair with Beautiful Older Woman (33) married to a rich, cultivated, Older Man (51), who is really a satanic stinker. The love is reciprocal and passionate, but of course she has a past and is cynical about men, because during the debacle of postwar Germany she had to Sell Her Beautiful Body for Food.

Well, you know.

Unfortunately for the suspense factor, you also know that the poor kid is going to get clobbered in the end, because in the very first chapter you see him hanging by the neck very dead in the ruined watchtower that was the lovers' first trysting place. The story unfolds in flashback.

Johannes Mario Simmel, the dustjacket tells us, "is one of Germany's best-known writers, with a long history of best-sellers." He is also a filmscript writer and magazine editor.

In this book the young hero's school-sponsored visit to the Dachau crematorium, now a memorial, upsets him sufficiently to delay the first physical mating with his love. The murder of six million Jews is referred to several times and demonstrates how guilty he feels for his father's sins.

Well, the rape of the American Indian by this republic has provided plot, theme, and incident for uncounted thousands of writers, whose products have ranged from western pulp fiction to Nobel Prize winners.

A writer has the privilege of using any material in any way he sees fit.

A reviewer has the privilege of stating, as an opinion: This book will hold little interest for the discriminating, humane reader.

The Drama And Danger Of The Sport Of Auto Racing

PARNELLI: A STORY OF AUTO RACING by Bill Libby; E. P. Dutton, 307 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Libby has come up with a triple-header, a story of a race driver, a story of an exciting event, the Indianapolis 500, and the story of the sport of auto racing.

He captures the spirit of Parnelli Jones, winner and hard-luck loser, willing to risk life and limb in a sport that is as dangerous as war.

The stakes are high and a chart of Jones' earnings show that a man can walk off the track a comparatively wealthy man, if he can walk off.

Jones, who raced them all, jalopies on dirt tracks, midgets, sprinters, stock cars and championship cars, summed it up when he said, "If you're a racing driver, you race."

While concentrating on Jones' life, Libby works in vivid descriptions of the 500 that are almost as effective as viewing the race and a lot more informative, and explains the sport itself to the uninitiated.

In a sport where death comes quick and horrifying, drama is high. After the death of a fellow driver, Jones observed: "It's sort of like being at the front in wartime, I think. Your buddies get it. It hurts. But you go on."

The ever-increasing speed of the cars, the battle of the pistons versus the turbines, the fortunes that are put into cars only to be wiped away in a grinding crash against the wall, a driver's lifetime of work, skill and ambition thwarted by a mechanical failure . . . all these are in Libby's engrossing account.

An Adventure Yarn Built Around A Kidnaping Plot

BANDERSNATCH by Desmond Lowden; Hold, Rinehart and Winston, 264 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Andrew W. M. Campbell.

One of the dreams of modern man is to pull off the perfect crime and live happily ever after. Desmond Lowden in his first novel, "Bandersnatch," builds this dream into an almost reality.

Cmdr. Alec Sheldon, D.S.O., D.S.C., R.N. retired, World War II torpedo boat captain and hero-down-on-his-luck, is drawn by circumstances (he is broke and about to be thrown out of Palma de Mallorca for his many liberties with the credit system) into a plot to kidnap the Onassis-like millionaire shipping magnate, who is responsible for the Spanish authorities taking action against him. Sheldon and his World War II crew plan to capture Alexis Tzannos and his equally wealthy guests and hold them for a ransom of 4.8 million dollars, which of course they plan to distribute to the poor. The poor are defined as Sheldon and his wartime cronies, who felt that democracy had been less than generous to them, but that a cut of the booty would restore their faith in society.

Sheldon sets off on his now refitted tropedo boat Bandersnatch.

The millionaires, their wives, girl friends, and children are all aboard the world's most luxurious yacht Pindar, bent upon their own individual lives of greed, lust and fear. As individuals, however, each has his own inner strength. The same cannot be said for Sheldon's crew; they have the avarice, etc.; but without the firm naval discipline of Commander Sheldon, they fall apart.

A Club Without Dues Or Don'ts, But A Waiting List Of Members

By DON KEOWN

SITTIN' STARIN' 'N' ROCKIN' by Thomas E. Saxe Jr.; Hawthorn, 166 pages, $3.95.

Americans are being bombarded with warnings that they are not getting sufficient vigorous exercise to maintain good health.

Much less is being said about another grave lack in our way of living at the opposite end of the activity spectrum — relaxation. That, too, is having its seriously adverse effects, though more often of a mental than a physical nature.

The truth is that although we are too seldom truly active physically, we are also too infrequently really at rest physically and mentally. Instead we are somewhere in limbo between these two conditions, enduring the ravages that result from an excessive burning of nervous energies without reaping the benefits that come from utilizing our muscles energetically.

Books, television programs, lectures, the jogging fad and obituary columns all nudge us in the direction of the regular exercise the body demands. But what is to prod us into also giving our bodies and minds the rest they crave at times?

Thomas E. Saxe Jr., a New England business man, believes he has the answer in the Sittin' Starin' 'n' Rockin' Club he started 20 years ago.

Its objectives: "To advance the art and science of sittin', to develop new techniques of starin', to promote methods of rock in'."

It is a society without committees, dues or don'ts. Indeed, it is a society without meetings. But it is also a society with a growing membership, in fact a waiting list, that includes, in addition to thousands of the common people, such celebrities as Bing Crosby Harry S. Truman, Richard Cardinal Cushing, Toots Shor and Dr. Janet Travell, the physician who gave the rocking chair its biggest boost when she recommended it to President John F. Kennedy for his ailing back. All are united in the belief that the rocker must be rescued from the attic, where interior decorators have relegated it, and restored to its place of honor in the home.

"Sittin' Starin' 'n' Rockin' " is a book in which the founder-president sets forth the aims and claims of his society, complete with testimonials, and offers some advice from his experience as to techniques and types in rocking. It is all done with tongue in cheek. Yet along with the humor there is a sincere conviction on Saxe's part that the rocking chair can make a therapeutic contribution to our digestion, circulation, posture, and, most important, our good spirits and our peace of mind.

"I've never seen anyone get angry in a rocking chair," he quotes one member. "It would be out of character."

"Of course," admits another, "rockin' is just like worrying — it gets you nowhere fast. But as a relaxing agent, I've found it has no equal." (We can think of but one serious challenger — a bathtub filled with warm water.)

Even the squeaks are defended. "A squeakless rocker is like a man without a sense of humor," claims a Floridan.

A Connecticut newspaper in editorializing favorably upon the rocking chair society pointed out that an esteemed British medical publication had given rocking its enthusiastic endorsement:

"The therapeutic value of the rocking chair has probably increased with the softening effect of generations of easy living. Illness of the aged . . . frequently center about circulation problems and stiff joints. And the old rocking chair aids both."

Saxe has included in his book pictures of himself in his portable chair that accompanies him in his travels, rocking in such places as beneath the Eiffel Tower and before the Sphinx, as well as prominent members of the society at ease in their favorite rockers.

In truth, Saxe has to strain and stretch his material just a bit to make it cover a book. But generally, the contents are well suited to the kind of lighthearted, relaxed reading that is appropriate to the rocking chair movement.

Any program that causes us to pause periodically so that our cares can dissolve and permit us a better perspective of life cannot help but be salutory. The rocking chair is, as Saxe proclaims it, "the instrument and symbol of relaxation, serenity, friendship — a world-wide symbol of peace." But in taking it up, we should not abandon the jogging. A brisk scamper through the neighborhood will make us all the more appreciative of the comfort of the rocker, once we return to the sanctuary of the home.

IN EGYPT, with the sphinx staring down at him, Thomas E. Saxe Jr., president of the Sittin' Starin' 'n' Rockin' Club, sits in his portable aluminum rocking chair, and sits and stares and rocks.

JUST A few years ago, Raymond Hull was a $23 a week dishwasher. Now he is a successful, well-to-do writer, lecturer, teacher, broadcaster and musician, working out of Vancouver, B.C.

"How To Get What You Want" (Funk & Wagnalls, $4.95) oulines the self-betterment program he has worked out as the result of his own success.

His book begins as a rather rigid set of written exercises — he puts great stress on putting aspirations down on paper —, but trails off into one of those general pep talks, familiar to readers in the self-improvement, positive-thinking field.

Hull's book is not as materialistic as its title makes it sound, for along with the acquisition of material things he is even more interested in attaining the less tangible values in life. As in so many of these books, we get a touch of right-wing philosophy and rugged individualism theorizing. But Hull also offers some seemingly practical suggestions and procedures by which one might advance and enrich one's lot in life.

WRITER'S DIGEST has issued a new printing of "Writing and Selling Non-Fiction," the guide for freelancers by Hayes B. Jacobs, whose column on marketing articles appears regularly in the Digest and who teaches at the New School for Social Research in New York City. The book, informative and interesting, first appeared in 1967.

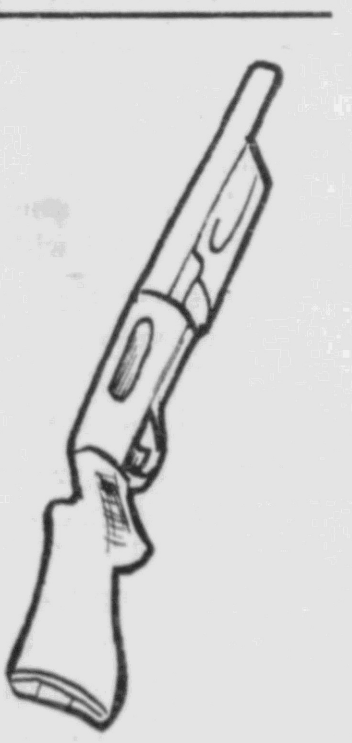
THE BEST known names in golf are those professionals who are winners on the tournament circuit. Their books sell well. But Joe Novak, director of golfing activities for Southern California's Bel-Air Country Club, makes the point that tournament winners are not necessarily the best teachers, nor even especially interested in that phase of the sport. Their books often are almost totally the work of ghost writers. Novak, however, is a full-time teacher, and one of the best. And in a slim, illustrated paperback, "The Novak System of Mastering Golf" (Doubleday, $1.95), he shares his personal approach to the fundamentals of the game, based upon a limited number of key moves.

NEWEST Sunset travel guide from Menlo Park's Lane Books covers Idaho with maps, photographs and text in the well-established and popular format. The softcover book sells for $1.95.

THE SWEDENBORG Foundation Inc. of 139 East 23rd Street, New York, has issued a reprint of Emanuel Swedenborg's "Divine Love and Wisdom," with introduction by Helen Keller, that sells for $4.75 hardcover, $1 paperback. It is the 52nd printing of the book written in 1763.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE CELL by David Case; Hill and Wang, 269 pages, $5. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The terror or horror tale is done but infrequently these days, and then rarely done well. Enthusiasts of the genre must generally rely upon the classicists of earlier eras for their supply.

It is doubly pleasing then to find in David Case a newcomer with the Poe-like touch.

He demonstrates this best in "The Hunter," one of three novelettes included in this book. It is a really splendid yarn, set on the English moors where some strange creature is committing killings most gruesome. Intrepid hunter John Wetherby stalks out to end the reign of terror in a "Hound of the Baskervilles" atmosphere, and the result is a first-rate chiller.

Of the other two stories, "The Dead End," set in the wilds of Tierra del Fuego, an island in the Straits of Magellan off South America's southernmost point, is the best, offering some fine geography and local color plus an eccentric and perhaps mad scientist. "The Cell," diary of a werewolf, has been done before, and even the "surprise" twist at the ending seems familiar.

RELEASE

Until you came . . .
 not all my songs
 were filled with peace and joy.

Some songs were sad
 and touched with deep despair
 and loneliness at times too hard to bear
 until you came.

And then you came . . .
 and with the key of
 unasked-for love
 opened up the heavy door
 of my hurt heart,

And let loose on bright wings of flight
 the faith . . . and hope . . . and joy
 which dwelt in darkest night
 within my heart . . .

Until you came.

SAN ANSELMO MARGARET WHITESID

On The Stereo Scene—

From Baroque To Shearing To Erik Satie

"SOUTH AMERICAN GUITAR" — Ramon Ybarra — Westminster WST-17152:

Too many guitar recitals on LPs cover the same standard selections, but this new release is a welcome exception. That pieces by Villa-Lobos and Ponce are included is expected, but those looking for something different will appreciate the sad bossa nova by Pernambuco, the swinging Cuban habanera by de Fuentes, and rhythmic waltzes by Lauro. Five other composers are also represented in Ybarra's distinctive album.

"THE BAROQUE SONATA"—RAMEAU: Pieces de Clavecin en Concert Nos. 1 and 3; MICHEL BLAVET; Sonatas for Flute and Harpsichord Nos. 1 and 4—The Tipton Trio—Westminster WST-17157:

The works by French Baroque composer Rameau for the ensemble of flute, cello and harpsichord are about the most delightful and tuneful things from his pen. Blavet is almost unknown; his two pieces are named for two girls and are light and frothy chamber music. This is the recording debut of the Tipton Trio, a fine new American chamber threesome.

"ORCHESTRAL MUSIC OF ERIK SATIE" — French National Radio and TV Orchestra/Manuel Rosenthal — Everest 3234:

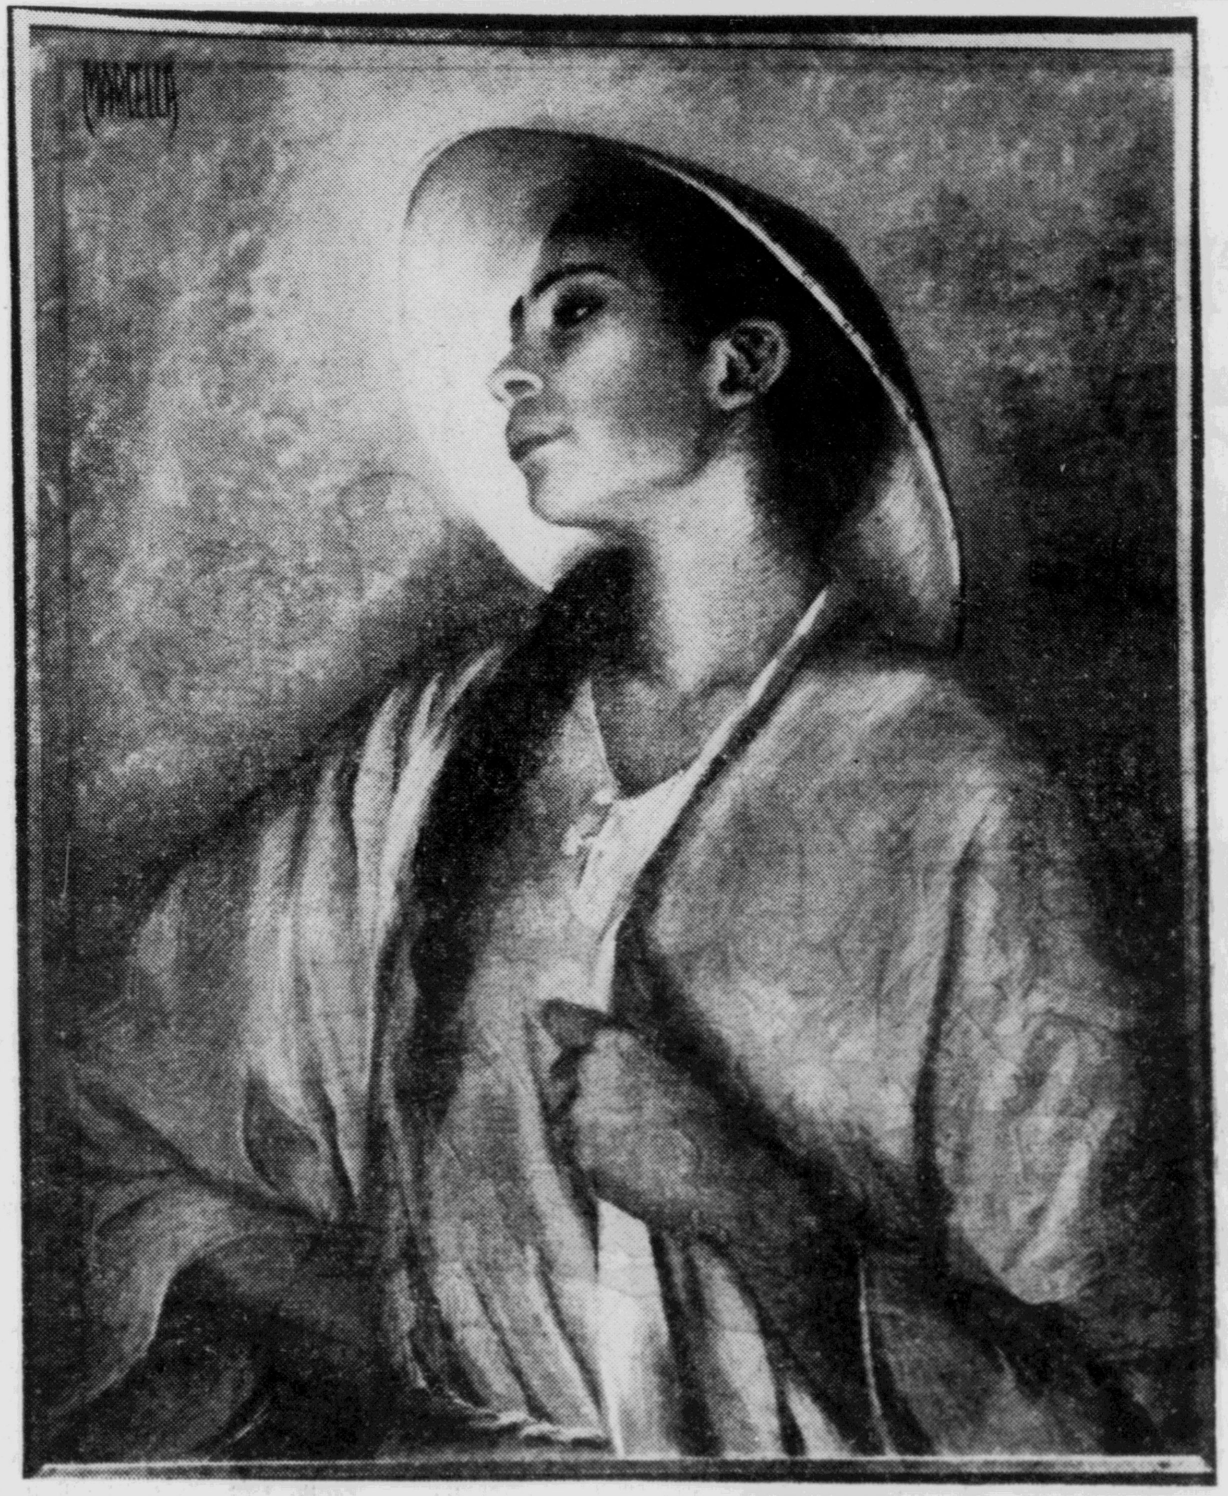
Everybody is jumping on the Erik Satie bandwagon. I'm sure the dapper, nutty French composer would have plenty of witty reactions to his sudden fame were he around today. "Parade" is the best thing here — a rousing performance of the ballet which almost overdoes the sound effects. The short "Trois Petite Pieces Montees" are an LP first; arrangements for orchestra of his piano music, as is "En Habit de Cheval." An excerpt from the rather un-Satie choral work "Socrates" is also included. Good stereophonics.

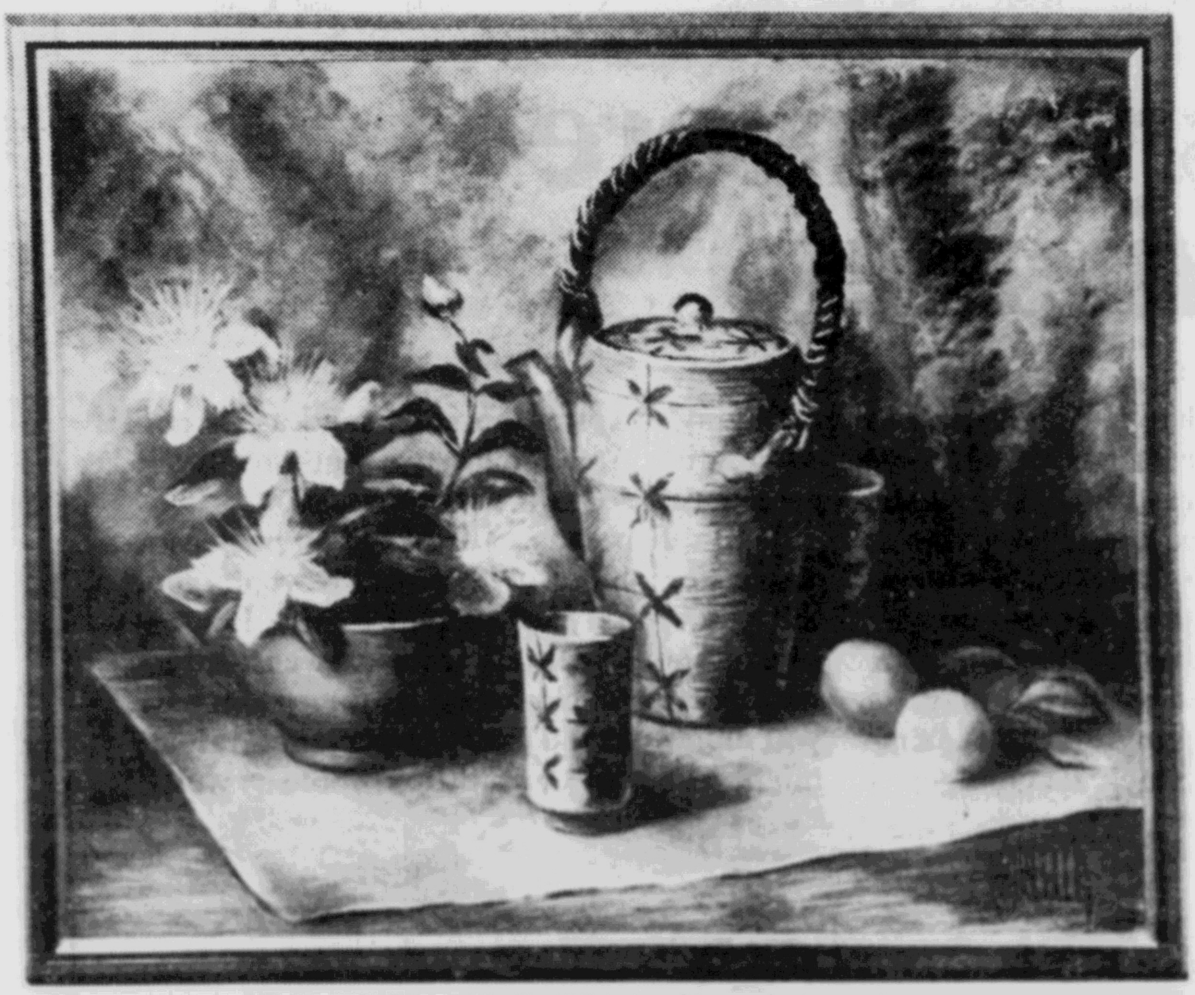
"THE VIRTUOSO CLASSICAL MANDOLIN" — Edith Bauer-Sleis, mandolin/Vienna Chamber Ensemble/Kurt Equiluz, tenor — Everest 3244:

The biggest work in this collection is Hans Gal's "Divertimento for Mandolin and Piano," although putting that on the front cover wouldn't cause an LP to sell like hotcakes. However, it proves to be a semi-modern chamber work of great charm. A "Duo for Mandolin and Guitar" by somebody named Sprongl is also unique and very enjoyable to hear. Two Mozart works featuring tenor soloist are also on the album. The mandolin is spotlighted here as a very expressive and curiously relaxing musical sound that will be new to many ears.

"ENCOUNTER: The Swingle Singers perform with The Modern Jazz Quartet" — Philips PHS 600-225:

What a great idea! Two of the top groups who have worked that strange territory between outright "pop" and up-tight classical, brought together in an absolutely delightful collaboration. The music is either by John Lewis, leader-pianist of the MJQ, or by old J. S. Bach. Swinging Swingle counterpoint is heard in Lewis' "Little David's Fugue," and his fugal penchant continues in "Three Windows," a beautiful theme from the French flick "One Never Knows." There was some annoying surface noise on my copy.





PASTEL PAINTINGS including the two pictures above, "Noami" at top, "Tea For Two" at bottom, are being shown by Marcella Winer of Mill Valley at the Torrance Galleries, San Anselmo, through Aug. 2. She studied as a young girl at the California School of Fine Arts and has since had instruction from Charles Krantz, Carlo Talibue and Thomas Leighton. Her pastels are representative of an art medium currently enjoying a revival of interest. The Torrance Galleries will also be showing oil paintings of landscapes and city scenes by Jean Victor during the same period.

HI-FI STEREO

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

What happened to the separate Tuner, Preamplifier, and Power Amplifier? In the early days of home Hi-Fi music systems, the components were quite bulky. The parts were large, and the many tubes produced a great deal of heat. The Tuner, preamplifier, and power amplifier were made on three separate chassis to reduce the overall size and weight, and to space the parts in each unit so that the heat would not damage them. As the state of the art progresses, the tubes and individual parts that made up each component were reduced in size so tuners began to be combined with preamplifiers, and in some cases preamplifiers were combined with power amplifiers. These combinations reduced the music system to two chassis instead of three. With more progress, all three components were combined into one unit sometimes called a receiver. The all-in-one receiver had so many tubes on one chassis that the heat factor was not always the most desirable.

Along came transistors. They were very tiny, about the size of an eraser on a pencil. They produced very little heat. This meant that the tuner, preamplifier and power amplifier sections could be built more compactly and with very little heat problem. These smaller sections could be accommodated on one chassis without sacrifice in circuitry or flexibility.

Almost all stereo Hi-Fi components available on the present market are transistorized. A very large percentage of these components are all-in-one receiver types. Because of miniaturization and integrated circuits (small units the size of one transistor that contain 5 or 6 transistors and associated circuitry) the modern compact receiver contains more flexibility, sophisticated circuitry, tuning indicators and automatic stereo switching devices, and in some cases more output power than the older three chassis tube counterparts. All of this in smaller sizes and without the serious heat problems.

If your home music system is made up of the two or three chassis tube types, it may be time to trade the system in for one of the new transistorized components. The new solid state receivers are very sensitive, have low distortion, have clean crisp sound, and are very neat in appearance. FM stereo stations will have more left and right separation. Visit us soon for a demonstration.

The Three Schemes In Color Use

Color coordination remains a mystery for some people, perhaps because it means one thing to one person and something else to another.

For instance, one woman says she can see no possible color coordination in using green and orange together — it flouts every principle of color harmony she learned in school.

THAT IS TRUE, but it is also true that tastes and styles change, and we now accept unusual and vibrant combinations of colors that were unthought-of 10 or 20 years ago.

Color coordination is simply the principle of settling on a color scheme and then coordinating all your furnishings, wallpapers, carpeting, flooring, paints, etc., with that scheme.

There are three basic schemes: the "neighboring colors" scheme, the "one color" scheme, and the "contrasting colors" scheme.

Now you may not like gree and orange together, but if you consult that invaluable decorators' tool, the color wheel you will find that green an orange lie on opposite sides. S they are an example of contrasting colors.

BY FAR THE most common color scheme is the neighboring plan. You may, for instance, use three neighboring colors on the wheel. Starting with lemon chartreuse and lime are neighbors in one direction, while gold and burnt orange are neighbors in the opposite direction.

You then would not use lime gold and burnt orange togethe because they neither contras nor are they neighbors.

A one-color scheme is also e fective. You settle on one colo and then employ tints an shades of that color throughou A tint cf a color is white adde to it, and a shade of a color ha black, added to it.

The one-color scheme i serene even if bright colors ar used. A neighboring colo scheme is restful if the colo are on the cool (blue, gree side, quite lively if on the re orange end. A contrastin scheme is vibrant.

Summer Care Of Roses

So your rose bushes bloomed this spring as never before?

There was a good reason for all that lush flowering — the heavy rains that soaked our soil in the winter and early spring.

And from that all rosarians of Marin County should learn a lesson — the importance of watering.

WATER IS THE most essential requirement for a happy rose garden, particularly during the summer months when the sun beams warmly and nature provides a minimum of moisture.

While roses resent wet feet, they are utterly dependent upon sufficient water to permit them to take up food from the soil and to continue to put forth the new growth that will carry the new blooms. Regular watering should be the policy, and it should be thorough enough to penetrate to the deepest roots.

Feeding is another summertime blessing the grower can accord his roses. Light monthly feedings of about a handful of special rose food available at nurseries and stores get better results than heavier, less regular or less frequent feedings.

SPRAYING MUST also be included on the rosarian's summer care calendar.

In Marin County, the seemingly ever-present aphis are the principal targets for spraying. Almost from nowhere, they appear to feed upon the new growth and to reduce its quality.

Mildew and rust are other trouble-makers in this county.

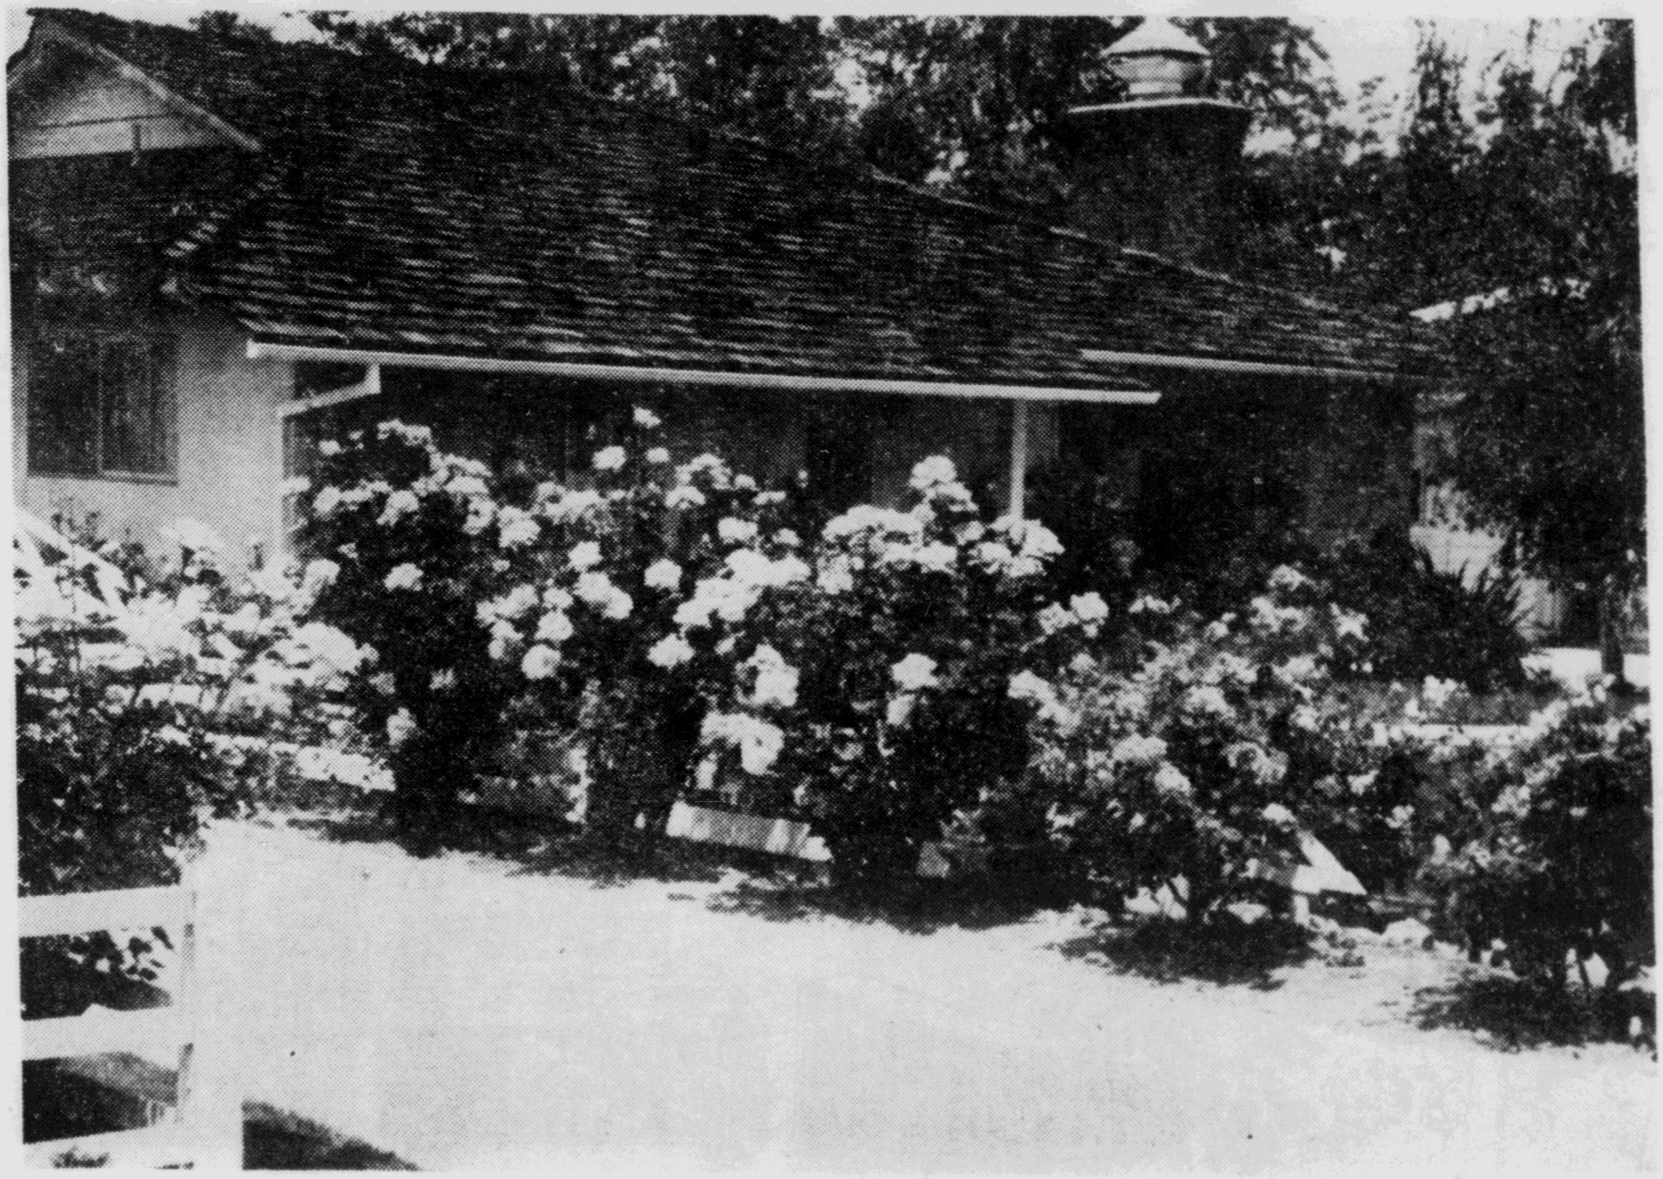
You can obtain a chemical spray that combines an insecticide with a fungicide. In using it, be sure to cover the bush thoroughly, hitting both the top and under sides of the foliage.

A REGULAR spray program started early before real trouble develops is the preferred policy.

Researchers have developed systematic-type insecticides, which, when sprayed on the rose bush, are absorbed into its sap stream and thus carried to all parts of the plants. Sucking insects such as the aphis then meet their doom when they partake of the foliage.

These "systematics" have also been incorporated into granular rose foods. A combination insecticide-fertilizer can be applied at the base of the rose bush which then absorbs them both. You promote color and control pests at the same time.

If you have special or persistent problems with your roses, your nurseryman is a good person to consult. He should be able to diagnose the trouble and to recommend the proper treatment.



TO PROLONG the bloom of your roses into the early winter, follow a three-step care program in the summer: Water deeply, thoroughly and regularly; feed lightly once a month, and carry out a spray program that will protect your shrubs against the pests that would otherwise sap their strength. A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Check the bedding plant section at your nursery. You'll find such eye-pleasers as blue ageratum, purplish lobelia and alyssum, all of which blend beautifully with zinnias, petunias and white or lavender periwinkles.
- And while at the nursery, keep your eyes open for summer shrubs in bloom. You can choose oleanders, hydrangeas, lantanas, hibiscus, abelias and escallonias in the exact colors and shapes to fit your garden.
- Marguerites can be cut back — but not too sharply — to keep them in good form and to freshen them for new blooms.
- If crabgrass is a problem, apply one of the weed killers that works especially against this pest. These controls must be applied several times at regular intervals.
- Plant petunias in pots or tubs and let their color cascade over the sides, for a quick and striking effect on your outdoor living area.
- Don't falter in your regular summer watering and clean-up programs. Persistence pays off.

STRINGS ATTACHED IN VIET ELECTION

Foreign Minister Says Viet Cong Could Not Campaign As Communists

SAIGON (UPI)—Foreign Minister Tran Chanh Thanh said today President Nguyen Van Thieu's offer to the Viet Cong to take part in South Vietnamese national elections does not mean that Communists also will be allowed to participate.

"The government position is that the National Liberation Front (NLF) can participate in elections, but the Communists cannot," Thanh said. "If they campaign as Communists, they violate the law of the land. They won't be allowed to stand as Communist candidates."

The official spoke at a news conference which he said was called to "interpret the presidential message."

In a lengthy radio address yesterday, Thieu challenged the NLF to participate in free elections organized by a joint electoral commission and supervised by an international body. The Viet Cong immediately rejected the plan, calling it a farce and "perfidious trickery."

Thanh said the "elections must be held by the government of this country. No one else can organize elections." He added that during the elections, the South Vietnamese army would remain under control of the government.

The foreign minister said the government still considered the NLF a "tool of the Communists in Hanoi," but when the North Vietnamese troops had withdrawn and when the NLF had renounced violence, the NLF could start "thinking of their real role, their real importance."

"They say they are not

Enemy Rocket Kills GIs At Pullout Center

SAIGON (AP) — An enemy rocket blasted a U.S. Ninth Division center processing troops to be returned home, killing two and wounded 21, the U.S. Command said today. Of the casualties, one of the dead and seven of the wounded were ticketed to leave Vietnam.

The command reported the rocket exploded Thursday near the center of Dong Tam, in the Mekong Delta south of Saigon.

FLYING HOME

The 800-man 4th Battalion, 47th Infantry of the 9th Division will fly to the United States Sunday. It is the second 9th Division battalion to leave under President Richard M. Nixon's order withdrawing 25,000 men by the end of August.

Units of the 9th Marine Regimental Landing Team were gathering at Quang Tri in the north ready to travel to the big base at Da Nang to board ship for Okinawa.

An advanced party already is in Okinawa preparing for the arrival of the regiment, which consists of 8,000 troops including supporting units.

TIMING SECRET

The exact time of the Marines' departure is secret for security reasons, since the enemy frequently has shelled Da Nang. But unless delayed by a typhoon nearing the coast, they are expected to be out of Vietnam within a few days.

Captured documents, prisoner reports and other information sources—including undercover agents—have furnished allied intelligence officers with supposed plans for another assault against the city of Tay Ninh, 50 miles northwest of Saigon, within the next week.

Clashes in the area have increased in recent days. Ameri-

Congress Hits Nerve Gas Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen already concerned about chemical and biological warfare research have expressed more alarm upon being told the Army has an open-air, nerve gas testing program.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee investigating such programs, said yesterday the military pulled back the curtain of secrecy and admitted it was testing deadly nerve gases in the air over three locations.

He said the Army disclosed lethal chemicals are being tested at the Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, at Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland and at Fort McClellan, Ala.

"I am concerned about this and not convinced of the necessity of all this environmental testing," said Reuss, D-Wis.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said he would ask for immediate suspension of the nerve gas testing. He also called for full reports on the testing from the Army, including details of safety precautions taken to protect surrounding areas.

Rep. Clarence D. Long, D-Md., whose district includes

CLEAN BIRD

Falcon Takes A Shower

James Wiese of Santa Venetia has a problem on his hands — a stray falcon that devours hamburger meat and takes showers under lawn sprinklers.

When Wiese, a construction engineer for the Marin County Public Works Department, went out on his lawn at 821 Vendola Drive earlier this week to fetch his evening newspaper, there was the bird — leisurely soaking under a lawn sprinkler.

Using gloves for protection against the bird's long talons, Wiese snared the falcon in a fish net and placed it in a cage on a rear patio. It spent the night there.

"It's a good eater — it had a quarter-pound of hamburger meat last night," said Wiese in wonder.

Wiese said the bird is black with brown legs, yellow beak and white wing tips. He said it had a leather leg strap.

"It obviously belongs to someone and we'd like to return it," said Wiese.

Beloved Candy Bomber Returns To W. Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Candy dropped in tiny parachutes out of the West Berlin sky today.

The sun broke through just before the "chocolate flier" of 20 years ago dropped his tiny bundles to hundreds of children scrambling on the ground below.

It was a less serious time than the days of the Soviet blockade of the city in 1948-49. Then the Russians put a stop to the candy drops being extended into neighboring East Berlin because the children there had written "Uncle Wiggle Wings" that they too liked Americans.

On hand to recreate a poignant moment of history's greatest airlift, that saved Berlin, was Col. Gail S. Halvorsen, a farm boy out of Utah who now commands a satellite tracking unit at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

The occasion was an annual Air Force open house at Tempelhof Airfield that this year featured not only American but British and French displays in honor of the joint victory over the blockade two decades ago.

Halvorsen was to make four candy drops over the weekend, flying a C47 Gooney Bird, the World War II model plane with which the airlift flew its first missions.

As Halverson roared over at about 200 feet, crabbing into a gusty wind, West Berlin school children gazed expectantly upward. As the tiny parachutes fluttered to earth with bubble gum, chocolate and other candies, the kids burst onto the drop field to gather up their spoils.

"Just like in the old days," Halvorsen grinned later.

When East Berlin children started writing to him to wiggle his wings and drop them some candy, too, which Halvorsen did, the Russians became furious in blockade days.

"They complained to the State Department," the veteran pilot recalled, "and the State Department told me to quit."

It was the first time Halvorsen, now 48, had flown a C47 in a dozen years.

As he roared in for a candy drop pass, a Berliner of about 28 peered into the sky and remarked to himself but aloud: "Man, those were real times."

Lobbyist, Senate Link Faces Quiz

Bulletin Expense Is Target

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The powerful Senate Rules Committee has started looking into how a lobbyist landed a $650,000 contract to provide legislative newsletters.

Sen. Robert S. Stevens, a new member of rules, said he will seek to determine if the current newsletter arrangement is the best available to lawmakers.

Stevens, R-Los Angeles, and Sen. Clair W. Burgener, R-San Diego, gained seats on rules last week during a purge by Senate "Young Turks" led by President pro tempore Howard Way.

OUSTER AFTERMATH

Way and his backers ousted "old guard" rules members Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, and Sen. Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, as part of their plan to "minimize" lobbyist influence in the legislature.

McCarthy had been chairman of the Rules Committee's Subcommittee on Communications, which had awarded a contract valued at $650,000 to Kenneth A. Ross Jr. of Los Angeles to provide the newsletters.

But when the Way backers took over, the new Senate leader appointed Stevens "to work closely with the Senate communications program on newsletters and questionnaires."

That was Way's manner of asking for a probe in the situation.

'SOME COMPLAINTS'

"We've had some complaints and questions as to the efficiency of the present operation," Stevens told a newsman. "We want to find out if this is the best way to do it or if it should be done here in the buildings."

Ross, 46, is also a lobbyist for contractors and cement firms. He began his computerized newsletter operation in 1967.

Ross has the name and party registration of all California voters on his computer tapes, but found it difficult to keep up with changes in address, party affiliation and new voters.

McCARTHY BILL

McCarthy introduced a bill in 1967 that was approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan to make it easier for Ross to get the changes he required.

The measure directed county clerks to submit a copy of their voter registration lists to the Secretary of State's office in Sacramento.

McCarthy says he sponsored the bill to allow legislators to better "communicate with vo-

4 A.M. Vote Finds Marin Banker Guilty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Don C. Silverthorne, founder and president of the defunct San Francisco National Bank, was convicted today on nine counts of misapplying its funds.

Silverthorne, 69, paunchy and white haired, heard the verdict with no sign of emotion. It was returned at 4 a. m. by a jury of seven men and five women who deliverated seven hours.

The defendant appeared before U.S. District Judge Albert C. Wollenberg to hear the decision. It was his second conviction.

EARLIER REVERSAL

Silverthorne's first conviction in February 1966 was reversed by the U. S. Court of Appeals on grounds that press and broadcast publicity had precluded a fair trial.

In the 14-day second trial, U. S. Attorney Cecil Poole presented complex records to support government charges that Silverthorne had converted more than $200,000 in bank funds to his own use.

U.S. ACTION

The federal government placed the bank in receivership Jan. 22, 1965, just two and a half years after it opened.

Major depositors lost at least $14 million, the greatest bank closing loss since depression days of the 1930s.

Federal deposit insurance protected accounts of up to $10,000.

"For the president of the bank to take these funds is an extremely sad tale to recount," Poole said in his closing argument.

"If that money had gone to the bank, Mr. Silverthorne would not be sitting here."

George Martinez, Silverthorne's attorney, argued that there was reasonable doubt that Silverthorne received any of the money.

He said Silverthorne was a man who had been maligned for five years. He asked the jurors to "look only at the evidence and make your decision on that."

Apollo Crew Taking Rest Before Launch

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Trained to a fine pitch, the Apollo 11 astronauts tapered off today in rehearsals for the grand adventure — the July 20 landing on the moon.

After a brief session today in a simulator, practicing the critical phases of the landing and takeoff from the lunar surface, Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. planned to spend tomorrow lounging around the astronaut quarters.

"We don't want to launch a tired crew," said Dr. Charles A. Berry, personal physician of the spacemen who has maintained a microscopic watch on their health throughout a long and ex-

Foreign Students In Bus Mishap

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A glass-topped bus loaded with touring foreign students jammed in a low underpass yesterday and 12 persons were cut by glass from the shattered roof.

Three persons were held at hospitals. The others were treated and released.

Houseboat Regulation Wins Approval

FORT BRAGG (AP) — The State Park and Recreation Commission has formally adopted emergency houseboat regulations and approved a boundary proposal for Big Basin Redwoods State Park.

A commission spokesman said the board's action yesterday set essentially the same boundaries as now exist for the Big Basin Park in Santa Cruz County. But he said the new proposal calls for buying some land already within the park area.

The emergency houseboat regulations call for sealed toilets to prevent dumping sewage into waterways.

Another emergency regulation was adopted to permit night boating on the Oroville Reservoir.

Huge Ancient Coastal Landslides Could Be Revived By Earthquake?

Large landslide areas on the coastal side of Inverness Ridge near the south end of Point Reyes National Seashore could be triggered by an earthquake.

Writer John J. Clague gives this warning in an article entitled, "Landslides of Southern Point Reyes National Seashore" in the July issue of Mineral Information, Service, a monthly publication of the state Division of Mines and Geology.

The areas contains some of the largest ancient landslides in the Bay region, Clague said.

"Although most of the area appears to be presently stable, some sliding occurred during the 1906 earthquake and again in 1956, and there is warning that the huge slide blocks could again become active, perhaps during another earthquake," he wrote.

The landslide area extends for about 4 miles along the ocean shore from a point one-half mile north of the southern boundary of the national seashore to a little more than a mile south of the mouth of Bear Valley, he reported.

He identified the major slide areas as the Double Point Slide covering 1.7 square miles and including most of the area from Lake Ranch to Double Point, and the Wildcat Slide, covering about one square mile, northwest along the coast from the mouth of Alameda Creek.

Other landslide areas are just southeast of the Double Point Slide, north of the Wildcat Slide toward the mouth of Bear Valley Creek and the coast cliff south from Arroya Honda.

The major part of the evident landsliding probably occurred in the last 10,000 years, Clague said.

Thomas Reed Confirms White House Position

Thomas C. Reed of Ross, Republican national committeeman from California, has joined the White House staff as an adviser to President Richard M. Nixon, he said today.

In a phone call from Washington, Reed confirmed a story in yesterday's Independent-Journal which reported that Reed was about to be named to the president's staff.

Reed said that he is working as a volunteer and will assist in staffing boards and commissions.

"It's a summer job — I expect to be home by Labor Day," he added.

Reed said that he did not know whether a report that Lyn Nofziger, another top adviser to Gov. Ronald Reagan, was also to join the White House staff was true or not. He is still in Sacramento, Reed said today.

Reed, 35, was Reagan's Northern California campaign chairman in 1966 and then became the governor's first appointments secretary.

His assignment to the president's staff is viewed as strengthening the conservatives' voice in the White House.

Reed, a nuclear physicist, heads several firms dealing in investments, mining and land development.

Laugh-In Comic Likes The Ladies Both On And Off Of Television

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The principal difference between Dick Martin of "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" and the off-screen Martin is the comedian's I.Q.

Away from the cameras, Martin is bright and articulate. On the show he is a dum-dum with nothing but sex and parties on his mind.

The latter activities occupy a certain amount of his waking hours. A considerable amount. In contrast with the happily married, serious Dan Rowan, Martin is one of Hollywood's great swingers.

ONCE MARRIED and divorced, Martin — a former bartender — lives in a faultlessly appointed bachelor pad which clings to a crag in the Hollywood Hills above the Sunset Strip. He has an unobstructed view of the ocean and the bustling city below his living room.

One is led to suspect he keeps an eye on "ladies" from this aerie.

Martin applies the word "lady" to any female from age 18 to 80 who doesn't mind having a few drinks and going out on the town. His favorite ladies, however, are in their 20s, beautiful and single.

MARTIN FREQUENTLY takes them out to dinner — one at a time — and then to one of several discoteques to which he belongs: The Daisy, The Factory and The Candy Store.

Late in the evening he usually invites them up to his house for a game of pool or perhaps a starlight plunge in his swimming pool which overhangs the cliff. He has often said he'd rather have a nightcap with a lady at his pad because it is more comfortable and plush than the one-bedroom apartments with bullfighter posters in which many starlet ladies live.

Dick's living room is largely occupied by a professional-size pool table. And he is expert at the game.

THE FURNISHINGS are colorful, comfortable and new. There are objects d'art in nooks and crannies. Modern paintings clutter the walls.

He has a combination den and bar which is one of the most interesting rooms in the house. Dick has decorated it with great care, giving it a bachelor flavor with a few artistic nude paintings.

"You notice you have to stop by here and have a drink or two before you get to the kitchen," Martin says with the same wolfish intensity he displays on the NBC-TV series.

There is little domestic strain in Dick Martin. He likes his ladies to come up to the house and fix dinner for him while he relaxes with a drink. A cleaning lady takes care of the dust and dishes.

HE AND PARTNER Rowan see very little of one another except when they are playing clubs on the road. Then they find time for golf during the day. At night Rowan has a bite to eat before going to bed.

Not Martin. He's out looking for ladies. He likes them.

JULY THUNDERSTORM IN LOS ANGELES

A young Los Angeles woman was unruffled yesterday when a sudden, unseasonal thunderstorm hit Southern California. She had her umbrella along on her outing. Most persons caught in the rain had to scamper for cover like the barefoot youth heading in the other direction. (UPI Telephoto)

Spock Vows To Continue His Efforts Against War

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Benjamin Spock says he will work harder for an end to the Vietnam war now that an appeals court has overturned his conviction on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the draft.

"I feel pleased personally," the author-pediatrician said, "but I'm going to redouble my antiwar work. It seems to me absolutely tragic that young Americans will continue to die in Vietnam for an indefinite period."

In a 52-page decision yesterday, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered acquittals for Spock and Michael Ferber of Boston, a Harvard graduate student, on grounds that there was insuffcent evidence of criminal conspiracy to warrant their convictions in a 1968 trial.

The court ordered new trials for two other men convicted with them—the Rev. William Sloane Coffin Jr., chaplain at Yale University, and Mitchell Goodman of Temple, Maine, an author and teacher. It said their rights were prejudiced when Judge Francis J. W. Ford of U.S. District Court in Boston posed 10 questions that he instructed the trial jury to answer in returning a verdict.

In Washington, a spokesman said the Justice Department would not comment until it could fully review the ruling. The office of the U.S. attorney for Massachusetts was similarly noncommittal.

Spock, who was visiting friends with his wife on an island off Cape Cod when the decision came, said he never doubted that he eventually would be found innocent.

"I was given this terrible conscience by my mother," he recalled. "I always knew that so long as my conscience told me I was right, everything would be all right."

Ferber said he also was not surprised by the decision. But he added that if it makes some persons opposed to the war "think the government is far more reasonable after all, then it is actually setting them back . . . If they think by the acquittal, justice is done, then that's a mistake."

Coffin, who was playing tennis at Yale when he learned of the decision, said he was gratified by it, but viewed the news as "medium good" because of the order that he be retried.

Goodman, at his home in Maine, contended that both the trial and appeals courts refused to consider the basic questions at stake. He listed them as "who is really responsible for the crime of destruction that our government has committed in Vietnam" and the constitutionality of the draft laws.

After their convictions June 14, 1968, all four men were sentenced to two-year prison terms. Ferber was fined $1,000 and the others were fined $5,000 each. Execution of the sentences was stayed pending appeals.

Two Accused Of Benzedrine Sale

OAKLAND (UPI)—Two men were arrested yesterday for allegedly trying to sell $20,000 worth of benzadrine tablets to narcotics agents.

Thomas J. Sexton, 33, Concord, and Danny T. Booker, 25, Oakland were picked up after they exchanged 100,000 tablets for $5,000, according to the state narcotics division. The tablets were worth about 20 cents per pill or $20,000 on the black market, according to agents.

Arresting officer Stephen L. Armenta of the division called it the second largest buy of this kind of drug in the state and the largest in northern California.

Long Presses Tax Reforms Before Aug. 13

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell B. Long pledged today an effort to obtain Senate passage of the House-approved 10 per cent surtax extension before an Aug. 13 vacation recess.

The Senate Democratic Policy Committee previously voted unanimously to attempt to attach a wide variety of reforms to the House measure instead of waiting for a later reform bill.

"This is not to say that the bill should not have a considerable amount of reform in it," Long said. "The bill, in fact, already contains several meaningful tax reforms."

The Louisiana Democrat announced earlier this week the committee would consider tax reform amendments, but set a July 18 deadline for receiving them. No amendments have been submitted although some senators are known to be preparing them.

Archeologists Stymied By Building Firm

SAN PABLO (AP) — A 2,000-year-old Indian village unearthed during excavations for an apartment building has been covered, archaeologists complained yesterday.

Manuel Almeida, owner of the property near downtown San Pablo, notified archaeologists lats month when his workmen found Indian artifacts. He promised them 60 days to explore provided they did not interfere with building.

A group of San Francisco State archaeologists started digging but were ordered off Tuesday, according to Robert Schenk, curator of the Treganza Anthropology Museum, the group's sponsor.

The 10-foot-wide hole they had dug to a 6-foot depth was filled and covered with lumber, said Leslie Wildesson, a National Park Service archaeologist working in her spare time.

A spokesman for the contractor, Thunderbird Builders, Inc., said, "We have a contract to put up an apartment. They were harassing us."

KIEV (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey and his wife were in this capital of the Soviet Ukraine today on a vacation.

Rector's Death Held 'Justifiable'

OAKLAND (AP)—A coroner's jury has ruled that James Rector's death in the May 15 "People's Park" riot in Berkeley was "justifiable" homicide by an unknown and unidentifiable . . .sheriff's deputy."

A jury of six men and one woman reached the verdict yesterday after 35 minutes of deliberation.

The two-day coroner's inquest produced conflicting reports as to whether rocks were thrown from a rooftop from where Rector was removed, wounded with buckshot in his heart.

None of the 25 witnesses testified seeing Rector throw anything from the rooftop.

The jury got the case after Leonard N. Johnson Jr., an Alameda County sheriff's deputy, testified that he may have been the one who shot Rector.

Johnson said he saw "three or four" people on the rooftop where Rector was found wounded.

"One of them reared back his arm to throw and I fired," Johnson said, adding that he did not see the result of his firing.

Two utility company employees said they saw many rocks hurled from the rooftop. Eight other civilian witnesses said those on the rooftops were peaceful except for one unidentified man who threw a rock despite warnings from demonstrators.

Rector, 25, of San Jose, was not a University of California student.

Twice convicted of burglary, he was sought by his probation officer at the time the disturbance erupted over a University of California-owned vacant lot that young people had tried to take over for a park.

Rector, among more than 130 injured, died three days after he was hit. He said he was shot by an Alameda County sheriff's deputy.

Ted Jarvis, attorney for Rector's family, said he will press a $100,000 wrongful death suit against the sheriff's office on behalf of Rector's mother, Mrs. Dolores Clifford of San Jose.

Los Angeles Police Condemned On Death

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Police "didn't give him a chance," a witness testified at a coroner's inquest into the fatal shooting of an innocent man police thought was a freeway sniper.

Alton Butler, 53, testifying into the events leading up to the fatal shooting of Donald Lee Oughton, 29, June 11, said yesterday the officers jumped from their car with guns drawn.

He said they were close enough to Oughton to grab him, but they "just started shooting."

Butler testified Oughton was walking quickly, not running, down an alley when the patrol car approached using its red light and siren.

He said the officers jumped out of the car and "started shooting." He said he did not hear the officers say anything to Oughton before they fired.

Other officers who arrived at the scene shortly after the shooting chased spectators away, Butler said. "They said they didn't want no damn witnesses," he said. "They were running people away from the corner."

Butler said the officer behind Oughton fired first. "They got him from the back," he said, adding that no warning shots were fired.

Another witness described Oughton as having the mentality of a boy rather than a man. He said Oughton told him he was hurrying home to watch the wrestling matches on television shortly before he was killed.

Police have said that Oughton was acting suspiciously and was in the area where a freeway sniper had reportedly been firing on cars.

The officers who stopped Oughton claimed they approached him to question him when he suddenly reached into his back pocket. One officer thought Oughton was going for a gun and fired, wounding his partner in the hand.

The partner, thinking Oughton had fired, drew his pistol and shot Oughton.

It turned out the victim was reaching for his wallet containing an identity card which he used because a speech impediment made it difficult for him to make himself understood. He was not armed.

Congressmen Told Tactics Of Smugglers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — By land, air and sea, smugglers are feeding a growing American market with illicit drugs and narcotics, authorities told a group of congressmen yesterday.

Smugglers are making low-level border hops at night in small planes loaded with marijuana, Sheriff Raymond Rowe of Imperial County said. They're even using bows and arrows to fling packets of heroin across the All American Canal, he said.

Customs officers told of pleasure boats, which go unsearched, returning from Mexico, some of them possibly carrying large cargoes of dope.

Backpacking smugglers recently were caught carrying pot across the international border in the Laguna Mountains, San Diego County Sheriff's Sgt. Robert E. Ryan said.

Others Ryan said, use remote dirt roads between the ports of entry to drive the drugs into the United States.

Vernor V. Hann, district director of U.S. Customs in San Diego, said his limited staff at four legal ports of entry from Mexico—San Ysidro, Calexico, Andrate, Tecate—seized 900 of 11 million motor vehicles in the last year.

He said the 900 yielded 5 million dangerous drug pills, 35,000 pounds of marijuana, 33 pounds of heroin and 2 pounds of cocaine.

Bond Rate Up?

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Treasury Department has proposed a $390 million increase in annual earnings for the thousands of Americans who have invested $52 billion in savings bonds.

The Treasury spelled out the details of its plan to ask Congress to increase from 4.25 to 5 per cent the interest rate on savings bonds.

"A rate increase is necessary to be fair to a great number of savers who have faithfully bought bonds over a long period of time," said Paul A. Volcker, Treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs.

At the same time, the Treasury said, it will ask Congress to remove the 4.5 per cent ceiling on the interest the government may pay on long-term "marketable" bonds sold through commercial money markets.

Soul Singer Irate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Brown showed up, but Mayor Sam Yorty didn't, so the Negro soul singer stalked out of City Hall saying he wouldn't accept a "James Brown Day" proclamation from an "underling."

Brown said he had been assured Yorty would be present for the ceremony yesterday, but the mayor's aides said they had previously informed the singer's public relations man he had another commitment. The mayor said later he regretted the mix-up.

Today is still James Brown Day in Los Angeles.

City Calms Down

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — An uneasy calm settled over a trouble area in Evansville early today after four Negroes were wounded by sniper shots and firemen extinguished at least 16 blazes caused by firebombs.

Disorders erupted after the fatal shooting of a Negro boy by a sniper Thursday night.

Police said Ben Westbrook, 50, Evansville, remained hospitalized in serious condition after surgery for a bullet wound in the abdomen. Police said he was shot by a sniper.

acting training program.

Concern for the physical condition of the men chosen for the first exploration of another celestial body has been so great that President Richard M. Nixon canceled plans to eat with them the night before Wednesday's launch, for fear they might pick up germs from him.

Before calling it quits today, Collins took a helicopter up and hovered over Patrick Air Force Base as the lunar module — LM — will hover in the search for a safe landing spot on the moon. Collins zipped across south Florida and back in a T38 jet trainer.

"It's a difficult schedule these guys have gone through," Berry said, but they made it with flying colors. The physician pronounced them in fine shape, "really looking good."

The countdown on the massive Saturn 5 booster rocket and the spacecraft perched atop it ticked off flawlessly toward Wednesday's scheduled blastoff. Only a few minor problems had developed.

Test equipment was disconnected from the spaceship and the lunar landing vehicle, preparatory to bringing them to a flight-ready condition.

Before an expected million visitors jamming the beaches, roadsides and waterways of this space center—and a huge around-the-world audience on television—the Saturn is scheduled to go off the pad at 9:32 a.m., launching the astronauts on the glamorous mission for which the nation has prepared for eight years.

Confidence was high that the Saturn, which has never failed an assignment, would come through again. The main perils of the flight will be encountered as Armstrong and Aldrin guide the fragile LM toward its touchdown on the crater-pocked surface of the moon, as they poke their way through the hostile environment and when they blast off again for the return home.

Here, says Apollo launch director Rocco A. Petrone, the spacemen encounter "the high risk, the big unknown." Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration warned the public to be prepared for the possibility of failure on the initial moon landing attempt.

Ross, who served one term as an Assemblyman from Los Angeles in 1955-56, is able to buy copies of the rolls from the state for a minimal price in comparison to what it would cost him to keep abreast of the changing rolls by his own means.

Ross gets $60 per 1,000 Senate newsletters or questionnaires sent out—or about $650,000 a year. Legislators pay their own postage out of an allotment given them by the state.

Stevens said he believes the contract for the work should be put out to bid with new specifications written.

"We want to write specifications for the bid and then it's going to be up for grabs," he said.

Novato Council Contracts For Study Of Downtown

The Novato City Council, in a special session today, approved contracts for a $43,467 federal-city financed study of downtown Novato, City Mgr. Charles A. Brown reported.

Novato will pay $13,385 of the total. The study, to be completed by July 14, 1970, will be done by the Sedway-Cooke planning firm in San Francisco.

Progress reports on the Sedway-Cooke study, which has been underway for six weeks, are due Tuesday, Oct. 15, Jan. 15 and April 15.

In other action, the council unanimously endorsed an Assembly bill to provide a $50 million local recreation fund to help local governments meet recreation needs. Brown said if the bill passes, Novato would get $37,570 while Marin County would get $100,239.

The council also opposed legislation that would make police and firemen negotiations subject to compulsory binding arbitration because it would infringe upon home rule by local governments, Brown said.

Novato Man Jailed In Beating

A fast-moving Novato man was booked into Marin County jail twice early today, the second time being held in lieu of $12,500 bail on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

The man, William Heatherton Hovey, 60, of 109 San Felipe Road, attacked his wife with a shovel, Novato police said.

Police said Hovey's wife, Ora, made a citizen's arrest of her husband during a family row and he was booked into the jail in San Rafael on suspicion of assault, a misdemeanor.

Hovey made $315 bail, however, and, according to officers, "beat the police back to the Novato city line." He forced his way back into his house by prying a sliding glass door, breaking a shovel in the process, police said.

He then attacked his wife with the shovel handle, police said. Officers were called again. Hovey was booked the second time on the felony count two hours and 25 minutes after the first booking.

can units have increased patrols and moved in reinforcements to counter the threat of enemy forces moving on foot and by sampan.

In addition, the allied command has concentrated artillery and tactical air strikes on Nui Ba Den, or Black Virgin Mountain, a jungled, 3,232-foot peak that dominates the flat ricelands along the Cambodian border.

A week-long bombardment of Nui Ba Den was climaxed early today when three B52 raids —the first ever against the mountain considered sacred to some Vietnamese—unloaded 540 tons of bombs on its slopes. The mountain is about seven miles northeast of Tay Ninh.

Jury Convicts Oakland Man In Robbery

A jury of eight women and four men in Marin Superior Court yesterday deliberated for six hours before finding a 20-year-old Oakland man guilty of the armed robbery of a Sausalito shop last July.

Convicted after his second trial on the charge was Warren Wilson, who faces similar charges in Oakland, according to Deputy Dist. Atty. John R. Thomas.

A trial earlier this year, also before Judge Thomas F. Keating, resulted in a mistrial when the jury split 7-5 over whether Wilson was guilty.

Judge Keating set sentencing for Monday.

Wilson was arrested 10 days after a theft from the Horn Shop which was followed by a wild shooting fray on Princess Street.

The jury yesterday found Wilson innocent of assault with a deadly weapon.

Mary Perrone Asks Divorce

Mary Louise Perrone, Sausalito businesswoman and recreation commissioner, has filed for divorce in Marin Superior Court to end a 17-year marriage to Lee Patrick Perrone.

Mrs. Perrone charged cruelty.

Her suit asks custody of the couple's son, David, 16, division of community property, which includes the home at 509 Johnson Street, insurance policies and Perrone's employment savings plan, support for herself and the son, and possession of the family home until further court order.

"Frankly, I'm getting awfully tired of the military plunging ahead on so many fronts without consulting Congress," Long said.

Secret testing at the Dugway installation in Utah drew nationwide attention last year when some 6,000 sheep were killed in the area. The commander of the test center which administers Dugway said last Dec. 6 he didn't believe the Army nerve gas caused the death of the sheep, but he said aerial testing had been stopped.

Bel Marin's Budget Rises

A $38,155 budget for fiscal 1969-70 has been approved by the board of directors of the Bel Marin Keys Community Service District, secretary Betty Zoeller reported yesterday.

The budget is $2,625 more than the $35,530 budget for last year, and the tax rate will remain at $1.25 per $100 assessed valuation, she said.

Some $20,000 will be placed in a special dredging fund, she said, and of the remaining $18,155, $13,605 will be used for operating expenses of the district. These include gardening and maintenance salaries, pool maintenance, election costs, insurance and other miscellaneous items.

That leaves $4,550 for capital outlay which will be used to improve landscaping on Caribe Park, Montego Park, the com munity center and pleasure island, she said.

No Talks Slated On Ferry Strike

No new negotiations were scheduled today in the 38-day strike by marine engineers against Harbor Tours Inc., which has idled ferryboat and tour boats on San Francisco Bay.

About 200 Marin residents formerly commuted to jobs in San Francisco each day from the Tiburon pier.

Lester Bedient, general manager of Harbor Tours, said the company and union are far apart on their proposals for a pay hike in the first year of a three-year contract.

The engineers earned $690 a month when their contract expired and are seeking raises in the first year to about $1,125, Bedient said. The last company offer was $800 a month.

Bible School Dates Are Set

Sign ups are being accepted for the vacation Bible school sponsored by he Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Tiburon. The school will run from July 28 through Aug. 8.

Communists," Thanh said. "We do not say that (they are). They will have to behave as if they are not Communists. If they do not, they will violate the laws of the land."

He said Thieu's proposals do not violate the South Vietnamese constitution which outlaws Communists but did not rule out that changes in the constitution might be considered at the Paris talks.

"Only when the results of the Paris talks touch on the constitution, then at that time the problem will be raised," Thanh said. "At that time proposals for alterations will be made if necessary, but if we raise the questions now, and the Communists keep on fighting, where are we then?"

The foreign minister said further details of the election proposals can be worked out later when the enemy had pledged to renounce violence, the North Vietnamese had gone back to North Vietnam and the NLF had stopped shellings and terrorist attacks.

"Cliffs at Bolinas Point and Duxbury Point, just south of the slide area, are retreating under the impact of wave attack at a rate of one foot to three feet per year."

"Finally, the proximity of the area to the San Andreas fault is a factor, in that earthquake shocks provide the lateral accelerations sufficient to overcome the frictional resistance to sliding."

Higher Density Before Planners In Mill Valley

The Mill Valley Planning Commission will consider a request by Cal-Fong Investments for an amendment to the city's master plan to allow 5.4 dwelling units per acre instead of the present three at its 8 p.m. meeting Monday in the city council chambers.

The commission also will review the city engineer's plan for the Miller Avenue extension from the city limits to Highway 101, the county sign ordinance and storage of campers, vacation and home trailers in residential areas.

The commission will receive a letter from the California Roadside Council seeking Mill Valley's opposition to "the ultimate atrocity in outdoor advertising" — a system of advertising by projecting a changing series of messages on the walls of buildings.

The Costa Mesa Planning Commission has approved such a system, the first city in California to do so, the roadside council said.

Counties Receive Vehicle Fees

Russ Warships Likely To See Apollo Launch

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) —A U.S. destroyer escort trailed six Russian warships sailing toward Cuba today along a route that will put them off Cape Kennedy for Wednesday's Apollo 11 moonshot.

The flotilla was en route to Cuba for the first visit of Russian warships. It's due to arrive July 20 and stay through the celebration of Cuba's revolution July 26 and Soviet Navy Day July 27.

It was about 260 miles southeast of Jacksonville.

This is the closest Soviet warships ever have come to U.S. shores. Russian fishing vessels, however, often sail within a few miles of American coasts. The task force includes two guided missile destroyers, one designated for attacks on shipping and one designed primarily for air defense; two fox trot class torpedo attack submarines, the latest of Russia's diesel-powered submarines; one submarine tender; and two oilers.

The flotilla is spread over several miles in classic antisubmarine screen formation.

They were placed under surveillance by a Canadian destroyer one week ago and monitored periodically by U.S. Navy patrol planes from bases along the East Coast.

The destroyer escort Thomas J. Gary has been following about 6,000 yards behind since Wednesday night.

Four U.S. Navy planes, one carrying newsmen and photographers flew over the small fleet yesterday for more than one hour. The Russians seemed not to notice at all.

The United States regards the voyage as one more assertion of Russia's naval power. The United States also concedes the Soviet ships have a right to be where they are and to go where they are going as part of the freedom of the seas.

New Tiburon Fireman Hired

The Tiburon Fire Protection District board Thursday approved the hiring of Craig L. Stannard of 2 Venus Court, Tiburon, to replace Richard F. Wagner in the city's fire department.

The district board received a report from its scuba firefighting team that it is now able to fight waterfront fires from the water and is constructing a special firefighting float for such purposes.

In other action, the board authorized Buscher to purchase for $1,546 a recorder, walkie talkie and three home receivers.

The board will meet again at 8 p.m. Monday.

OIL and GAS FUNDS
May Be Costing You Money!

Two meetings will be held on this little known aspect of investing on Wed., July 16. The first will be a luncheon at the EL RANCHO-TROPICANA, 2200 Santa Rosa Ave., Santa Rosa at 12:00 noon. The second will be a dinner meeting at SONOMA JOES, Hwy. 101 North Petaluma at 7:30 p.m.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Phobias Plague Teen-Age Girl, Boyfriend Is No Help, Hinders

DEAR HELEN:

I have lots of fears that I'm trying to get over. Like I used to be terribly afraid of dogs, but I gradually learned to like them by watching a dog from a distance, then getting closer until finally I could pet him.

But I made the mistake of telling my boy friend about my fears and he thinks he'll cure me right now. I'm awfully afraid of heights. So he takes me on steep mountain roads where you have to look straight down, and even makes me get out and look over the edge of cliffs. He says we have to go up to the top of the Empire State Building and I'm afraid to say "no," and scared silly just thinking about it.

I am also afraid of trains, as we almost had a train accident when I was young, and I can still see that big spotlight from the engine bearing down on us. So the other night, my boy friend parked right in the middle of the railroad tracks and held me there while a freight train rumbled closer. When the engine light was almost on top of us, he moved on. I got hysterical and had to stay in bed two days.

I love my boy friend and know he thinks he's doing right, but please won't you tell him he's driving me crazy? —CYNTHIA

DEAR CYNTIHA:

If your boy friend doesn't stop practicing amateur (and totally wrong) "psychiatry," he'll turn your fears into real psychoses! Why don't you consult an expert counsellor — and take your b.f. with you!

A gradual "unlearning" of fears (your "dog" therapy) can save you — not shock treatment. — H

DEAR HELEN:

I seem to be all mixed up and need to talk to someone, but who? Psychiatrists cost money. My minister or school counsellor just couldn't understand, and besides they know my family. I'd be too ashamed. I don't have close friends. That's one of my problems. I've even thought of suicide.

Is there any place where a teen-ager can pour it out without having it come back to his folks? And for free? — DESPERATE BOY

DEAR DESPERATE:

Your city — Lancaster, Pa. — has just what you need: Teen Problems Anonymous. The number is in your telephone book.

Here, you may call an anonymous counsellor who will listen wisely, help you re-think your problems and, if necessary, refer you to an expert who will give further aid. You do not need to reveal your name, and your discussions are completely confidential. — H.

NOTE TO READERS: Other cities have similar free telephone services. In Sacramento it's Youth Life Line; at Los Angeles, Hot Line; and Omaha, Neb., offers Guidelines and Personal Crisis Service.

In addition, many areas now have suicide prevention centers where distraught persons of any age may call for immediate help.

Numbers are in your local telephone book — or you may find them by asking your operator, or calling the Mental Health Association in your city. — H.

Novato Woman Elected Head Of National Church Group

Mrs. Clifford O. Le Rud of Novato was elected national president of the American Lutheran Church Women, an organization of 700,000 members, at the convention held in Minneapolis in June.

She has also been a member at large on the national ALCW board and has served as local, conference and district president during her many years as a member. She is also a member of the Lutheran Social Service Auxiliary of Northern California.

The women of All Saints Lutheran Church in Novato will honor Mrs. Le Rud at a tea from 2 to 5 p.m. tomorrow.

Mrs. Le Rud is a member of the church and all neighboring ALC members have been invited to the tea.

She was a member of Christ Victor Church in Fairfax before moving to Novato. She and her husband, general agent for Central Life Assurance of Des Moines, plan to move back to San Rafael next month where they lived before moving to Novato. They have lived in Marin County 12 years.

The Le Ruds have three daughters. Mrs. Clinton Bell lives in San Anselmo; Mrs. Ronald Thoreson, of San Diego County is married to a Lutheran minister; and Mrs. Steven Jensen is married to a student at the Theological Seminary in Springfield, Ohio. Mrs. Jensen was graduated from Wittenburg University in Springfield last month.

Music and reading are among the new president's hobbies. She says she does not participate in playing an instrument but she is an "encourager" and her daughters play piano and organ and sing and direct choirs. She also says she is interested in politics.

She attended a state teacher's college in Minnesota and taught school there for a time.

She will be traveling a great deal this next year as national president and her first trip will be on July 20 to Houston, Tex., to the international convention of the Lutheran Women's Mission League of the Missouri Synod. As a delegate from the church in July 1970 she will attend the Lutheran World Assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil.

Packaging Can Be Dangerous

NEW YORK (WMNS) — It's child's play for the average child to open most containers of medicine and to swallow a potentially dangerous dose.

This has been established by a team of pediatricians who, searching for child-proof packaging, brought together several hundred children and different types of packages containing attractive candy pellets or mock aspirins.

Confronted with a screw cap bottle, the children, ranging in age from 18 months to four years, needed less than 10 minutes to seize and swallow 10 capsules. The popular snap-type "safety caps" proved almost as accessible. Very young children were defeated by medicine packed in strips but most four-year-olds attained their goal in a few minutes.

Most child-proof of the packaging proved to be the blister pack, in which tablets mounted on a card are individually covered with hard, bubble-shaped transparent plastic, and palm-and-turn (pressure release) caps. These provide virtual inaccessibility to children of the poison-prone age.

TIMOTHY LYNN GOEPPNER claimed Linda Elaine Garner as his bride on Friday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Garner and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goeppner, all of Novato. Following a wedding trip to Canada the couple will live in Novato.

Village Salvage Shop Names New President

A Marin resident since early childhood, Mrs. Bruce McAllister of Tiburon, has been elected president of the Village Salvage Shop Board of Directors.

Muriel McAllister, the former Muriel Scotford, grew up in San Anselmo, where her father, Robert H. Scotford, still makes his home. She was educated at St. Anselm's School, attended Dominican Lower School and was graduated from Dominican Upper School before attending Lux College for Women in San Francisco.

Muriel's husband, Bruce McAllister, is a salesman with All State Plywood, Inc. They have two children, Robert, 10, and Margaret, 8.

A former treasurer of the organization she now heads, Mrs. McAllister has been on the Salvage Shop board for a year. The board is made up of two members from each of the participating organizations which operate the shop. Directors serve for two years. Reed Union School Parent-Teachers Club, St. Hilary's Parish, St. Stephens Guild, and United Presbyterian Women of the Westminister Presbyterian Church staff the Parent-Teachers Club, and is a shop on Tiburon's Main Street, and share the proceeds of the shop, which was founded in 1952.

Traditional special events for the shop are an annual fashion show and boutique, scheduled this year for Oct. 2, and a spring celebration of the organization's founding.

Mrs. McAllister is also active in the Tiburon Peninsula Club and the Bel Aire unit of the Reed Parent-Teachers Club, and is a volunteer in the school nurse aide program at Bel Aire School. She's interested in sewing, tennis, and is a Little League baseball fan.

Other incoming officers are Mmes. William Meyers, secretary; Frank McDonald, recording secretary, and Jack Coleman, treasurer.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Mills of San Francisco, had as his best man his brother, James Mills of Berkeley. Ushers were the bride's brothers, Gregory and Gary Wittenmeier of Mill Valley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley. Afterward the couple left for a wedding trip to Dearborn, Mich., to visit the bridegroom's brother and sisters, David Mills, Mrs. Thomas P. Tucker and Mrs. George Danz.

A graduate of Marin Catholic High School and the University of Santa Clara with an A.B. degree and teaching credentials, Gayle is employed with the Tamalpais Union High School District. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. May Wittenmeier of Burlingame.

George was graduated from St. Alphonsus High School in Dearborn and from the University of San Francisco with a B.A. degree and teaching credentials. He is employed in the work study center of San Rafael City Schools.

Girls Are Attendants

The daughters of Mrs. Nancy Elizabeth Wilkins of San Anselmo and Gordon Edward Whitmore of Larkspur, were among the attendants at the couple's wedding on July 4. Elizabeth Wilkins and Kandy Whitmore were bridesmaids at the wedding held in Carson City.

Mrs. Fred Harker of Kentfield was matron of honor and her husband was best man. The reception followed at Pioneer Inn in Reno with the couple taking a wedding trip to South Lake Tahoe and Yosemite Valley. They will live in Larkspur.

Mrs. Whitmore is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Finnery of San Anselmo and is the sister of Mrs. Russell Seeley and Charles Finney, both of San Rafael.

Mrs. Eva Whitmore of San Anselmo is the mother of the bridegroom and Mrs. John Benedict of San Anselmo is his sister. He is the owner of Whitmore Rug Cleaners in San Francisco where Nancy is employed. Gordon has a son, Craig Whitmore, who was unable to attend.

Fold Line Creates Problems

DEAR EUNICE,

I forgot that you suggested not using the fold line of the fabric for any section of our garment that will show. I didn't refold my fabric as you told us to do and now I have a crease that simply won't come out, marching right down the center front of my dress.

MRS. S. N.

DEAR MRS. S. N.:

Happily, there are some ideas you may use and perhaps they will give your dress much more zip. You didn't mention the type of fabric you used so I shall give you several ideas. First, you could use one of the marvelous striped grosgrain ribbons straight down the front, perhaps also using the same ribbon for a belt. If the fabric is a solid color, you could use any of a variety of embroidered edgings, some of the very newest looks are achieved by using a band of heavily embroidered cotton lace about 3-4 inches wide as a decorative trim down the center front of your dress. This could be repeated at the hem. If you desire, you can place the lace edging at the hem so that the lower edge of the lace comes at the exact finished edge of your dress. After the lace has been secured, cut away the fabric from behind the lace and you'll have the very newest "see-through" look!

MRS. MILDRED WHITE of San Diego is this week's winner of the Tailor Trix pressing board for her suggestion.

"After completing an A-line skirt with a bias band for the waistline instead of the conventional type waistband, I found that the waist was too large. I was determined not to remove the band so proceeded to use a large darning or needlepoint needle, threaded the small round elastic through my needle and ran it through the bias band. Two rows of elastic could be used if more strength is needed. The elastic has eased the waistband to the right size and is actually the best fitting skirt I have.

DEAR MRS. FARMER:

I am past middle age and don't like to wear sleeveless dresses. Can you tell me how to go about adding a sleeve to a completed dress so it won't have a patched look when finished?

MRS. W. G.

DEAR MRS. W. G.:

You will have to remove the facing from the sleeveless dress and press the seams flat again. You may also have to make the underarm seam slightly deeper. You might pick up one of the colors of your dress, or solid white and cut the sleeves from a dress pattern you already have. Most set-in sleeves will fit in any pattern.

In order to avoid the patched look, you could apply a small band of the dress fabric at the lower edge of the sleeve, (perhaps you could use the belt of the dress for this, or face the hem in order to get a few scraps of your dress fabric).

You could also use a contrast fabric for the sleeves and then repeat the same fabric for a tie at the neck, a bias collar, or whatever, and you'll have the jumper look with your dress.

DEAR MRS. FARMER:

I know you hate to repeat questions, but I am one of your readers who have never before made a dress with a fitted bodice because I was encouraged to learn to sew when all the styles were perfectly straight with no fitting through the bodice.

My first venture with a shirtwaist dress has almost made me give up sewing. I have a large rib cage and when I put the darts in the bodice for a fitted look, it is not the least bit flattering. Please give me a workable answer.

MRS. S. K.

DEAR MRS. S. K.:

For those of you who do have this kind of figure, please clip this column for future reference.

When you select a pattern that has a fitted bodice with a waistline seam, it is better to look for a pattern that has a dart at the side seam as well as one under the bustline for fitting. If there is only one dart in the pattern, it would be too large to eliminate.

You will proceed by making the dart at the side seam but eliminate the dart under the bust. Instead of the dart, you could make one or two small unpressed tucks or simply gather the section under the bust using the same amount of fabric that you would have taken up in the dart. You will have almost the same effect but a slightly softer bodice that won't call attention to the large rib cage.

If you have a problem with sleeves, send for the booklet "All About Sleeves." It gives detailed directions on setting in a sleeve so that it hangs correctly. Please include 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request and mail to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

FAIRFAX ISSUES DEBATED AGAIN

Administrator, Council Pay, Budget Talks Delay Action On Employee Pay

The old arguments over whether Fairfax should have a city administrator and whether the city councilmen should pay themselves salaries reared up again last night as the council eked its way through another budget session.

The council, which has had a half dozen sessions on the proposed budget, again failed to take action on raising the pay of city employees.

It also received but took no action on, a whole new set of budget figures from Councilman Frank J. Egger, which he claimed would give raises up to 10 per cent, boost the city's money reserves and keep the tax rate unchanged.

The proposed 1969-70 budget proposed earlier of about $539,000 would boost the city's tax rate by 6 cents, from $1.74 to $1.80 per $100 valuation.

POLITICS CHARGED

Twice during last night's three-and-a-hald hour session there were suggestions that some council members were playing politics with the budget consideration.

Mayor Francis J. O'Connell kicked off the session with the cryptic remark, "We'll now open the 1969-70 campaign."

Later, during discussion of the council's salaries, Councilman Robert R. Souza said salary opponent Adelaide P. Wilson was "really belaboring the point." He said, "I think it's more political than anything."

Mrs. Wilson, as she had frequently done in the past, objected to council salaries, saying, "I don't feel in the context of the poverty of Fairfax that council pay is valid at this time. We've cut a lot of things from the budget that are more valid."

She said the 6-cent tax rate could be avoided if the council did not pay itself $150 a month, which amounts to $9,000 a year.

She and Egger, however, were one again defeated on the salary question which has come before the council several times before with the same split.

MORE SESSIONS AHEAD

The decision on how much to increase salaries was delayed until the council gets exact figures on how the total budget has changed after cuts and adds that have been made. The council will meet at 8 p.m. Monday and possibly will schedule still another budget session on salaries.

Egger's budget figures made cuts totaling up to $25,199 and adds as high as $22,233 but none of his four alternatives called for a tax increase.

The biggest — and most controversial — item was adding $12,600 for a full-time city administrator and cutting back the salary of Frances Lestanguet, the city clerk who has been doubling as administrator.

Egger, who said he only presented the proposals for council study and not action, had a testy exchange with Mrs. Lestanguet as she went through his proposals line by line, challenging many of his specific cuts or adds.

On the question of city administrator, Egger gently suggested he and Mrs. Lestanguet had "a difference of philosophies." Mrs. Lestanguet snapped back, "What about the work, that's what I'm concerned with, not philosophies."

Later, Souza convinced the council to delay action on reinstituting a city administrator's job until a study of the functions of the city offices can be made by the state Cooperative Personnel Service. O'Connell and Councilman Cornelis Van Vliet opposed the study which could cost up to $500.

Souza also tried to get the city to withdraw from the Association of Bay Area Governments and tangled with Mrs. Wilson, who is a delegate to ABAG. His motion was defeated, this time with O'Connell joining him.

Earlier, the council had voted, with Souza and Egger opposing, to cut $700 from the city's expenditures for attending regional and state organization governmental meetings.

The council defeated an action, with Souza and O'Connell on the losing end, to cut funds for planning consultant services and passed a motion, with Souza again opposing, to cut $750 for the repair of the city office floor.

A motion to increase funds for road resurfacing from $12,000 to $13,000 was defeated, with Souza and Van Vliet voting for the change.

Ballad Opera Wins Honors

The National Federation of Music Clubs has awarded the Dominican College American Music Research Center the 4-star award of merit for its performance of the ballad opera "the Chambermaid," originally presented in 1730.

In 18th Century America people flocked to the theater if ballad operas were being given. "The Chambermaid" is typical of dozens of such operas. The performances were given at Dominican College in February 1969, in Angelico Hall.

Responsible for the production were stage director Arthur Conrad, members of the Dominican College Opera Workshop and musical director Sister Mary Dominic, O.P., who put together 23 original airs by composers of the era with a chorus, overture and dance, fitting the words of the play to them.

Gate Span Directors Drop Lobbyist From The Budget

Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District directors, after an hour of acrimonious debate, adopted yesterday a budget totaling $3,837,919 for fiscal 1969-70.

The budget was up $425,278 over last fiscal year, largely because of a stepped-up program to sandblast and repaint the bridge, said Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring.

The acrimony was over the annual issue of hiring a lobbyist in Sacramento for $16,000 a year — a job held since 1961 by former Assembly Speaker Gordon Garland. For the first time, the appropriation failed to win enough votes, and was stricken from the budget.

The 15 directors present voted, 9-5, to approve the item, one short of the 19 needed. The three absent directors had indicated they would vote against it, thus there was little chance it could be inserted back into the budget in a future vote.

The budget is supported from toll revenues and surplus income from bonds, and often is expanded during the fiscal year to meet unexpected expenses. No property tax is levied by the six-county district.

Director Lowell Edington of Napa County argued in vain for the $25,000 to help pay for a lobbyist "to keep abreast of internal fighting and pressures that go on in the Legislature."

But Director Ben K. Lerer of San Francisco, terming the district "just a little bridge," said, "I don't think our problems are that involved" to require a lobbyist.

Director Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley added "we need a lobbyist like a hole in the head."

All three of Marin's representatives, Meyer, Supervisor Michael Wornum and Joseph E. Sheeks of Belvedere, joined to defeat the legislative item with directors Lerer, John E. Dearman and Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco.

Controversy also erupted over the request by the district's attorney, Jerome B. White of San Francisco, for a raise in his annual retainer from $14,753 to $20,400. White has been criticized by several new directors for giving legal opinions that were "too conservative."

But, after meeting behind closed doors for 20 minutes, they voted unanimously to hike White's retainer to $17,500. White accepted the increase.

One director, who declined to be identified, told the Independent-Journal that the vote was unanimous because White "probably will resign in the near future" since the district may hire a full-time attorney if it goes into the bus and ferry business.

White, 85, has been the district's attorney since 1957.

A third controversial item was $38,500 for public relations, including a $25,000 contribution to the Redwood Empire Association, an $8,500 contribution to the San Francisco Visitors and Convention Bureau, and $5,000 for direct mail and display printing and advertising.

Wornum, conceding he previously intended to oppose these expenditures, said he had concluded that the two tourist organizations "do a great service to the bridge district area, and Marin, and it's better than doing it from the property tax."

Edington moved to approve the annual contracts with the two organizations as soon as the budget was approved, but Wornum and others successfully had the contracts referred to committee for study. Wornum accused Edington of "unseemly haste."

Edington, whose legislation-public relations committee is to review the contracts, said it would report back to the board at its July 25 meeting in Santa Rosa.

In the end, the budget was passed, 14-1, Dearman dissenting because he objected to the Redwood Empire Association contribution.

The motion to pass the budget almost got lost in a maze of cross motions, and a clearly irritated Daniel F. Del Carlo declared he was "sick and tired of hearing you goddamn lawyers practice your profession here." He is a San Francisco labor leader.

The board previously had approved salary increases for other district employees.

The biggest item in the budget was $906,900 for painting the bridge, including a crew of 38 and supplies.

The amount budgeted for toll collecting dropped from $805,023 to $672,076 because of fewer men needed for the one-way system.

In other business, directors referred to the commuters' affairs committee the Arthur D. Little Inc. ferry feasibility study.

Also referred to committee was a proposal by director Carl Daubeneck of Ukiah that Vista Point, at the north end of the bridge, be renamed in honor of the late Clyde M. Edmondson, founder and former general manager of the Redwood Empire Association.

No Charges Filed After Narcotics Raid

No complaint was issued yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against three young men arrested Thursday by narcotics agents in Mill Valley.

Robert Douglas Wayne, 22, of Mill Valley, Eric Williams, 19, of Takilma, Ore., and Elmore Grady Philpot, 21, of Miami, Fla., were arrested on suspicion of having marijuana and LSD when agents served a warrant on Wayne for a 1968 drug sale charge from Orange County.

A BUSY DOZEN YEARS

Frederic Kerr Ready To Try Quiet Life

By PATRICK SULLIVAN

In 1957, the year Russia lifted Sputnik I into space, Marin civic leader Frederic D. Kerr was launching his own projects.

It was the year he merged his accounting firm into partnership with Harry J. Cooper, was elected to a board of freeholders charged with drafting a county charter and was named president of the Marin County Humane Society.

In the busy years since, the accounting firm flourished, the charter proposal was completed, giving him a sense of accomplishment although the voters later rejected the proposal, and the humane society grew to where it financed and built a new, modern facility in Ignacio.

And there was his race for county supervisor in 1960, auditing assignments for Corte Madera, Fairfax, San Anselmo and other communities.

Now, in 1969 Kerr is charting a new, quieter life: retirement on tiny San Juan Island in northwestern Washington State.

Kerr was feted last night at a surprise testimonial dinner held at the Humane Society building in Novato to honor the popular, husky-voiced civic leader.

"I don't know where those last 12 years went," he said in an interview.

Kerr, 58, is not the type to look back longingly. He is such a forward-looker that he is able to predict confidently that the coming years will prove to be the best of his life.

He thoroughly scouted the island on several visits earlier in the 60s, made a checklist of what the place offered in the way of opportunities and then five years ago bought a one-acre plot on the west side of San Juan Island with a view of the lights of Victoria, British Columbia's island city across the Haro Strait.

The inducements he found were a chance to put his do-it-yourself inclinations to work on a new home, a local government that seems to be in need of his talents as an accounting specialist, and, nearby, his two brothers, who already have settled on the 54-square-mile island.

The three will be together for the first time since Kerr was 8, in a place he finds inspiring.

"You feel like it is a whole different world," he said. "The ferryboat pulls in, you drive up a ramp and then see this little, old-time place with a main street about two blocks long.

"If I hadn't found this place I'd probably never leave Marin County," he added.

The only sizeable town on the island is Friday Harbor, population about 400. Kerr's home will be on the west side, about eight miles away. He will have a view of freighter traffic on Haro Strait and schools of whales that pass through during the migratory season.

Kerr retired from the humane society and as Mill Valley finance director July 1, after earlier phasing out of the San Rafael accounting firm of Cooper and Kerr.

However, it is with perhaps the most reluctance that he leaves the humane society, he indicated.

Over the years as it grew, culminating in the completion of a modern animal shelter and humane education center last year, the society provided him rich experiences, he said.

Kerr said he was over and over again touched when he would see the look on the faces of children who visited the center to feel and learn about animals.

"It makes you realize the tremendous potential in using animals to help people," Kerr said. Involvement with animals, he believes, aids persons to learn how to give of themselves and remove their thoughts from their own private concerns.

"I am a believer in animal welfare to aid people welfare," he said.

Kerr and his wife, Bernice, plan to complete their move later this year. He is planning a preliminary trip to the island some time this month.

Pope's Next Trip—Africa

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, who recently made a historic visit to Geneva, Switzerland, the heartland of Calvinist tradition, plans another "first" — a trip to Africa this month.

Nearly every one of his trips has been a "first" of some sort.

When he traveled to the Holy Land in January 1964, it made him the first Pope to fly, the first Pope to use a jet, the first Pope since the time of St. Peter to go to the Holy Land and the first Pope to set foot in Moslem Jordan and Jewish Israel.

In December 1964, he traveled to India, becoming the first modern Pope to visit an Asian land. His trip to the United Nations in New York in October 1965, was the first papal transatlantic crossing in history and the first papal visit to America. He was in Fatima, Portugal, in May 1967, for a first papal visit to that country.

He was the first Pope in 12 centuries to go to Turkey, when he visited Istanbul in July 1967 and he was the first Pope to go to Latin America when he flew there last August.

The last Pope to leave Italy before Paul was Pius VII. Napolean had him seized in Rome in 1809 and kept him a political prisoner in France until 1814. John XXII made a 400-mile train trip within Italy in 1962 and his successor, Paul, set the new pattern for the jet age in his self-styled mission as "an apostle on the move."

When Pope Paul carries out his current travel plans this summer, he will have flown by jetliner more than 44,000 miles — almost twice around the earth.

On July 31, he will head for the heart of Africa on his first visit to that continent and his eighth trip abroad. His purpose is to consecrate a shrine to 22 black martyrs in Kampala, capital of Uganda on the north shore of Lake Victoria.

Uganda, which straddles the equator, has 2.8 million Catholics among its population of 7.75 million. It also has other Christians, Moslems and animists, those who believe there are spirits in all objects.

The Uganda martyrs, slain in the late 19th Century during religious persecution, were canonized in 1964.

Besides dedicating the shine in Kampala, the 71-year-old Pope said he would meet prelates at the first All-Africa bishops' conference.

Referring to the 29 million Roman Catholics in Africa, the Pope told a crowd at a papal mass in March:

"We have been repeatedly and pressingly invited by many bishops and the faithful to make a visit to Africa, particularly to Uganda, where the new sanctuary is being busily constructed and where an altar has been raised to the honor of the African martyrs whom we have had the blessed fortune to canonize."

A CATHOLIC DRIVE

Parochial School Support Is Noted

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The Roman Catholic Church has made some headway during the past six months in its drive for public support for parochial schools.

It is not enough to suit Catholics who see their school system threatened with financial disaster, but more than enough for opponents who view state aid to religious schools as unconstitutional.

A survey by the National Catholic Educational Association reveals that bills were introduced in legislatures of 26 states this year to provide some form of assistance to non-public schools.

The biggest Catholic victories were won in Connecticut and Rhode Island. Both enacted laws — patterned after one which Pennsylvania adopted last year — under which the state will pay part of the salaries of parochial school teachers who instruct students in secular subjects.

Similar legislation passed the House of Delegates in Illinois but was killed in the State Senate.

In Michigan, a bill to provide up to $44 million annually in indirect state aid to parochial schools was defeated on the initial test vote in the House of Representatives, but is eligible for reconsideration later.

The Massachusetts legislature approved an amendment to the state constitution to authorize public assistance to religious schools. The amendment must be approved in a state-wide popular referendum to take effect.

In New York, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has announced he will appoint a commission to study state aid to nonpublic schools.

Pennsylvania's experiment with state aid began with a modest fund of $4.5 million a year. A bill to boost the contribution to $40 million in the coming fiscal year was passed by the House of Representatives, but is hung up in the State Senate education committee, whose chairman told UPI that passage at this session is "highly unlikely."

The constitutionality of the Pennsylvania plan is being challenged in federal court by Americans United For Separation of Church and State, a predominantly Protestant organization opposed to use of public funds for religious schools.

The Pennsylvania plan is based on the theory that the state is not supporting religious schools as such, but is merely purchasing services — secular education of children — in the same way that states have long contracted to buy medical care for the indigent from church-sponsored hospitals.

Another approach is for the state to make payments to parents in partial reimbursement of tuition paid at nonpublic schools. Bills to provide for such tuition grants have been introduced this year in the legislatures of Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, New Mexico, Texas and Wisconsin. So far, none has been enacted.

A UPI count indicates that half of the 50 states now extend some kind of public aid to parochial schools or their students.

The most common kind of aid found in 23 states, is free bus transportation. In some cases, this is limited to routes along which public school buses would be moving anyway.

Six states — New York, Connecticut, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico and Hawaii — provide textbooks for parochial school students.

ST. FRANCIS OF THE GUNS GOES ON TOUR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 9-foot statue of St. Francis of Assisi is being carried to 10 early Franciscan missions en route to San Diego where it will be part of San Francisco's contribution to California's bicentennial.

The statue, St. Francis of the Guns, by Benny Bufano, is scheduled to arrive in time for display at opening ceremonies Wednesday at Mission San Diego. Franciscan Father Junipero Serra founded the mission, the first in California, July 16, 1769.

The statue, partly cast from guns turned in after the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy, depicts four fallen national leaders on the friar's tunic.

It was dedicated as a memorial to Abraham Lincoln, John F. Kennedy, Robert F. Kennedy and Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

The statue departed from Mission Dolores yesterday on the 550 mile journey.

TO DIRECT EVENT — A "Kid's Krusade" will be given for children of all ages starting at 7 p.m. Monday and continue nightly through Friday at the North Marin Assembly of God at 1370 South Novato Boulevard, Novato. Rev. and Mrs. Norman Kaupanger will conduct the event which features prizes, puppet shows, flannelgraph stories, magic object lessons, chalk artistry, special music and many othe rattractions. There is no charge for the crusade which is open to the children of all denominations.

Teacher Wins Baptist Contest

J. Winston Pearce, professor of preaching at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry, has won top honors in a contest to encourage preaching on the Southern Baptist Conventionn's 1969-70 theme, "Living the Spirit of Christ in Belief and Relevance."

Pearce was awarded $150 first place prize in the contest sponsored by the 70 Onward Committee of the Southern Baptist Inter-Agency Council.

His sermon was entitled: "Go Tell it on the Mountain . . . and Don't Forget the Valley."

Retired Chaplain Will Fill Pulpit

Rev. Howard Scholten, retired chaplain from Hamilton Air Force Base, will fill the pulpit at the 7:30 and 9:15 a.m. services tomorrow through Aug. 3 at St. Francis Episcopal Church in Novato, while Rev. Lloyd Gebhart is on vacation.

Schclten is now serving as the chaplain at the San Rafael Military Academy and at the Mill Valley Air Force Station.

Special Sermon On Spage Age Slated Tomorrow

Rev. George P. Carter will discuss "The Ethics of Outer Space" at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the Methodist Church of Mill Valley.

In the sermon, Carter will call for the development of a responsible social foundation for outer space and will specify five demands made by Space Age living if a responsible social and political basis for cooperation in outer space is to be found.

Two barriers to the establishment of such a foundation, according to Carter, will be the usual separation of technological matters from moral decision making and the thrust of national sovereignty which seems to block effective cooperation in outer space.

RELIGIOUS SHOCKERS

Scholar Sees Disappearance Of Sermons, Sunday Services

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Out of the murkiness of the present commotion and changes in the churches, a Protestant scholar has taken a long look at the eventual results of it all—and he sees some shockers ahead.

Among them: The disappearance of sermons and Sunday morning church services; growing interest in Jesus and less in the mystery of God; broad church consolidations; multiple memberships by some believers in more than one church.

Rev. Roland W. Tapp, of Philadelphia, a United Presbyterian specialist in religious education, says "part of the upheaval now going on in the churches is temporary, but much of it will have permanent effects."

RESEARCH TOUR

Recently on a three-month research assignment for analysis and planning, Dr. Tapp said in an interview that indications are that the organizational structures of churches "are not going to make it" to the end of the century.

"The long-range prospects are good for essential Judeo-Christianity, but not for the institutions," he said.

Dr. Tapp, a one-time missionary, California pastor and World War II bomber pilot, is a former professor of psychology and philosophy of religion at Kentucky's Center College and of Biblical languages at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

LIVELY PREVIEW

On his denomination's Board of Christian Education for the past decade as associate editor of its publication house, Westminster Press, he offered his lively preview of the future church at a recent gathering of religious publishers.

Items on the forecast included:

A renactment of the fundamentalist-liberal fight of 50 years ago . . . It already has resulted in a marked polarization of the church at all levels...The split may become irreparable.--

With Protestants and Roman Catholics "no longer in real dispute" over major doctrines, they will move increasingly toward "merger at practical levels"—between fundamental Protestants and fundamental Catholics, and between liberal Protestants and liberal Catholics.

Most institutional members will be 45 years old, and up. "There will be a steady decrease in total membership...fewer youths will join the church."

On the other hand, there will be "increasing interest in religion and Christianity" among college students and young adults but "they will continue to avoid the institutional church."

Christian teachers will see themselves "more as fellow-seekers" rather than "transmitters of a heritage." They "will be more interested in Jesus and less in God" even though this seems a "flat contradiction in Biblical terms."

TEETH GNASHING

The Consultation on Church Union will bring unification of major Protestant denominations amid "great wailing and gnashing of teeth," but the new connective church "will be no more of a monolith than it is now."

Christian educational curriculums henceforth will be produced interdenominationally, on a national or regional basis. Church school teaching will be by 3-D color TV hookups among clusters of churches.

"Sermons are out. And so is the Sunday morning worship service at 11 o'clock. The death rattle will be long and loud and gruesome."

MAIN SHIFT

The main theological shift will be away from the doctrine of divine transcendence toward a "doctrine of panentheism," which holds that "God is in everything," in contrast from pantheism, which says "God is everything."

Racial integration "will be a fact within the churches . . . It already is a workable everyday fact at headquarters levels."

Church property, valued totally at $30 billion, will go on tax rolls. "In a pluralistic society with Christians rapidly becoming a minority, this kind of tax-exempt wealth simply cannot be tolerated. It won't be."

GUEST SPEAKER — Rev. Richard A. Williams will be the guest speaker at the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services tomorrow at the North Marin Assembly of God at 1370 South Novato Boulevard, Novato. At the present time, he is the director of college campus ministries for the Assemblies of God of Northern California. He will be assisted by a student from the University of California, Bill Tenant, who will relate his experience of finding Jesus Christ.

Guest Speaker

Rev. Norman Campbell, missionary to Argentina, will speak at the 11 a.m. service July 20 of the Southern Marin Assembly of God church, Mill Valley.

SLEEPY HOLLOW! SLEEPY HOLLOW!

This Valley was once a prehistoric river bed. Later an Indian burial ground, and about 1840 the Mexican bandit "El Imperator" made the Valley his hideout. Around the turn of the century one of the largest dairy operations in the Bay Area. In 1935, it became the second largest golf course in the world.

Today this prime residential community offers a way of life, a setting of lush luxuriant growth unequalled in Marin. Two excellent elementary schools, parochial school as well, miles of horseback riding trails; a complete recreation center with supervised Olympic sized swimming pool. Minimum ⅓-acre building sites, 100-ft. street frontages. Wide tree-lined streets. We are pleased to offer the following residences listed with our office.

$64,950 SHADES OF NEW ENGLAND

Firemen Rescue Baby From Pool

Firemen saved a 1-year-old Corte Madera child with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation Thursday after she fell into a swimming pool at the rear of a vacant dwelling at 21 Staghound Passage, Fire Chief Frank L. Nelson reported.

Bridget Meriwether, daughter of Lydia Meriwether of 13 Staghound Passage, was taken to Marin General Hospital where she was found to be in good condition. The mother was advised to take Bridget to her own doctor.

Mrs. Meriwether, who telephoned firemen at 11:15 a.m., said she had pulled the baby from the pool. Nelson said the pool is fenced but that a gate was left open.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Arterial Reconstruction For Clogged Blood Vessels

VAN DELLEN

The surgical treatment of clogged blood vessels is an established procedure and our vascular surgeons have profited from more than two decades of experience. Many of these specialists are not concerned about the immediate results of arterial reconstruction, but the condition of the graft 10 years later. When an obstructed segment of a large artery is removed and replaced with a normal vessel of similar size, the circulation is restored.

ALTHOUGH the graft may hold up for 10 to 15 years, it may degenerate due to arteriosclerosis and become obstructed. Or, perhaps, the wall weakens and bulges out like a balloon (aneurysm). These complications are less likely to occur when a synthetic prosthesis is used or the obstructive material is reamed out. Reaming can be likened to cleaning debris out of a drainage pipe.

JOHN DEVELOPED symptoms of poor circulation in his right leg. Despite excellent care, he failed to improve. Following the injection of a chemical that outlines the blood vessels, a special X-ray study was done. The man had a blockage of the leg artery high in the groin. The obstruction, confined mainly to a four-inch segment, was caused by arteriosclerosis. The rest of the artery seemed to be normal.

The obstruction was bypassed by inserting a tube of knitted Dacron. A plastic graft made of woven teflon or Dacron was also considered. None of these are perfect; the body merely tolerates them.

THE SURGEON could have done an alternate procedure in which the vessel is opened and obstructive material is removed (endarterectomy). This technic is not difficult; the inner lining and middle layer of the artery along with the crud is easily peeled away from the outer wall. The remaining tube is strong enough to convey blood. Some surgeons introduce a fluid or carbon dioxide gas into the wall in order to separate the layers.

CREW CUTS

J. B. writes: Are extremely short haircuts for men and boys healthy in the summertime when the sun is beating down on their heads? More hair would give more protection. I dislike crew cuts so am trying to think of a good answer when someone says they are healthy.

REPLY

Try again. Most baldheaded men go hatless and remain healthy. Crew cuts have the advantage of being cool and easy to keep clean. In contrast, long hair has not kept the dirty hippies cool or clean.

SHOULDER PAIN

Mrs. V. writes: Is arthralgia of the shoulder and arthritis one and the same?

REPLY

"Arthr" refers to a joint and "algia" to pain. When the two terms are combined it means pain in a joint. However, it gives no clue as to what is causing the distress. Consequently, pain could stem from arthritis, bursitis, or injury.

HATS NOT GUILTY

D. B. writes: Do you believe that wearing a hat causes dandruff and baldness?

REPLY

No. Ordinary baldness is hereditary and dandruff stems from a dry scalp. For a long time there was an erroneous idea that hat bands shut off circulation to the scalp.

REPLACING A LENS

C. O. writes: After cataract surgery, can a person see out of the treated eye without glasses?

REPLY

Not as a rule, because glasses are required to replace the lens that was extracted.

Kennedys In Spain

Marin's Unique Civic Center Is Growing

Architect Frank Lloyd Wright's vision of a harmonious complex of structures forming a complete civic center for Marin is slowly becoming a reality on the Santa Venetia hills and flatlands east of Highway 101. Standing out in its fresh coat of paint is the Hall of Justice (right center) scheduled to open this fall, which will contain the sheriff's office, jail, courts and other law enforcement offices, leaving the county courthouse in downtown San Rafael deserted. The massive new structure is linked to the Administration Building, a tourist attraction in itself. Starting to take form is the Veterans Memorial auditorium (left center) of circular design, a complement to the circular children's island in the lagoon, all a part of Wright's architectural pattern. Faced with the reality of the motor age, the design includes a new roadway (lower center) and a new parking lot adjacent to the Hall of Justice. This aerial view extends beyond the Santa Venetia hills to San Pablo Bay beyond. Linking the Civic Center grounds with the bay is Gallinas Creek (upper left) which borders the Gallinas Village area and extends into a turning basin, which appears as a dark oval area at the upper left. The open space (upper center) bordered by homes is the grounds of Santa Venetia Middle School, along North San Pedro Road, cutting diagonally across the scene. Skirting along the foreground is Highway 101, and the line of homes (lower) is clustered in the San Rafael Meadows.

NEW CANAL PLAN FOR SAN RAFAEL?

Army Engineers Question Silt, Other Problems In Discussing Dredge Plans

"We feel there should be a reanalysis of the (San Rafael Canal) project," an Army Corps of Engineers representative said yesterday in what appeared to be a pitch for a new study.

James Wolfe, assistant chief of the construction operations division of the corps, at a luncheon meeting at Dominic's Restaurant told a group of San Rafael businessmen and yachtsmen any changes in the canal "would be up to you to initiate."

A new study would determine where the silting comes from, he said.

"Maybe it's too shallow, maybe too narrow for the boats using it now," he said.

A new study might also pave the way for enlarged yacht harbors and beautification, he indicated. "We are now doing beautification, thanks to Corte Madera Creek," said Wolfe, referring to controversy that has erupted this spring and summer over esthetics of flood control.

Wolfe, who was in San Rafael to discuss the dredging maintenance project scheduled to begin soon on the canal, pointed out the original study had been done from 1910 to 1919 and it is still being used.

The original work was done in the 1920s when the canal was based on commerce — exports from the city's glove and cheese factories and imports, he said.

That first project cost $74,000 and since then, $600,000 has been spent on maintenance.

The current project, to restore the channel to its authorized depth of six feet and width of 60 feet between Grand Avenue and the mouth of the creek, and a depth of eight feet and width of 100 feet from the mouth to the Birdcage marker at the edge of the bay mudflats, will cost about $170,000.

Wolfe said the current project is expected to get underway about Aug. 1, the projected completion date for dike-building at the fill site north of Francisco Boulevard and east of Kerner Boulevard in east San Rafael. The contract is for 90 days.

The fill site worried several marine-oriented men who hope to have private dredging done while the equipment is here, after Wolfe reported all corps work has to be finished before private work starts because the fill site might not hold everything.

Floyd Crites of West Coast Dredging Co., the contractor for the corps work, said his firm is working on another spoils area to hold fill from private yacht harbors and other areas. He reported the second site is not definite because there is some question on drainage.

However, Norris M. Rawles, head of the city's department of public works, said the site, near the San Quentin dump area, is not expected to present serious problems.

As the meeting ended, Paul Ciampi, chairman of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce committee on the east San Rafael area, called for a committee to begin working on development of the canal. The committee, headed by Ciampi, will meet at noon Wednesday at the Red Kettle Restaurant, San Rafael.

Civic Leaders From Sonoma Hear Zone Plans

I-J Special Report

CLOVERDALE — Mayor Talbert W. Bean of Sonoma was elected chairman of the Sonoma County Mayors and Councilmen's Association at a meeting Thursday at the Grapevine restaurant.

Bean succeeds Mayor Helen Putnam of Petaluma who served as chairman of the 1968-69 year. Councilman Ralph J. Poltrone of Cloverdale was named vice chairman and Daniel Clark, Sonoma city manager, as secretary.

A panel discussion on fringe area zoneing was presented by George Kovatch, county planning director; Kenneth Blackman, Santa Rosa planning director; and Robert Byrd, director of the California office of Harstad Associates, Inc., planning consultants.

The planners told the city officials of the importance of making zoning codes uniform and stressed cooperation between the county and cities so that development of the county areas blends well with development of the cities.

TAKING THE BUGS OUT OF THE BOTTLENECK

Bids will be opened July 22 on the $200,000 San Anselmo Hub improvement with work to start this summer. Traffic lights and an increased number of lanes at the intersection are expected to give more control, smoother flow. Though Center Boulevard is shown here as four lanes, westbound traffic in the first stage of development will gradually merge to one lane before Bridge Street while the same section eastbound will be widened to two lanes. Greenfield Avenue will be one-way from the Hub for about 260 feet, then two-way. The development moves the center of the traffic-troubled Hub a little south, emphasizing Center Boulevard, according to assistant engineer John T. O'Rourke.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

Being Alert Sometimes Is Key To Making The Contract

We save ourselves the trouble of thinking by developing habits. At the bridge table, for example, we see two low clubs in the dummy and K-x-x in our own hand; and we immediately plan to lead one of those low clubs from the dummy toward the king. The habit usually works well, but we sometimes wake up at the end of a hand wishing we had been more alert at the beginning.

Opening lead — ◇ Q

DOWN ONE

Declarer took the ace of diamonds, drew two rounds of trumps and led the four of clubs from dummy to his own king. West took two clubs and a diamond, and eventually South had to give up a heart. Down one.

You can say a few things for the way South played the hand. It didn't take long. Nobody had to strain a single muscle of his brain. All four players could go on to the next hand without the slightest fatigue.

But you might also say that South should have made his contract. Declarer should draw the trumps ending in his own hand so that he can begin the clubs by leading the deuce toward dummy's jack.

WELL-PLACED QUEEN

If West has the queen of clubs he must step up at once. Otherwise the jack either wins a club trick (when West has both the ace and queen) or drives out the ace (when the ace and queen are split). As the cards lie, West would take the queen of clubs and (at best) lead a heart.

Declarer wins in dummy with the king of hearts and leads the jack of clubs to force out the ace. South wins the heart return with the ace and cashes the king of clubs to discard the losing heart from dummy.

STILL MAKEABLE

What happens if East rather than West has the queen of clubs? Then dummy's jack loses to the queen of clubs. Declarer wins the heart return in dummy and leads the other club toward his own king. He still makes his contract if East has the ace of clubs. In short, South makes his contract whenever East has the ace of clubs and also whenever West has the queen. The actual declarer could make his game only if East had the ace of clubs.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, July 12, the 193rd day of 1969 with 172 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1862 the Medal of Honor was authorized by the U.S. Congress.

In 1933 a new industrial code was established to fix a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour in the United States.

In 1941 German armies cracked the "Stalin Line" in Russia and began what was to be an unsuccessful march toward Moscow.

In 1961, 73 persons died when a Cezhoslovakian plane crashed in Africa.

A thought for the day: Henry Thoreau said — "The man is the richest whose pleasures are the cheapest."

Unable To Palm Off Trees To Farmers

HARLINGEN, TEX. (UPI)—George Pletcher makes his living selling palm trees, but he said recently they're on the decline in the semi-tropical Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas, where they are native.

Pletcher, who gets as much as $36 a foot for some of the 20 varieties in his nursery, said farmers in the valley tend to look upon palm trees as little more than tall weeds. Cities in other areas of Texas, however, buy palms from Pletcher in thousand-tree lots—just as they do in Florida, California and Arizona.

Giants Good And Lucky In 6-4, 10-Inning Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The old saw "I'd rather be lucky than good," could apply to the San Francisco Giants.

The Giants were both lucky and good last night. San Francisco was given one run at a most opportune moment, but the Giants also manufactured five legitimate ones en route to a 6-4, 10-inning victory over Los Angeles.

The loss dropped the Dodgers back into second place in the topsy-turvy National League West.

"Coming to Los Angeles actually gives us a lift," Giant Manager Clyde King commented. "The big crowds here make a lot of noise and that gets our adrenalin moving. We just had to do good here. We can't let these guys get too far in front of us."

And the Giants haven't. The win was their 11th in 14 games as they moved up to third place, just two games back of the Atlanta Braves and 1½ behind the Dodgers.

It looked like a Los Angeles victory as Willie McCovey tapped a ground ball to rookie second baseman Ted Sizemore with two out in the ninth inning. Sizemore fielded the ball cleanly but made a wide throw to first base that pulled Wes Parker off the bag as Bobby Bonds scampered home with the tying run.

The Giants won it in the 10th when Bonds, who had three hits, lined a two-run single to center off Dodger relief ace Jim Brewer.

The Giants will try and make it three in a row over the Dodgers tonight when they send Ron Herbel, 4-1, against Claude Osteen. Herbel has not started against Los Angeles since throwing a 4-0 shutout at them in September of 1967. Osteen, a lefthander, will be shooting for his 12th victory against 7 losses.

A disconsolate Sizemore refused to blame his still bruised right forearm for the bad throw that turned apparent victory into defeat.

"I was making good throws all night," he said. "This was just a bad one."

Brewer, who entered the game with a brilliant 1.47 ERA, was roughed up for five hits and three earned runs in his 2 2-3 innings of work. He readily accepted part of the blame.

"I'm as much to blame as anyone," he said.

"I walked the leadoff batter and there is no way I should do that and get away with it."

The Giants held a 2-1 lead when the Dodgers broke through against starter Gaylord Perry for three runs in the seventh. Willie Davis, who had four hits in a losing cause, singled home two and Parker, breaking an 0-for-15 slump, singled in the other.

The Giants got one back in the ninth on a walk to pinch-hitter Bobby Etheridge, Bonds' double and a sacrifice fly.

Then came the ground ball to Sizemore. The one that got away.

Jacklin Is British Open King

LYTHAM-ST. ANNES, England (AP)—Tony Jacklin ignored the blustering breezes off the Irish Sea and won the British Open Golf title today with a final round 72 that gave him a total of 280 and a two-stroke margin over Bob Charles of New Zealand.

Although he spends most of his time in the United States now, the 25-year old Jacklin is the first Briton to have won the title since Max Faulkner did it in 1951.

Weather conditions for the final round differed from those of the first three rounds. It was much cooler and the winds raced over the 6,848 yards of the Royal Lytham links on the shores of the Irish Sea and toughened its par of 35-36—71.

Jacklin, who not only plays the rich U.S. pro tour but also is connected with a Georgia resort course, started the final day two strokes in front of Christy O'Connor and Charles, the left-handed New Zealander who won this title over the same course in 1963.

TOUGH SCORE

He whipped through the front nine in 33 strokes, a spectacular score in the wind. At the final turn he was seven under par for the 63 holes played and held a three-stroke edge over Roberto DeVicenzo of Argentina.

DeVicenzo faltered coming home for 72 and 283. Charles, who was Jacklin's playing partner during the final round, finished with a 72 and 282.

The aging Argentine and Peter Thomson of Australia, five time winner of this event, tied for third. Thomson also had a 72 for a 283. O'Connor fell to a 73 for a 284 total.

DOWN THE LIST

Gary Player of South Africa, the defending champion, finished well down the list. His final round of 74 gave him a total of 292, eight strokes over par.

For the first time in recent years the U.S. contingent failed to mount a major threat.

The best American scores were posted by Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, and Davis Love of Atlanta, a non-touring pro. Each had 285. For a brief time in the final round Nicklaus appeared to be on his way but he finished with a 74.

Love, the surprise of the tourney, finished with a par 71. It was his first tournament ever in England.

CASPER BLOWS

Orville Moody of Killian, Tex., the newly crowned U.S. Open champion, finished at 291 on a final round 76 while Bill Casper of San Diego, Calif., twice the U.S. Open winner, blew to a final 78 and 293. Lee Trevino of Dallas, also had a 78 for 296.

Miller Barber of Sherman, Tex., had a fine final round of 69 that gave him a 288 aggregate. Ray Floyd of Lake Havasu, Ariz., one of the very early starters, posted 76 for 296 and Bert Yancey of Tallahassee, Fla., finished with a 77 for 291.

Gay Brewer of Dallas, had to be content with a 75 that sent his aggregate to 290.

Nine-Year-Old Girl Part Of Huge Junior Net Field

There will be no Rod Lavers or Billy Jean Kings at the 16th annual Marin Junior Tennis Tournament co-sponsored by the Independent-Journal and the San Rafael Recreation Department.

But Jan Graham will be there when the tournament starts Monday. Nine-year-old Jan is probably the smallest and one of the youngest youngsters in the tournament.

At four feet, one inch and 52 pounds, she barely can peek over the net, but she'll be an active competitor in the ten and under division.

This is the second tournament for the Marin County Day School fourth grader. She's already appeared in an earlier tournament at Sleepy Hollow.

A veteran netter of sorts, Jan has played since age eight, although she says she first "hit a ball when I was seven."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Graham of San Anselmo, Jan has a pair of younger sisters.

She reports that she has "a pretty good forehand." Her athletic ability isn't limited to tennis. Right now she's also dabbling in baseball where she's "trying out six different positions."

Jan will be part of a large (170 entries) field of youngsters who will kick off play Monday.

Here are Monday's pairings. Action starts at 9 a.m.

Marinites Gain Titles At Belvedere

The final day of the Belvedere Junior Tennis Tournament at the Belvedere Tennis Club turned out to be one of mixed results for Marin County youngsters yesterday.

Darby Auerbach of Belvedere was blasted by Kathle Latham in the girls 18 finals, 6-0, 6-1, but Bee Kilgore of Belvedere took the girls 16 crown by whipping top-seeded Mary Miller, 6-1, 6-4. Bob Knight of Tiburon captured the boys 16 crown with a 6-3, 9-7 conquest of John Hursh.

Misses Kilgore and Auerbach teamed up to take the girls 18 crown and gain a measure of revenge by dumping Kate Latham and Julia White, 6-3, 6-4 while Anne Lamott and Andrea Barnes of Tiburon took the girls 16 crown.

Spitz Wants Record

SANTA CLARA (AP) — Mark Spitz, who has already tied one of his own world records, shoots for one of somebody else's today. Don Schollander may not be pleased with the results.

Spitz, the 19-year-old Indiana University star, swam the 100-meter butterfly in 55.6 seconds yesterday at the Santa Clara International Swim Meet, tying the world standard he set last year.

Today, Spitz swims the 200-meter freestyle in which he hopes to break the world standard of 1:54.3 set last year by Schollander, now retired from active competition.

Though he was cautious in comments after his performance yesterday, Spitz has made no secret of his hopes to break the record set by his former Santa Clara Swim Club teammate.

"I should feel good about the race," said Spitz, who beat his nearest competitor by three full seconds yesterday. "I'm just going to try to do my best."

ANOTHER RECORD

Another record could come today in the 200-meter breaststroke, which figures to be a rerun of the race at the 1968 Olympics. Mitch Ivey of the Santa Clara club hopes to write a new ending to the story, though.

At Mexico City, Ivey led Roland Matthes of East Germany for the first half of the 200, only to lose to Matthes' finishing kick. Yesterday, Matthes topped Ivey in the 100-meter backstroke, winning in 58.5, one-half second off his own world mark. Ivey, however, likes his chances in the longer race better.

JOB OVER MUNOZ

In other races yesterday, meet records came from triple gold medal winner Debbie Meyer in the 400-meter freestyle, 4:26.4; Kaye Hall in the 100-meter women's backstroke, 1:07.1, and Brian Job in the 200-meter breaststroke, 2:25.8.

Job beat Mexico's Olympic champion Felipe Munoz.

Hans Fassnacht of West Germany set a European record in the men's 400-meter freestyle, 4:08.2, and Adrea Gyarmati of Hungary tied her country's 100-meter butterfly record of 1:06.6.

Washington Inks 49er Contract

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers announced yesterday the signing of Gene Washington, Stanford flanker and the National Football League team's No. 2 draft choice.

Washington, who is 6-1, 185 pounds, said he had been signed to a three year contract and though he would not divulge the terms he added: "I'm very happy, very satisfied."

Jack White, general manager of the 49ers, said: "We have followed Washington very closely. We consider ourselves very lucky and we are happy to have him."

The signing leaves the 49ers with only one of their major draft choices unsigned. He is Ted Kwalick, Penn State's All American tight end.

Washington leaves tonight for Chicago and the college All-Star game training camp.

Marin Attorney Has Big Trophy To Show

San Anselmo attorney Jasper C. DeDobbelier has got a big trophy to bring home from Ranch Buena Vista, south of La Paz, Baha California, Mexico.

It's a 132-pound marlin, caught during his vacation trip. In addition to the marlin, DeDobbelier caught 13 dolphin and 9 rooster fish, it was reported from the resort yesterday.

Paper-Thin A's Triumph Behind Krausse, Reggie

OAKLAND (AP) — Manager Hank Bauer of the Oakland Athletics may have to put himself on the active list, the way things are going.

In today's game against the California Angels, the A's were down to only 19 healthy players.

Five other players are on duty with armed forces reserve units for the weekend and injured Bert Campaneris is only available as a pinch runner.

Jim Hunter, 6-7, was nominated to pitch for Oakland against Andy Messersmith, 6-6 of the Angels.

"What we need is another game like the one Lew Krausse pitched," Bauer said. He was talking about the slick seven-hit shutout Krausse pitched to beat the Angels 3-0 last night.

"If we get another game like that, we won't need any extra players," Bauer said.

The only extra players Bauer had available today were catcher Gene Tennace, and infielders Ramon Webster and Tony La Russa.

Tennace was called up from the Des Moines farm club just for the weekend, because the A's had only one other catcher left.

In the service today and Sunday are catchers Dave Duncan and Larry Haney, in addition to pitcher Marcel Lachemann and outfielders Rick Monday and Joe Rudi.

Krausse's performance last night was as good as any he has turned in since he made his major league debut against the Angels in 1961. Ironically, Krausse pitched a shutout against the Angels in that game too. He has had only one other shutout in the eight seasons in between.

Krausse struck out nine batters and did not walk a man. "I was hitting the corners with my pitches and could get all of them over," Lew said.

Krausse had figured he was going to spend the entire 1969 season in the bullpen. Since his promotion to the starting rotation he has won two games and lost a tough 2-0 contest to Chicago.

Reggie Jackson provided the big hit for the A's with a two-run double in the fifth inning.

Jose Tartabull had two hits for Oakland and also provided the best defensive play of the game. He saved Krausse's shutout by throwing out the Angels' Aurelio Rodriguez at the plate in the third inning.

The victory was the third for Oakland in four meetings with the Angels this season.

Stockton Concerned With Winning

EDINA, Minn. (AP) — Dave Stockton, unlike many of his companions on the pro golf tour, isn't concerned with simply making money.

"I want to win," Stockton said. "It's as simple as that. Oh, the money's fine. But I want to win."

Stockton, who took over the top spot in the $100,000 Minnesota Golf Classic yesterday with a four-under-par 67 for 135, has collected $48,683 this year. But he hasn't won a tournament.

"I'd a lot rather have $15,000 and have won a tournament," he said.

Stockton, a 27-year-old who won two tournaments and more than $100,000 last year, held a one-stroke lead over defending champion Dan Sikes, Frank Beard and newcomer Hale Irwin going into today's third round.

Irwin and Beard each had a second-round 67, Sikes a 69.

Hugh Inggs, a South African who has been on the tour only five weeks, matched the record for the 6,913-yard, par-71 Braemar Golf Club course with a 65 and was alone at 137.

Stockton, a five-year tour veteran, took note of Sikes' comment that a tournament should not be held the same date as the British Open, as this one is.

"I don't think I can agree," Stockton said. "I won at Milwaukee last year the same dates as the British Open and am in good shape in this one."

But he had to whip some putting trouble to get in good shape.

RUMORS FLY

Will Joe Show At Jet Camp?

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will he or won't he?

That's the question buzzing around—again—in pro football circles today about Joe Namath and his career with the New York Jets.

But hold on, breathless fans, you'll probably have an answer before sunset Sunday. That's when the super quarterback is supposed to report to the Jets' training camp at Hempstead, N.Y.

If he does show up, he probably won't play because Commissioner Pete Rozelle is likely to suspend him before he can lace up his celebrated white shoes.

For the benefit of anyone who's been in hibernation for the past month, Namath would be suspended because Rozelle has said a million times if he's said it once that the 26-year-old folk hero has to give up his interest in a New York night spot if he wants to play football because the restaurant's clientele includes undesirables.

Jets' president Phil Iselin said yesterday he didn't know anything about the latest reports that Namath had changed his mind and will show up at camp Sunday. Neither did a spokesman for Rozelle. Neither did Coach Weeb Ewbank.

WELCOME

"He'll be welcome," Iselin said.

"There's no change in the situation at all," said the commissioner's spokesman. "He's still retired. We've had no indication he's changed his mind."

The man in question—Namath, of course—was unavailable for comment in Corona, Calif., where he's winding up work on a movie. He was reported to have checked out of the motel where he was staying.

In other pro football news, the Buffalo Bills of the American Football League, who would like to settle their contractural problems with O. J. Simpson, have another headache. It seems they're having problems with a projected $50 million domed stadium.

UNHAPPY

Owner Ralph Wilson is unhappy with the prospects of having to deal with a private management group for use of the stadium, and said so in a letter to the Erie County executives. Wilson said he wants to deal with Erie County and not the private firm, which wants to operate the stadium under a lease from the county.

In major signings, the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League said they've signed their No. 2 draft choice, flanker Gene Washington of Stanford. Washington said he signed a three-year pact and added he's very happy with it.

The Washington Redskins of the NFL said their No. 1 draft choice, defensive back Gene Epps, ended his holdout and reported to camp. Coach Vince Lombardi said the Texas-El Paso star looked quick in his first workout.

Cubs, Mets Run Into Trouble

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Mets and the Chicago Cubs started a brief breather from each other . . . and wound up gasping.

The Los Angeles Dodgers ran into Bobby Bonds . . . and wound up second.

The Mets, who took two of three games from the Cubs in New York this week, were stunned 11-4 by lowly Montreal last night, while almost-as-lowly Philadelphia came from behind to knock off the Cubs 7-5.

That left the front-running Cubs and the Mets, who resume their crucial showdown in Chicago Monday, separated by four games in the National League East.

Bonds, meanwhile, singled in two runs in the 10th inning—after keying a tying ninth-inning rally—as San Francisco dropped Los Angeles out of first in the West with a 6-4 triumph.

Atlanta, which rallied for three runs in the last inning to beat San Diego 6-3, took over the top spot, one-half game ahead of the Dodgers.

St. Louis stopped Pittsburgh 6-1 and Houston trounced Cincinnati 13-2 in other NL games.

The Expos, who had a four-game losing streak and the worst record of any NL team, assaulted the Mets with a 15-hit attack, including a double and two singles by pitcher Mike Wegener, good for four RBIs.

NEEDED HELP

Wegener, a 22-year-old rookie, won his fourth in 11 decisions, but needed late help from Dick Radatz.

The Cubs grabbed a 5-3 lead with a pair of runs in the eighth, but Philadelphia came right back in the ninth on homers by Ron Stone and Johnny Briggs and Tony Taylor's run-scoring single.

Briggs slammed his eighth of the year, and second of the game, to lead off the inning before Stone hit his first of the season.

EARLY LEAD

Pinch-hitter Bob Aspromonte singled in two runs and Felipe Alou singled in one in the ninth as Atlanta handed San Diego its fifth straight loss.

The Padres took an early 2-0 lead, but the Braves came back in the third with three runs on singles by Alou, Felix Millan and Clete Boyer and Rico Carty's two-run double.

However, San Diego tied it in the third when Larry Stahl tripled after Van Kelly singled.

Lou Brock and Vada Pinson each drove in two runs in a five-run seventh that carried St. Louis past Pittsburgh for its seventh victory in eight games.

Houston exploded for nine runs in the sixth—most ever scored in one inning by the Astros—in halting Cincinnati's five-game victory streak.

Dennis Menke led the way with a double and a triple for four RBIs, while Jim Wynn had three singles and Doug Rader hit his sixth homer.

Marin County Little League Tourney Starts

A hefty package of seven games kicks off the 1969 Marin County team Little League championship tournament Tuesday in a purely local affair.

The tournament will pit champions from each Marin County league, and is not to be confused with the All-Star tournament, which will feature the best players from each league forming teams in a meet that will determine the Marin representative in further play. This tourney gets underway the following week.

The opening round of the Marin team championship consists of Marinwood vs. San Geronimo at Marinwood; San Rafael American vs. Kentfield-Greenbrae at Strawberry; Gallinas Valley vs. Twin Cities at Twin Cities in Corte Madera; Mill Valley National vs. Mill Valley American in Mill Valley; Tiburon vs. Hamilton-Loma Verde at Hamilton Air Force Base; Sausalito vs. Novato American at Sausalito and Novato National vs. Strawberry at Novato. San Rafael National has a first-round bye.

Yaz Joins July Slugging Parade

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Carl Yastrzemski has joined the Harmon Killebrew-Ken Harrelson July slugging parade and he's brought the whole Boston Red Sox squad along for the ride.

Yastrzemski walloped a homer in each game last night as the Red Sox romped over Baltimore twice, 7-4 and 12-3. That gave Yaz four homers in Boston's last four starts, a pace comparable to the ones Harrelson and Killebrew are toting around the American League.

Harrelson's grand slam helped Cleveland rip Detroit 8-1 and was his fifth homer in eight days. Killebrew unloaded a pair of shots in Minnesota's 9-3 drubbing of Seattle and raised his totals to 27 for the season and nine in the last 10 days.

Yastrzemski and the Red Sox clawed Baltimore pitching for 30 hits in the doubleheader, 22 of them in the second-game romp that reduced the Orioles' East Division lead to 11½ games.

Elsewhere, New York nipped Washington 4-3, Kansas City topped Chicago 8-5 and Oakland blanked California 3-0.

Yastrzemski and Reggie Smith drove in nine runs and scored eight more between them as the Red Sox ripped the Orioles. Smith tagged a three-run homer for Boston's winning margin in the opener after Yastrzemski's seventh-inning homer had snapped a tie.

Then Yaz blasted a three-run shot in the first inning of the nightcap. Mike Andrews had five straight hits in the second game and Smith rapped seven hits in the twin bill, extending his streak to 19 games, longest in the American League this season.

Killebrew drove in four runs with his two homers and a double, lifting his major league leading RBI total to 90. His nine homers in the first 11 days of July make him a threat to the single month record of 18 set by Rudy York in 1937.

Ted Uhlaender also had a two-run homer for the Twins.

Harrelson, who has hit four homers in Cleveland's last five games, unloaded in a six-run third inning. It was his second career grand slam and made things easy for Sam McDowell, who won his 11th with a four-hitter.

Jim Price homered for the Tigers' only run, depriving McDowell of his shutout with two out in the ninth.

Mel Stottlemyre scattered 10 hits and won his 13th game of the season, beating Washington for the Yankees.

Bob Taylor's eighth-inning pinch single drove in the tie-breaking run and then Paul Schaal singled a pair of insurance runs across, helping Kansas City top Chicago. Bill Melton drove in three runs for the White Sox, one of them with his 14th homer of the season.

U.S. Pro Tennis Title Goes Under

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — The U.S. pro tennis championship is headed for Australia for the seventh straight year.

To the surprise of no one, four lads from Down Under made up the field today in the semifinals of the $33,000 tournament at Longwood.

King Rod Laver, bidding for his fourth straight title and fifth in six years, was favored to go all the way and collect top prize money of $8,000.

However, countrymen Ken Rosewall, a two-time U.S. pro champ, John Newcombe and Fred Stolle hope to upset the odds favoring the 30-year-old southpaw, who admittedly is looking ahead to the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, N.Y., in late August.

Rosewall, still sprightly at the age of 34, got the first shot at Laver in the semifinals today. Second-seeded Newcombe, runner-up to Laver here in 1968 and last week at Wimbledon, met Stolle for the right to play the winner Sunday.

Challenge To Annex Win Streak

Nine games ago the Italian Club downed Annex Motors, 2-1, in the Joe DiMaggio League opener.

Annex Motors hasn't lost since then in sweeping to a big lead in the Northern Marin Division standings while the Italian Club got involved in a hot race in the Southern Division, in which it is currently second, a half a game behind Toby's Truckers.

Tomorrow, the two teams meet again at Novato High School at 5:30 p.m. in the key game in DiMaggio League action. In another biggie, Toby's hosts ambitious Mill Valley Chiefs at Marin Catholic at 1 p.m.; Holiday Magic goes against Herb's Pool Service at Drake High School at 1 p.m. and Healdsburg is at the Presidio, also at 1 p.m.

Roger Smith will pitch for the Italian Club while Steve Francis goes for Annex Motors.

Bill Kelly will try to hold off the Mill Valley Chiefs for Toby's. The Chiefs, 1½ games behind Toby's, will counter with Mike Johnson.

Greenwood May Be Man To Watch In Champ Golf

(Last in a series on entrants in tomorrow's Marin County Tournament of Golf Champions.)

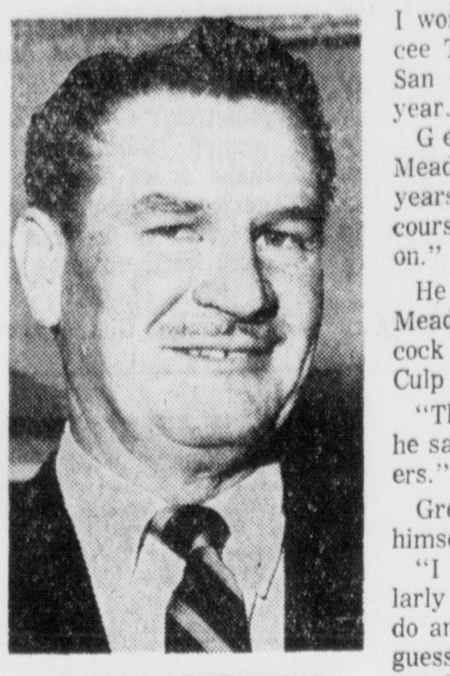
Looking for a man to watch in the Marin County Tournament of Golf Champions at Meadow Club in Fairfax tomorrow?

Take a good look at George Greenwood of San Rafael, the champ at Indian Valley in Novato. He may be the one who winds up with the trophy gold.

George, a partner in a manufacturing agent company in San Francisco, had to beat George Scherba, the first Tournament of Champion titlist in 1967 and Indian Valley champ two years running. Greenwood won last year's Indian Valley Championship by four strokes.

Greenwood is a one-handicapper and a veteran golfer who's played for the past 40 years, beginning as a teen-ager in the Southwest, where he won junior titles in Tucson, Phoenix and Douglas, Ariz.

He's played in the national Amateur (1959) and was low amateur in the Southern California Open in Palm Springs.



GEORGE GREENWOOD
One Handicapper

"I've played in a lot of tournaments," Greenwood said. "But I've never won anything really important. The last thing I won was the San Rafael Jaycee Tournament. I shot a 70 at San Geronimo to win it last year."

George hasn't played at Meadow Club for a couple of years but thinks it's "a lovely course, just beautiful to play on."

He figures Don Lazzarini, the Meadow Club champ and Peacock Gap representative Jack Culp are the fellows to beat.

"They both play sound golf," he said. "They're real fine players."

Greenwood doesn't consider himself a spectacular golfer.

"I don't do anything particularly well," he said, "but I don't do anything very badly either. I guess you could say I'm a steady golfer, most days."

Golfing is popular in the 53-year-old Greenwood's family.

Both his sons play it, and so does Mrs. Greenwood, a regular name on the Indian Valley golf result sheets.

"She's a real tiger out there," Greenwood said.

San Rafael Braves Vs. San Jose

San Rafael Braves open play in the San Jose Peninsula Traveling League tomorrow, but they'll get a good look at their opponents tonight.

The Pied Pipers of San Jose come to Albert Park in San Rafael tonight for an 8 o'clock practice game with the Braves. Tomorrow the teams meet in a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m., also at Albert Field, but these two will be for keeps.

A CHANGE

Braves manager Joe Anselmo announced a change of league schedules which calls for 14 games in the eight-team league, each team playing the other twice. Games will be double-headers, so will not be home-and-home arrangements as originally planned.

The Braves are led by Rocky Shone, former San Rafael High School athlete, with a .436 mark, and shortstop Tom Corder, ex-star at Novato High and current star of the San Jose State team, who is hitting .410. First baseman Art Blunt is team leader in home runs, 7, and runs batted in, 25, two more than Shone. The Braves are batting .315 as a team, with an 18-6 record.

14-3 RECORD

The visiting San Jose nine has a 14-3 record and were champs of a San Jose area spring league, and finalists in the State Regional baseball tournament in the Santa Clara County area. The team draws players from San Jose State, San Diego State, Humboldt State, Nevada State and Hartnell Junior College.

Leading pitchers are Jim Deach (1.39 earned run average) from Nevada State and Carl Warren (1.06) from Hartnell J.C.

BOWLING NOTES

First 600 Is Right On Button

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Tom Graham, 157 average, bowled his first 600 series and didn't have a pin to spare in the Splinters League at Country Club Bowl.

Graham had games of 190, 154 and 256 to hit that six right on the button. Also in the Splinters, Luke Kelly, 156 avg., rolled a 587 series.

Sharon Peicich also rolled her first 600 ever, a 604 set in the Sleepers League at the San Rafael lanes. Her scores were 213-170-221. High scores in that league came from Bea Hoffmann and Peg Quezada, each with a 237.

THIS AND THAT — Dick Spear, bowling in the Twilight Twirlers League, rolled an all-spare game, coming out of it with a 183 line. . . . In the Bowlerettes at Country Club Bowl, Lila Giambra (151 avg.) rolled a 220 line and 566 series, Betty Conti (140 avg.) had 202-537, and Leemoi Bekey went up the ladder by ones, 146-147-148. . . . In the Keglerettes League, Jessie Hill and Dori Simeone picked 4-7-10 splits and Dori also made good a 6-8-10; Gayle Graham (135 avg.) went all the way to a 223 to lead scores.

DOWN THE LANES — High series score of the week at Country Club came from Terry De Young, an 877 four-gamer led by a 253. . . . At Nave Lanes, Bill Nave III beat out father Bill Jr., 629 to 623. . . . In the Hi-Lo's League at Country Club, Jim Leiting (136 avg.) rolled a 214; Joe Brusatori (153 avg.) rolled a 234, Jean Beckwith picked up a 4-7-10 split and Harry Hicklin the 6-7-10. . . . Dave Mendelsohn, 144 average roller in the Greenbrae Lanes Adult-Junior League, rolled a 590 series to show the big guys how a junior does it. . . . Marg Rossback rolled her highest score ever in the Hits and Mrs. League at Greenbrae Lanes, 205-543.

MORE ON NANCY — The 12-year-old bowling marvel, Nancy McPherson of San Rafael, hasn't slacked off one bit. She beat the juniors (13 through 18) and even the pros in the Fourth of July Pro-Am event of the Professional Pacific Coast Bowlers tournament at Serra Bowl in Colma.

Little Nancy (all 100 pounds of her) rolled games of 231, 191, and 210 for 632 scratch and won first place in the Prep (12 and under) division. It was higher than any of the other bowlers (all older) could do.

Next stop for Nancy will be Mel's Bowl in Redwood City, where she was to compete today in the State Junior Tournament, in singles and doubles. On July 26 she'll bowl at King's Bowl in Millbrae in the team event of the state tourney.

Carlos Wins In Tuneup Race

HONOLULU (AP) — John Carlos won both dashes and breezed through a relay leg last night as most of the members of the U.S. track team that will meet the Russians next week competed in a tuneup meet.

Carlos won the 100 in 9.4 and breezed to a 220 victory in 21.3. Peter Norman of Australia, who beat Carlos for the Silver medal in last year's Olympic Games at Mexico City, was third in the 220.

Carlos' time in the 100 established a Hawaiian record.

Sonics Search For Coach

SEATTLE (AP) — The sudden resignation of fiery Al Bianchi as coach of the National Basketball Association's Seattle SuperSonics left his players stunned and his general manager scrambling for a replacement.

Bianchi, 36, citing "personal reasons," announced his resignation yesterday. He had one year remaining on his three-year contract.

"Al told me of his decision Thursday, so I went into shock a day earlier that most," Tom Meschery, team captain, said. "I think Al was a heck of a coach. I don't think he should resign, but it's up to him."

Center Bob Rule said he couldn't believe it when he heard the news. "I had no idea this was coming. What happened?"

NO OFFERS

Bianchi, who came to Seattle when the team was accepted into the NBA two years ago, said he preferred not to go into the reasons for his resignation. He said he had no job waiting and no offers.

"I've been kind of thinking about quitting since the middle of last season," he told newsmen. "I was not happy with the way things went, or our sixth-place finish.

"Another coach with new ideas and philosophies could perhaps do a better job.

"There are certain things as a coach you want to accomplish," Bianchi said. "I don't think I can do it here, or maybe not anywhere else in basketball. This is a different era. Maybe I have to change my ways,"

Bianchi said he told general manager Dick Vertlieb and club president Sam Schulman of his decision Monday and was told to think it over. "I came to the same decision," he said.

Babe Ruth Tourneys Set Today

District Seven Babe Ruth tournaments get underway at two different locations tomorrow in the first steps of a junior baseball tourney trail that spirals toward a world series at the end of the rainbow.

Three Marin County teams are entered in the Santa Rosa District Seven meet at Santa Rosa's Doyle Park tonight and tomorrow.

In the 5 p.m. opener, Northgate (Las Gallinas) takes on Vacaville. At 8 p.m. it's Santa Rosa against Mill Valley.

Rohnert Park takes on the winners of the Northgate-Vacaville contest at noon tomorrow. That will be followed by a 3 p.m. contest between the winner of the Santa Rosa-Mill Valley game and Novato.

At Sonoma, Central Marin goes against Antioch at 1 p.m. today and Redwood Empire and Vallejo tangle at 4:30 p.m. Travis Air Force Base and Sonoma have a first round bye. Action continues tomorrow at 6 p.m.

Winners in both tournaments battle it out July 21,22.

Claude Osteen of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Ray Sadecki of the San Francisco Giants lost the most games in the National League last season. Each lost 18 times. Osteen gave up the most runs, 109.

Blackfin Continues To Lead In Trans-Pac Race

HONOLULU (AP) — Windward Passage predicts she'll hit the Diamond Head finish two hours before Blackfin, which continued to lead the Los Angeles to Honolulu Transpacific Yacht Race by some 20 miles at last report.

The 73-foot ketch Blackfin, commanded by Kenneth DeMeuse and from the St. Francis Yacht Club of San Francisco, radioed yesterday he expected to reach Diamond Head at 7:42 p.m. tomorrow Honolulu time.

The Blackfin was less than 600 miles out of Honolulu on a pace breaking the old record of nine days, 13 hours, 51.2 minutes set in 1965 by Robert F. Johnson of the Portland Yacht Club with the Ticonderoga.

But about 20 miles astern of the Blackfin aboard his new boat, Windward Passage, Johnson radioed yesterday he expected to arrive at Diamond Head at 5:30 p.m. tomorrow. Race officials admitted there was some confusion as to Johnson's course.

Behind the two leaders, other front runners were Pursuit, of the San Francisco Yacht Club; Rascal, from the Santa Barbara YC, and Kamalii of the Los Angeles YC.

Tom Lavine's 37-foot sloop Quest lost its rudder and when crew members were unable to rig another to bring the yacht under control the boat dropped out of the race yesterday afternoon, race officials said. The Quest, of the California YC, left the race at the halfway mark and a commercial tug will tow the disabled yacht to port, the Coast Guard said.

Meanwhile, the condition of Eugene Bricker, 47, Fresno, Calif., was reported improved. He fractured his skull and had his right side partially paralyzed when struck in the head Thursday by a boom aboard the sloop Mahia.

He is being taken to San Diego by the Navy destroyer USS Black, now expected to arrive in port Sunday afternoon.

Van Dillen Scores Another Big Upset

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — An 18-year-old just out of high school made it big in the 1969 U.S. Amateur Tennis Tournament Friday.

Poker-faced Eric Van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif., seventh-seeded and the youngest player in the tournament, had just beaten second-seeded Joaquin Loyo-Mayo of Mexico in a stunning five-set upset. It was Van Dillen's second long match in as many days.

"Yes, I guess you can call it the best tennis I have ever played," he said after rallying to beat the Mexican Davis Cup player 6-8, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

But there will be other fine victories for this young player, whom many observers have picked as definite top-notch material.

Court Balks Federal Try To Halt Takeover

NEW YORK (UPI) — Federal Judge Hubert L. Will in Chicago yesterday refused the Justice Department's request for a preliminary injunction to block the tender offer for shares of B. F. Goodrich Co. of Akron by Northwest Industries, Inc., the Chicago railway holding company.

The offer had been barred for some weeks by a temporary restraining order.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Richard McLaren expressed disappointment at Judge Will's ruling and said the Justice Department will seek an early trial of its suit to block the acquisition on its merits and also ask Judge Will to forbid Northwest to combine with Goodrich pending the trial and appeal should the tender offer be successful.

Judge Will promptly said he would issue such an order and that Northwest has been trying to get control of Goodrich since January and the move had been resisted stoutly by the Goodrich management as well as the Justice Department.

It is known that very few Goodrich shares have been tendered to Northwest so far.

Judge Will's decision was regarded as a clear rebuff by the court to the Nixon administration's announced policy of seeking to prevent by all possible means mergers involving very large corporations.

However, the terms of the order Judge Will said he would sign made it clear that if Northwest does get a majority of Goodrich shares, the railway holding company will be allowed virtually no voice in the management or policies of the rubber company pending trial of the antitrust suit on its merits, which might take months or even years counting the appeal.

The Goodrich management has taken the view all along that it might not be able to keep its shareholders from selling control of the company to Northwest without a legal barrier. However, the Goodrich management has insisted that the terms of the Northwest offer are not really attractive on a long term basis.

Another large merger proposal Friday saw Georgia-Pacific Corp. of Portland, Ore., agree to buy Louisiana Forest Products for $60.5 million in cash and securities.

Georgia Pacific would get a new hardwood pulp mill at Port Hudson, La., 20,000 acres of new timberlands, a wood chip mill at Sammondsport, La., and 100,000 acres of pulpwood rights.

Two of Holland's larger companies, Aku Co and Royal Salt Organum announced a merger plan that would create a $1.68 billion combine.

Virginia National Bank of Norfolk and First National Bank of Quantico announced plans to merge, exchanging one share of the Quantico bank for 2.15 shares of Virginia National.

Stanwyck Corp. of Arlington, Va., called off a proposed merger with Dunlap and Associates.

Securities Trade Faces Big Shock

NEW YORK (UPI) — A New York Stock Exchange committee on Thursday will recommend, reluctantly and under pressure, a rule change which will rock the securities industry and affect investors, big and small, it has been learned.

After weeks of deliberation, the committee will recommend that members be permitted to "go public," that is sell stock in their own firms.

For decades, the exchange has forbidden members to do so, contending the regulation was necessary to control membership and to prevent power institutions such as mutual funds and insurance companies from extending their influence on the market and avoiding large commission charges.

Such a recommendation would require approval by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the NYSE membership.

"If it happens," said the head of a major Wall Street brokerage, "We're in a new multibillion dollar ball game. No place for the weak or faint of heart."

Late in May, Dan Lufkin, chairman of Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette, attended his first board of governor's meeting and shook establishment members by announcing that his firm intended to go public. Lufkin said 800,000 shares had been filed for registration with the SEC and noted that this was against Exchange rules. Even thoush DLJ derived 63 per cent of its $30.4 revenues in 1968 from NYSE commissions, Lufkin said it would resign from the Exchange unless the rule was changed. He urged the board to recommend such action and suggested several amendments to skirt the institutional problem.

The "young Turk" segment on the Street applauded. They were eager, as is DLJ, to build more capital to meet block positioning needs, rising costs and expansion expenses brought on by market bigness and backshop backlogs.

The old guard elements were shocked and bitter. Some complained that Lufkin, because of possible antitrust involvement, "had a pistol at the NYSE's head." Others saw it as encouragement for other houses to flee to the "third market" where listed stocks are sold in over-the-counter fashion.

"It was a bitter battle, but it's all settled now," said the highly-placed Wall Street source. "Next Thursday the public ownership committee of the board will report favorably on Lufkin's proposal. At the same time it will promise to hammer out appropriate amendments and offer them at the September meeting for submission to the SEC and a mail vote by members. Everything could be approved and settled by as early as Nov. 1."

Lufkin refused comment on the report. Exchange officials also shied away from comment. The head of one major Wall Street brokerage said, "It's possible. But the public ownership boys may find they have less support outside New York than they figure. Could be a close vote."

If at least half of the 1,366 NYSE members vote, it would take only a majority of the mail votes to approve such a rule change.

Wall Street executives predicted such a development would lead to:

A rush by brokerage firms, big and small, to incorporate and merge. Smaller houses would be looking for protection, the bigger houses for added facilities and expertise.

Restructuring of NYSE commission schedule on a dollar rather than a share-bought basis. This probably would lower costs for the big traders and increase them for the small trader.

Wall Street's Small Summer Rally Fizzles

NEW YORK (UPI) — The tiny summer rally in the stock market that danced on the horizon last week vanished like the mirage this week. Stocks went down and most other business news was on the downside.

The Commerce Department reported retail sales fell on a month-to-month basis in June for the second consecutive month. The drop from May was only 1 per cent. The June sales still were 2 per cent above a year earlier but that gain was less than the rate of depreciation of money.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said the growth rate of new orders for merchandise was considerably slower in June than in May. Only 27 per cent of the purchasing men reported order gains for June and many reported production down. However June, traditionally, is a slower month in wholesale merchandising than May.

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed that installment credit jumped $846 million in May, the biggest monthly increase since last October.

A plan to lay off 4,000 workers of Grumman Aircraft Engineering Co. of Bethpage, N.Y., by yearend focused attention on other layoffs of around 19,000 workers in the aerospace industry.

Nevertheless, there were big new procurement contracts in the industry. Even Grumman landed one sizable military order and McDonnell-Douglas of St. Louis got a $356.7 million continuing order for F4 Phantom jet fighters and reconnaissance planes.

The layoffs in aerospace had no effect on the general employment level. The government said unemployment dropped in June to 3.4 per cent of the labor force from 3.5 per cent in May in spite of the influx of June graduates into the labor market. However, a corrected figure for the second quarter showed the total number of jobless persons rose by 140,000 during the quarter to 2.8 million, the first sizable such advance in two years.

President Richard M. Nixon sent a bill to Congress that would extend unemployment insurance to about 4.8 million more workers and would raise from $3,000 to $6,000 the wage base on which employers pay a tax to finance unemployment insurance.

The University of Michigan's periodic survey of consumer buying moods, which has maintained a steadfastly optimistic tone in recent years, at last turned pessimistic. The latest survey by the Michigan economists said consumers are sufficiently worried over inflation to be reluctant to buy and most of them expect many more price increases this year. In consequence the Michigan index of consumer buying intentions had dropped to 91.6 at the end of June from 95.1 in February.

West Germany agreed to spend or invest $1.5 billion in the United States in the next years to help offset the $900 million a year cost of keeping American troops in Germany.

For the first time since 1958, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board will make long-term loans to savings and loan associations. Chairman Preston Martin told a news conference in Sacramento the first such five-year loans will be financed by the some of $200 million in 8 per cent debentures.

Humble Oil and Refining Co. said it now has made a major offshore oil discovery in the Santa Barbara Channel off California. Previously the Esso Company had minimized the importance of its drilling in the area.

A group of Negro businessmen with the backing of Negro banks in New York and Philadelphia offered to buy Blatz Brewing Co. of Milwaukee, from Pabst Brewing Co., which has been ordered by a federal court to divest itself of the company. The court already had two offers for Blatz from other brewing firms.

A review board of the National Association of Broadcasters has recommended that cigarette advertising be phased entirely out of television by 1973 to avert more federal regulation of TV ads.

The Board of Trade, Chicago's famous grain futures market, may soon have its first full fledged female member. Members voted to end the rule excluding women and 26-year-old Carol Jean Ovitz is expected to be admitted to full trading membership in mid-August.

Are We Threatened By Our Own Contamination?

In our preoccupation with the possibility of extinction from one big nuclear holocaust, we overlook the smaller forces that are gnawing away at our vitals from within.

Our civilization is threatened by the very forces let loose by the process of civilization—contamination and pollution from smoke, pesticides, leaking oil, and war surplus gases and bacteria for which we must find disposal sites.

A series of unrelated news stories that hit the headlines during recent weeks give some hint of the gradual erosion of environment that is taking place worldwide.

OUT OF GERMANY comes the report that a sackful (about 220 pounds) of insecticide dumped into the Rhine had brought instant death to millions of fish on a 12-mile stretch of the river and jeopardized the health of 3.5 million Germans served by the Rhine.

In California, DDT spray is now considered so indestructible that householders are warned not to dispose of the contents into the sink or on the ground for fear that water and soil will be contaminated.

And in Washington, the military was all set to cart 27,000 tons of obsolete chemical munitions including nerve gas over rail from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Colorado to New Jersey, then barge them out into the Atlantic for burial. Because of public outcry over the potential danger of shipping cross country over accident-prone rails, the Pentagon announced it would burn most of the chemicals.

FROM STOCKHOLM comes the disquieting report that a gold mining company had dumped 7,000 tons of deadly arsenic into the Baltic Sea in the 1930's. We were assured that the arsenic, enough to kill all the people in the world "three times over," were safely imbedded in concrete and sunk to the bottom of the sea.

But experts are quoted as saying the concrete will eventually erode, and the arsenic may contaminate the water in the future.

If a sackful of German insecticide can kill millions of fish in the Rhine, the kill potential of 27,000 tons of chemical gas rumbling cross country over rail or the 7,000 tons of arsenic locked for the moment at the ocean bottom is staggering to contemplate.

Leading nations of the world including ours vie with each other to produce super aircraft, super weapons, and super sprays, with little or no planning on how the leftovers and residues from the super products will be disposed of and how the disposals will affect environment.

AT THE RATE we're going, we may soon find ourselves choking in self-created smog, self-invented sprays, and self-polluted waters.

Montana Senator Lee Metcalf, a leader in conservation, recently warned that erosion, pollution, and contamination of the country's natural resources constitute a more imminent danger than the H-bomb.

"I do not think that we are going to destroy ourselves in a nuclear holocaust," said the senator.

"But if we keep on poisoning the water we drink, destroying the soil upon which we depend, contaminating the air we breathe, destroying our natural habitat . . ., we will fade out quickly as a race of men, anemic, sickly, corrupted. The poet is indeed the prophet. For this is the way the World ends, not with a bang but with a whimper."

Control of DDT and other chemicals that permanently damage environment is essential.

Creation and production of dangerous chemicals should be accompanied by researchc on safe methods of disposal.

The war against smog and anti-pollution of waters and soil should be stepped up.

Otherwise, we'll all fade away in a whimper while wheezing at the top of our diseased lungs at the dangers of nuclear holocaust.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to young girls who thumb rides and hop into the first car that stops, without exercising caution. A highway patrol officer has warned that girls are playing Russian roulette with their lives.

BOUQUETS to the 336 inmates of San Quentin, who received diplomas and certificates for high school, elementary and vocational courses they completed.

A BOUQUET to W. C. Cornwell San Rafael city clerk, who retired after 16 years of service with the city.

BOUQUETS to three couples who recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversaries: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tovani of San Anselmo, Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Azevedo of Loma Verde, and Mr. and Mrs. Erich Burkhardt of San Rafael.

BOUQUETS to the Novato Rotary Club and the Novato Teen Club for operating a summer employment agency for high school students seeking part-time work.

BRICKBATS to the hit-runner who scrapes the side of a parked car with the bumper of his own car, takes a quick glance around to see if anyone's looking, then speeds off without leaving a note.

A BOUQUET to Austin J. Thompson, executive director of the Marin Human Rights Commission, for receiving a state commendation for his work as a member of the regional planning effort of the California Council on Criminal Justice.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A MOTORIST was tootling along the Pennsylvania Turnpike when he suddenly ran into an almost impenetrable fog. Finally, he made out a sign ahead, and got out of his car and struck a match to read it.

It was a familiar picture —and the caption read, "Smokey the Bear Says Put Out That Match!"

In his new book, "The Game of Baseball," Gil Hodges, Met manager and enormously popular ex-Dodger first sacker, tells about one of the most confusing days of his life. First, his Dodgers won a key World Series contest, 2 and 0 —and it was Gil who batted in the only two runs. Then he came home expecting a royal welcome from his son, Gil, Jr., then aged 5.

Gil, Jr., however, was watching TV. His only comment when his father entered the room was, "Gee, Daddy, you just missed Captain Midnight."

The editor of a popular fashion magazine contended recently that a sense of style was inborn. "As proof," she continued, "I could show you apprentice girls on my staff who haven't got the brains of a button — but turn them loose at the fashion previews and they come back with the best hat or shoes or dress of the season. They SMELL what's good and it has absolutely nothing to do with intelligence."

8-Year-Old Seeks Return Of Bike

I had my bike stolen on July 2 at Redwood High School 2:30 p.m. A blue sting-ray Schwinn bike registered and locked.

I miss it very much and without a bike it is hard for me to get around. I need a bike, so if anyone finds or sees it, please return it.

Hippies Did Not Hamper Firemen

We wish to correct misinformation printed on the front page of the I-J on July 5 under the captions "Hippies Hamper Firemen During Muir Beach Blaze" and "Marin Celebrates Glorious Fourth."

As residents of Muir Beach, we were participating in our annual July Fourth picnic on the private beach. . . . We were on the scene about 10 minutes before the first truck arrived, and we stayed until most of the people had gone. None of us saw any hippie hamper any fireman. . . . Some of us did see one long-haired young man attempt to help put out the fire.

In the other article, the I-J included this statement: " . . . Firemen had to enlist the help of law officers to 'quiet the hippies' before putting out the fire." This sensationalized statement . . . is fabrication or, at best, conjecture. What means were used by "law officers to 'quiet the hippies' "? The fact is, none — because none were needed. We witnessed no confrontation between law enforcement officers and hippies.

Nearly every sentence of these two articles having to do with the Muir Beach incident is incorrectly reported. . . .

The article further states that hippies "went down on the beach and set several other fires." While we noticed the three campfires on the main beach, we should point out that it is a rare evening when there is not at least one campfire there. As we sat around our own bonfires on the private beach, some of us saw the bonfires on the main beach earlier in the evening — long before the debris had been ignited.

Our purpose in writing is not only to offer our observations, but to encourage the I-J staff to be more ambitious in reporting the news accurately. It is much too easy to sensationalize, and by doing so, to create situations which are harmful to the community at large. We depend on the I-J to provide us with accurate and honest reports, particularly of local news, but we are often disappointed.

Ladies Will Get Recreation Center

You will rue the day you antagonize the Little Old Ladies on their recreation center. They are all lovable. I know many of them but they have the vengeance of a Borgia, the sting of a disturbed nest of wasps and the venom of a cobra.

I would rather build a recreation center myself than incur the wrath of the cornered female.

They have their minds made up to have a new center. They will have one. Press and Politicos might as well concede.

I love you ladies.

LINES ON LIVING

Be Constantly On Move Or Life Will Stagnate

By Rabbi
HAIM KEMELMAN

A restful soul in perpetual ease, is like restful water in a stationary tub, always in danger of becoming stagnant and rustful.

John Burroughs articulated this truth when he concluded that "An idle man is a wretched man." Idleness is festering scum and death. And if life has any comprehensible meaning to us at all, it is in the saving grace which is to be found in our daily tasks and responsibilities that lie immediately at hand, which alone can redeem us from our ferocious explosiveness.

Observe life and you'll find its immediate purpose and fulfillment. What is that end of life? It is, as best as we know, to dignify the means by which we live and to add beauty and nobility to our name which will be added to the guest list of lodgers on this planet. And since we are not owners and perpetual masters of our earth, we must pay for our ticket with saving toil so as to enjoy every sweet movement of our ride on God's global merry-go-round.

WE MUST constantly be on the move. We must have something to do. We must have some challenge, some work, some cause in which we can invest our creative energies. We must, for our own safety and security, invest ourselves in a love, in an ideal, in a project which will transcend us and redeem us.

Every person, by reason of intelligence adn potential power, is a danger to himself. There is enough flammable material and latent energy within us to make us explode like fire crackers that go up destructively in fury and smoke. The wise counselor pleads for self-expression, not self-explosion. The power that is in us must be harnessed constructively or it will be wasted; worse yet, it will being us to personal disintegration and individual waste.

THE PATTERN of growthful fulfillment is unique: life is on the move. The birds build their nests in the trees, the trees grow into bloom in the sun and man grows as he moves in creation and among men.

If you would crave for a life that will hold its savor to its very end; if you would pray for living never to become empty and stagnant and rusting; if you would join the army of watchers of sunny skies, the listeners of thrilling laughter, the gazers of beauty in distant hills — then, by all means, invest your life by being on the go.

The imprisoned soul needs the freedom of the whole world, not the tinkering with one's self, the pre-occupation of one life, no matter how unique that life may be. In the surrender of the fulfilled self toward an extension in a greater world of living and experiencing, we become the electric poles that will carry light to that open and bright city which is the City of God. Because when we shoulder a burden and move from a selfish pre-occupation to a selfless interest, we objectify our individual life and transmute it to a total of life of self-extension and self-enlargement.

W. BERAN Wolfe taught the ghostly malcontents of his day that by absorbing themselves only in their own interests and desires they have failed to derive the deeper joys that are inherent in human relations and involvement, thus creating their own misery and unhappiness. He wisely noted that human fulfillment is not to be sought "as if it were a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow, but among human beings, who are living richly and fully the good life. If you observe a really happy man you will find him building a boat, writing a symphony, educating his son, growing dahlias in his garden . . . living 24 crowded hours of the day."

And if we have none of these life-absorbing, life-sustaining hobbies, we can still earn our life by leaving "no tender word unsaid," no sweet melody unheeded, no beautiful sight unglimpsed. Keep moving, we must!

Finch Lost Big Chance When He Turned Down Veep Offer

WASHINGTON — Shortly before Robert H. Finch became secretary of Health, Eduation and Welfare he got sage advice from one who had been through the HEW grind. For two and a half years while Congress was adopting a series of long-delayed programs in education and health John Gardner, as secretary of the mammoth department, learned the hard way about the fierce pulling and hauling centering around interests most directly touching every voter.

Gardner, today head of the Urban Coalition, told Finch that he must, above all else, keep on good terms with the professionals who at the working level carry out the orders issuing from HEW. These were his primary constituents. He might have the trust of the President and the Congress, yet without the confidence of the workers in the vineyard across the land, he would be gravely handicapped.

In light of what has happened in recent weeks with Finch on a roller coaster of sharp ups and downs and his authority in question, this advice is singularly pertinent. The unhappy Finch must now try to regain a hold on his principal constituents in order to be effective in an office of far-reaching influence. That is, if he is to stay as HEW secretary.

FINCH CAME into the Nixon administration as the bright young star. Elected lieutenant governor of California when he was not yet 40, he had a promising political future. Manager for Mr. Nixon in earlier campaigns, he had shown a high order of political skill. He was rated a moderate in the California tradition that has generated a long succession of governors and senators contributing to the state's remarkable growth.

It has now been disclosed that Mr. Nixon offered the vice-presidency to Finch before he turned to Spiro T. Agnew. He said no, because of his closeness to the presidential candidate, both of them having their origins in the west. In retrospect this seems for his own future and for the Nixon administration to have been an unhappy error in judgment. After eight years of a Nixon administration he would at 52 have been in a perfect position to try for the No. 1 place.

TODAY EVEN his friendly critics are saying his usefulness has been so impaired by having been publicly overruled on issues of great substance that he should resign.

Stepping out, Finch could pursue his own political fortunes presumably with the blessing of his good friend and patron, President Nixon. The difficulty, however, is that in his home state the door to opportunity is closed with a sign marked conservative.

Sen. George L. Murphy, the 67-year-old former song-and-dance man, intends to run next year for a second term. His career in the Senate thus far has hardly been brilliant. But he may suit the current mood, an amiable smiling figure always ready with a speech for home and mother and a knack for keeping out of unpleasant controversy.

Far more important is the fact that he has the backing of the forces that have taken over the Republican Party in California and installed the conservatives in power.

Reagan is up for re-election in 1970. While there are reports that he is fed up with the governorship and his quarrels with the Democrats in the Legislature, he is regarded as certain to run again.

So the door to the future in Finch's own state is marked not only conservative but "don't disturb." The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare is, moreover, a loyal team player and the odds are strongly against his embarrassing his president by any precipitate act.

Jackie Had Personal Problems? Nothing Compared To My Wife

WASHINGTON — The memoirs of Jackie Kennedy Onassis' secretary, Mary Gallagher, have titillated the world. Jackie's most secret thoughts and observations soon will appear in book form, after being serialized in the Ladies Home Journal. I was as fascinated as anyone to read about Jackie's money problems, her attitude toward her White House guests, her penchant for clothes and her method of handling gifts sent to her for her children.

I'll admit that at first I was critical of Jackie's behavior, but then the thought occurred to me what would happen if my wife had an upstairs secretary and the secretary wrote about all the things my wife did. It would go something like this:

"Annie Buchwald was quite lavish with money and never seemed to be able to make this books balance. Mr. Buchwald called me in one day and said that he was sick and tired of paying all of Mrs. Buchwald's bills and he wanted a complete record of everything she spent.

"WHEN I informed Annie of this, she became enraged and told me to tell the caterer that the next time we had a party, he was to use leftover wine from glasses to refill the glasses of people still drinking.

"I always worked upstairs in the bedroom, so no one knew that Annie had a secretary. Once, the people from Newsweek came to the house to interview Annie, and she made me hide in the broom closet.

"She wanted everyone to think she answered her own mail.

"Annie could be kind and at other times she could go into fits of rage. Once, I remember, the Salvation Army came to the door and she cleaned out the attic. But another time, when Mr. Buchwald lost $100 at poker, she wouldn't talk to him for two days.

"IT WAS DIFFICULT to get work done because Annie was always on the phone, either talking to her friends or to her sister. I remember one hot day when we had to write a letter to Sears and Roebuck about a broken washing machine and she said, 'Let's not work today, it's so lovely outside.'

" 'Wonderful.' I said, 'What should we do?' " 'Why don't you clean the swimming pool?'

"It was this kind of thoughtfulness which made me want to work for Annie forever.

"BUT MONEY was always a problem. I once asked for a raise and she said, 'Of course you need one. Ask my husband.' I asked Mr. Buchwald and he said I should ask Annie. I went back to Annie and she became furious and said, 'If I give you a raise, it will have to come out of my own pocket.' I went back to Mr. Buchwald who said, 'I don't know what we'd do without you, Margie.' And I said, 'Does that mean I can have a raise?' and he said, 'Yes, but the next time we have a party, tell the caterer to mix ginger ale with the white wine. No one will know the difference.'

"I think one of the things that got Mr. Buchwald particularly mad was Annie's extravagances when it came to redecorating the house. Annie never seemed to get it the way she wanted it. One time she told Mr. Buchwald she wanted new slipcovers and he got infuriated and said, 'That does it. From now on we're not going to serve any wine.'

"I DON'T know what happened to turn Annie against me. One day she called me up and accused me of telling the Washington Post society editor that we weren't serving wine any more at our house. I protested it hadn't come from me, but she was in such a state she wouldn't believe me.

"So I decided to write these memoirs. It will be a good lesson to her, and it will make her think twice about hiring another personal secreetary.

Space: Something Out There For All Mankind

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Men have been flying to the moon for 2,000 years. But in imagination only.

Somebody once said that what man can imagine, he can do.

The Apollo 11 flight of astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins, and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., due to begin Wednesday, will be a magnificent test of this proposition.

On May 25, 1961, in an address to Congress, President John F. Kennedy said:

"I believe that this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal before this decade is out, of landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to earth."

His speech fired the imagination of both the people and the Congress, and the Apollo program to land not one but two men on the moon was launched.

TOTAL COST

Total cost of the program is estimated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) at $23.9 billion. This includes $350 million for each Apollo manned flight and $2.4 billion worth of permanent facilities such as the monster $1.04 billion Apollo launch unit at Cape Kennedy.

There are those who feel this is a waste of money. Why go to the moon, they argue, when there is so much misery to be relieved on earth?

A famous scientist in a recent interview, made this reply:

"I do not share this view. The exploration of the cosmos—the moon and the planets—is a noble aim ... our generation has the right to be proud of the fact that it has opened the space era of mankind ...

The scientist was Aanatoli A. Blagonravov, Soviet academician, and the interview with him was published in Komsomolsksys Pravda, the Communist youth newspaper.

Whether man has any business to want to explore the moon, and also the planets, when he has so far failed to cope successfully with his troubles on earth, is a matter about which there probably can never be universal agreement.

But man, the curious animal, has almost always been at odds with man, the prudent animal.

There have been times when the interests of both have coincided, and history has given those moments decorative labels—the "glory" of Greece, the "grandeur" of Rome, the "renaissance" of Western civilization. The space exploration era may be another of those moments in time.

From the day of its birth in 1958 the civilian agency, NASA, will have spent on space activities alone nearly $38 billion through fiscal 1970. The fact that nearly $24 billion of that total is for manned flight, as distinguished from scientific and other space projects, gives an idea as to the priorities involved.

SOME ARGUE

There are those who say too much emphasis has been placed on man-in-space and, consequently, too little on instruments-in-space.

It was instruments in space that discovered the earth's Van Allen radiation belts, measured the "solar wind" and the strange magnetic fields of interplanetary and near-earth space, photographed the moon and Mars, hung communication relays in orbit, investigated the climate and atmosphere of Venus, created a brand new navigation system based on satellites, and provided a fabulous method of looking down on earth from orbit to get never before obtainable information about our planet's weather and its water, agricultural, and mineral resources.

What do we do now?

Well, the space enthusiasts argue that we've got our feet wet in space and we can't back out now.

After this month's Apollo 11 lunar landing attempt, NASA has three additional moon flights programmed, each carrying new scientific experimental packages to be planted on our satellite. It also is asking authorization for six more missions, carrying Apollo through 1972.

SPACE STATIONS

In addition, it is seeking approval for permanent space stations, with 50 scientist-astronauts living in orbit for up to a year starting in the late 1970s or early 1980s. These stations would be supplied and their crews relieved from time to time by reusable rocket craft serving as space shuttles capable of leaving and returning to earth from spaceports in much the same way transport planes operate from today's airports.

The space age which is now carrying us to the moon was born in an atmosphere of shocked surprise when the presumably backward Russians launched the first artificial earth satellite on Oct. 4, 1957.

They followed with a sensational list of "space firsts"—the first man in orbit, the first woman in orbit, the first "extravehicular" maneuvers in orbit, the first invasion of the thick atmosphere of Venus by man-made instruments, and many others.

LAGGED IN RACE

But despite this head start, the Russians have lagged in the race to put men on the moon. Since the time when the United States finally decided to catch up, this country has pushed ahead of the USSR in many significant phases of space competition.

Even so, there is no indication the Russians are resigned to losing the space race. NASA administrator Thomas O. Paine recently told a Congressional committee that his agency's budget would eventually have to climb back toward the $6 billion a year level to keep us even with the Russians. He noted that they are spending a larger share of their wealth on space activities than we are.

There also is no sign the Russians have abandoned hope of putting men on the moon soon. Cosmonaut Aleksei A. Leonov who in March, 1965, became the first human being to move around in space outside of his life-supporting space capsule, told a group of Japanese journalists in Moscow on June 2 that Russians would land on the moon in 1969 or 1970. He promised the Japanese that they would be able to exhibit some moon matter brought back to earth by Russia at the Osaka Worlds Fair in 1970.

CAN ONLY GUESS

U.S. space experts can only guess why Russia hasn't tried to send men to the moon by now. It looks to some American observers, however, as though the Russians decided to put off a lunar landing attempt until they could perfect a rocket powerful enough to shoot for the moon directly from earth orbit instead of taking on the chancy problem of a descent from lunar orbit, as planned by the Apollo astronauts.

For more than two years, now, it has been understood in this country that the Russians were developing a direct ascent rocket with some 10 million pounds of booster thrust, compared to Saturn 5s 7.5 million. If they have, they haven't let the world know about it. But if Leonov knew what he was talking about last June 2, they must have.

The question remains as to why should either Russia or America want to explore the moon. The answers are many.

Perhaps the uneroded moon holds clues to the origin of the earth and the solar system.

Perhaps somewhere in its crust there is evidence of how life began.

Perhaps the moon is a great repository of valuable mineral wealth.

Perhaps it would make an ideal base for further exploration of the universe, not only by man but by man's instruments.

IDEAL SITE

Perhaps with its airlessness and low gravity it would be an ideal site for manufacturers whose products are best produced under conditions which are hard to establish on earth.

Dr. George E. Mueller, NASA associate administrator for manned space flight, told a Congressional committee recently that:

"Another objective of lunar exploration is to learn about man as a space explorer—his capabilities and limitations. Some day man will move on to other planets; the moon is the training ground."

So also will be the big space platforms, in which Russia, too, has manifested much interest. Mueller has said that before we can think of sending men to Mars we must find out how they get along in earth orbit for periods up to a year.

Some NASA officials have predicted that the United States will be gearing up for manned missions to Mars in the 1980s. Nobody knows what such a project would cost. But $100 billion seems a reasonable guess.

For the time being the United States is not planning any grand projects comparable to or dwarfing Apollo in cost, but we have already sent robots winging toward Mars which will fly by the planet this summer, and we have well under way plans to drop two instrumented spacecraft on the Martian surface in 1974.

IN 10 YEARS

Dr. John E. Naugle, associate NASA administrator for space science and applications, ventured in a recent talk to speculate about what the U.S. space program would be like 10 years hence in 1979.

We will have, Naugle said, men living more or less permanently on the moon, much as they are living in the antarctic today.

We will be placing the first large permanent astronomical observatory in space. Astronomers all over the world will take part in planning its work.

We will have made four to six instrument landings on Mars and will know whether life exists there. If we find it doesn't we will consider plans to seed Mars with earthly organisms to learn whether it is possible to transplant life from one planet to another.

We will have taken close-up photos of the surface of little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun, and also of Venus, earth's enigmatic sister planet.

We will be able to communicate, thanks to satellites, between any two points on the globe and to watch television programs originating anywhere on earth.

Behind The News

THIS WEEK In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The pronounced lull in the Vietnam War has entered its third week, prompting speculation by Allied commanders about the real meaning of the diminished fighting. Are the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong reducing contact with American and South Vietnamese forces in a purposeful effort to hasten peace, or are they merely preparing for another wave of increased fighting?

The clearest indication of the lull was the new casualty figures. In the week ending last Saturday, 153 American soldiers died in military action, the lowest weekly total since the second week in January. South Vietnamese and Communist casualties also dropped to new lows.

The first 814 soldiers of the 25,000 to be pulled out of South Vietnam arrived on the West Coast.

In Paris, the peace negotiators clung to their previously stated positions. Chief North Vietnamese negotiator Xuan Thuy said President Richard M. Nixon does not really desire peace in Vietnam and has followed the policies of former President Lyndon B. Johnson. U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge replied that no negotiated settlement of the war is possible until North Vietnam and the Viet Cong modify their demand for a complete withdrawal of American troops.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

Cape Kennedy: The countdown began on schedule for the Apollo 11 flight to the moon. Space agency officials carefully checked the astronauts so they will know if the men undergo any changes or contaminations from their walk on the moon's surface.

Cairo: Egyptian soldiers crossed the Suez Canal twice to raid Israeli-held positions and artillery exchanges continued, a tense situation that prompted United Nations Secretary General U Thant to warn that "open warfare has been resumed" throughout the cease-fire area. Israel said its jets shot down seven Syrian MIG21s in a spectacular air battle.

Moscow: Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko called for friendlier relations with the United States and showed interest in a summit conference with President Nixon.

THE SYMINGTONS DIFFERENT TYPES

Father, Son Go Their Separate Ways In Busy Capitol Hill Duties

By WILLIAM CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stuart Symington, 68, has an unusual kind of common bond with his son, James, 41.

Both men serve in the U.S. Congress. The father is senior senator from Missouri. The son is a freshman congressman from Missouri. Both are Democrats.

Beyond these similarities, the two congressional Symingtons are quite different types of men, and they reached their present positions through sharply divergent career paths.

ONE OTHER

There is only one other father-son combination in Congress—the widely publicized team of Sen. Barry Gdolwater, R-Ariz., and Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif.

Unlike the Goldwaters, who are very chummy, the Symingtons tend to go their separate ways in Washington.

They see each other less frequently than one might think. They talk now and then about their work and occasionally make joint announcements of things affecting their Missouri constituencies.

But they also can disagree—as they did early in this congressional session on the "reluctant elector" controversy. James Symington contended a presidential elector should be free to vote his own convictions. Stuart Symington contended an elector has a moral obligation to vote for the presidential candidate to whom he was pledged.

DIFFERENT AREAS

Most of the time, they find themselves working on different problems so there's no occasion for agreement or disagreement.

Stuart Symington came to the Senate 17 years ago, after a distinguished career as a business executive and appointive government official.

After graduation from Yale, he went to work for the Emerson Manufacturing Co., in his home town of St. Louis, and rose rather quickly to its presidency. He was summoned to Washington in 1945 by his fellow-Missourian, President Harry S Truman, who named him chairman of the surplus property board. This was the first of a series of important government jobs for the elder Symington.

He was in succession head of the surplus property administration, assistant secretary of war, secretary of the Air Force, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

SENATE IN '52

Symington resigned from the RFC to return to business, but he had already contracted Potomac fever and decided to run for the Senate in 1952.

He won in a landslide on his first try and subsequently won reelection by even bigger margins in 1958 and 1964. He plans to run again next year.

The senator is a voracious reader of books and articles. A few years ago he took a speed-reading course so he could wade through books at a rate of more than 1,000 words a minute. He likes to write his own speeches, and even takes a hand in answering his mail. He puts in long days on Capitol Hill and nearly every night packs his briefcase with "homework" to be studied at his northwest Washington home.

In 1960, Symington was a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Although he lost out to John F. Kennedy, he has continued to be one of the most powerful Democrats in Congress.

He is the only senator who served on both the armed services and the foreign relations committees. He is also an ex-officio member of the appropriations committee, with a vote on matters affecting armed services and space.

James Symington was born Sept. 28, 1927, in Rochester, N.Y.

LAW DEGREE

After prep school at Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts, he enlisted in the Marines at the age of 17, just in time for the closing year of World War II. He came out a private first class and went to Yale and then on to Columbia for a law degree. He was an assistant city attorney in St. Louis, then was with the firm of Cobbs, Armstrong, Teasdale and Ross. After a two-year stint with the U.S. Foreign Service, he went with the Washington law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter.

President Kennedy made Symington deputy director of the Food for Peace program and in 1962, Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy named him an administrative assistant. Symington held that for a year, then returned to private law practice until appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson as chief of protocol in the State Depatrment in 1966.

On the first day of his new job, Symington hurried from the swearing-in ceremony to escort the Ambassador of Sudan to the White House. Once there Symington ushered the ambassador to a door, opened it, and discovered it was a White House closet.

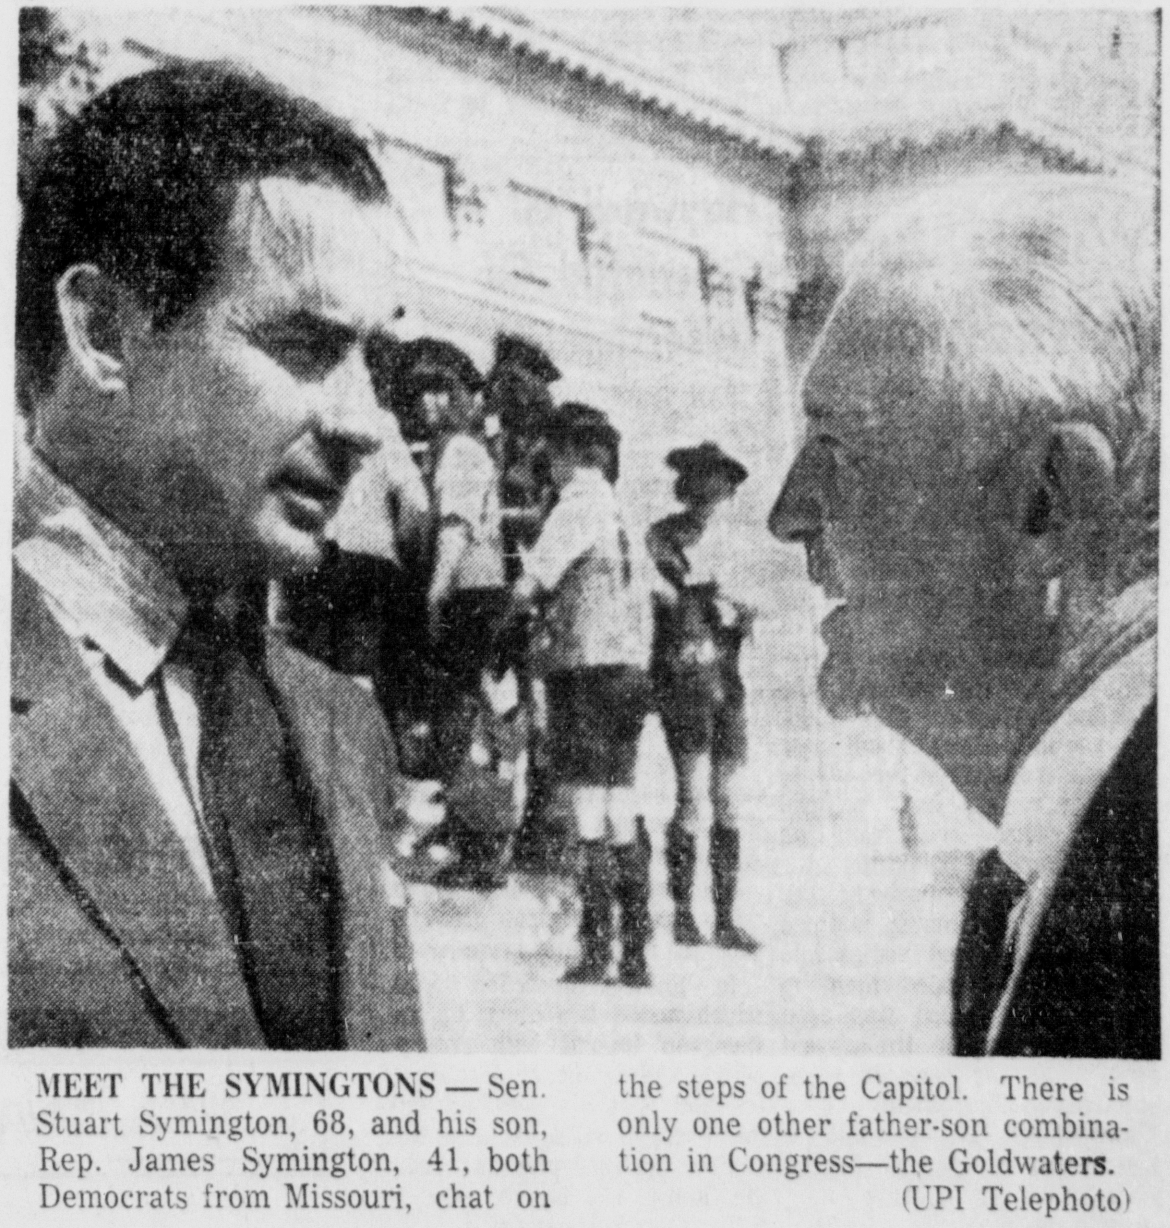
ELECTED IN FALL

Last fall, he won election to the House from Missouri's second district.

The younger Symington feels his experience as chief of protocol has been helpful to him as a congressman.

"Congress has its own protocol," he said in an interview.

"Having worked in protocol, I've learned how to make diplomatic suggestions. Each congressman judges the work of his fellows by taking into consideration the total past experience.



MEET THE SYMINGTONS — Sen. Stuart Symington, 68, and his son, Rep. James Symington, 41, both Democrats from Missouri, chat on the steps of the Capitol. There is only one other father-son combination in Congress—the Goldwaters. (UPI Telephoto)

Winnie Judd Extradition Delayed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Arizona sent California extradition papers in hopes of getting 1931 trunk murderer Winnie Ruth Judd back. Instead, Arizona got its papers back.

Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday temporarily rejected the Arizona request for Mrs. Judd, 65, now in a Martinez jail after she was recaptured recently in Danville. She had escaped seven years ago from an Arizona mental institution.

In 1931, she murdered her two female roommates, jammed their dismembered bodies into trunks, and shipped them to Los Angeles. Blood was seen dripping from the trunks and Mrs. Judd was arrested when she tried to claim them.

Mrs. Judd's attorney said he had been told Arizona's papers were returned because they were incomplete.

Pair Cleared By Jury In Pot Sale Case

A Marin Superior Court yesterday chose the stories of two young men on trial for drug sale and their friends over the testimony of narcotics agents.

Acquitted on a charge of marijuana sale were Edwin Michael Richmond, 20, and Steven Riall Moore, 21, both of Corte Madera.

A narcotics agent had identified them as the men who sold him a kilo of marijuana at a house in Woodacre where they were then living. Richmond and Moore, however, maintained they were not in the house the evening of Sept. 27, 1968.

Their stand was backed up by two friends who also testified in the courtroom of Joseph G. Wilson that Richmond and Moore had gone with two girls to the Avalon in San Francisco that night.

When they returned home, they were arrested, they said.

Law officers said, however, that the pair was arrested when they attempted to flee through the back door of the house.

The young men were defended by San Francisco attorney Terrence Hallinan.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas, who had accompanied officers the night of the arrest in Woodacre, prosecuted the case.

Bomb Scare Empties Fairfax Theater

The Fairfax Theater was emptied of about 300 film viewers last night when an anonymous caller said a bomb was due to explode at about 10 p.m., a fire department spokesman reported today.

He said firemen searched the building without finding any trace of a bomb.

Terra Linda Pets Win For Children

The dogs of Anne Little and Edward Little were first place winners yesterday at a youth pet show at the Terra Linda Recreation Center.

Ann Little's dog, Sam Sr., was adjudged best big dog at the show, while Ginger, belonging to Edward Little, was selected as the best small dog.

Other owners of winning pets were Barbara Blue, Mary Buckley, Alan Boyce, Pat Townsley, Joan Silva, Jim Miller, Jessica Middleman, Roxanne Iacovetti and Mark Boyce.

Hayward GI Convicted Of Desertion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pvt. Buddy J. Shaw, of Hayward, was convicted yesterday of desertion and sentenced to nine months at hard labor.

Shaw, 18, one of 27 soldiers charged with mutiny at the Presidio stockade last October, also was given a bad conduct discharge for leaving his work detail for three days last Nov. 2.

In the Presidio mutiny case he had received a dishonorable discharge and 15 months stockade time.

The sentences of both cases, which are unrelated, are subject to automatic review.

In Shaw's desertion trial, which lasted two days, his father, an invalid with emphysema and a heart condition, testified that his son had left the Presidio stockade last November to go home and help the family. His mother runs a coffee shop in Hayward.

Regents Vote New Lecture Regulations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— The University of California has eliminated its ban on guest lecturers adopted last fall when Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver was hired as a speaker in an experimental course on the Berkeley campus.

Gov. Ronald Reagan and almost all other U. C. regents voted for the provision yesterday. The change, suggested by U. C. President Charles J. Fitch, set up a new policy on guest lecturers, holding department chairmen accountable for their appointment.

Hitch said his new proposal still was "the strictest regulation on guest lecturers of any university in the United States."

On other issues, regents discussed in private the hiring of a controversial professor at U.C. Santa Barbara, took another step toward building students housing on Berkeley's disputed "people's park" land by allocating $130,000 for plans and gave Berkeley Chancellor Roger W. Heyns a three-months paid vacation.

Regents also voted unanimously for stricter campus regulation of experimental courses at Berkeley and UCLA.

Lawmakers Seek Viet Veterans' College Aid

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An effort has been started in the Assembly to get the University of California and state colleges to admit Vietnam veterans who meet entrance requirements.

Assemblyman Robert G. Beverly, R-Manhattan Beach, yesterday introduced a resolution asking the university and the colleges to admit veterans they feel "show promise, motivation and ability to complete a program of higher education."

Beverly said a study showed only a small percentage of Vietnam veterans are entering colleges compared with the large numbers of World War II and Korean War veterans who enrolled.

He said many of these failed to meet entrance requirements but were admitted under a "veteran special admission" category that was eliminated in the 1960 Donohoe Higher Education Act.

"Because of the apparent lack of emphasis today on the education of our returning veterans, many are moving into the business sector of our communities untrained for the jobs which are available," Beverly said.

Mill Valley Man Injures Shoulder

Russell Rafael Otton, 47, of 6 Plymouth Circle, Mill Valley, was treated yesterday for a left shoulder injury at Marin General Hospital following a motorcycle accident at 8 p.m. on Shoreline Highway near Loring Avenue in Tamalpais Valley.

Further details of the accident were unavailable today, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Restaurant On Agenda Again

The Mill Valley Architectural Advisory Committee will review a new master plan for a controversial Taco Bell restaurant at 497 Miller Avenue at its 8 p.m. meeting Tuesday in the board room of the Mill Valley Library.

The committee, planning commission and city council have rejected earlier plans for the take-out restaurant.

The architectural advisory panel also will consider plans for the Gulf Oil station at East Blithedale Avenue and Camino Alto and revised landscape plans for entryways into Enchanted Knolls.

Prefabricated Housing Gets Boost In Bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A bill to encourage mass production of prefabricated dwelling units, thus reducing housing housing costs, has moved to the Senate.

The measure by Assemblyman Pete Wilson, R-San Diego, approved 58-0 yesterday by the Assembly, would set up statewide standards for factory-built units and prevent local jurisdictions from setting up hundreds of differing regulations.

Wilson said manufacturers are "ready and willing but unable to engage in volume production because of the lack of uniformity of code requirements."

He said his plan will cut labor costs and produce savings in interim financing, building and professional fees and vandalism at conventional construction sites. And he said that as costs are cut so is the need for government subsidies for publicly assisted housing.

Many smart London shops price their wares in guineas, although the gold guinea, equivalent to one pound and one shilling, was last minted in 1813 and has vanished from circulation.

Federal Aide Denies Evidence On DDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture says it has no evidence DDT is unsafe even though the department temporarily has banned use of the pesticide in its own operations.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., charged earlier this week that the department is unwilling to permanently end all use of the chemical because "the Department of Agriculture is locked in with the agricultural interests who use DDT."

But Dr. George W. Irving, administrator of the agricultural research service, says the department has found nothing to warrant canceling registration of DDT for interstate shipment under current regulations.

"To do that, we would have to find that DDT is either ineffective or unsafe," Irving said in an interview. "We have no evidence that it is either."

The department has ordered a halt to use of nine persistent pesticides—including DDT—in government pest control programs pending completion of a study in early August.

The temporary USDA ban affects only a small percentage of pest control programs involving use of DDT and the eight other persistent, long-lasting pesticides, Irving said.

Concern over DDT's effects has been growing since early this year when the federal Food and Drug Administration seized 21,000 pounds of Great Lakes salmon found to contain DDT residues.

Irving said the effects on fish and wildlife do not enter into his agency's consideration of whether or not to register pesticides for interstate shipment, sale and use.

"There is nothing in our law which is explicit on that," Irving said. "That would be an extension of our authority that our lawyers aren't willing to grant us yet."

Suspect Held In Burglary

James Nichol Shyrock, 20, of 208 Morningside Drive, was booked into Marin County Jail early today on suspicion of burglary after he was arrested inside a Larkspur firm.

Details of the burglary were not available from Larkspur police today.

Shyrock was held in lieu of $6,250 bail for arraignment in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Skating Star Colin Beatty Picks Marin

Ice Follies Favorite And Family Like San Rafael

BECAUSE COLIN BEATTY is so often on the road with the Ice Follies as one if its skating stars, he and his family especially cherish the hours they are able to spend together in their San Rafael home. He holds youngest son Andrew, 5. Oldest son Christopher, 9, is in the center, and wife Molly, herself a former professional skater, is on the right.

After 18 peripatetic years of touring the United States, Canada and Europe as ice skating stars, Colin and Molly Beatty are doubly happy to have a permanent "home base" at 289 Ellen Drive, San Rafael.

The decision to establish a home was reached four years ago when Mrs. Beatty also decided to retire from skating to the life of a housewife.

The couple, as members of the famed Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies company, had long been accustomed to spending their summers in the Bay Area. It was natural, therefore, that they should decide to locate in Northern California.

BUT WHY San Rafael in particular?

Answers Beatty: "The entire Bay Area is beautiful, but San Rafael appealed to us especially because of its ideal weather."

Then he smiles: "Since both Molly and I were born and reared in England with its dreadful climate, I guess it is to be expected that we would be weather-conscious."

HE ADDS: "Also there was San Rafael's easy accessibility to such places as Lake Tahoe and Lake Berryessa, as well as San Francisco. And the town just seemed like home to us, with all of the people so very nice."

So now Molly Beatty and two sons, Christopher, 9, and Andrew, 5, are year-around San Rafael residents, joined by Colin when he is not on the road with the Ice Follies in its 27-cities-a-year touring schedule.

Says Mrs. Beatty: "I thought retiring meant to take it easier. But I have never worked so hard in my life as I have as a housewife and mother."

WITH COLIN away so much of the time, she is also the gardener in the family. The profusion of blooming plants and shrubs and the lush green lawn attest to her English "green thumb."

Additions to and decorating of the house have also commanded much of her attention.

And while she is involved now in some community work, she is awaiting the enrollment of younger son Andrew in school in the fall before she plunges into greater participation in such activities.

THE BEATTYS were skating in Germany as a team when they were signed for a six-week engagement in Chicago that first brought them to America. That performance run stretched into 11 months, and they were spotted by Ice Follies talent scouts. Soon they were an integral part of that colorful show.

Now Colin is best known to Ice Follies audiences as a peg-legged but nevertheless swashbuckling pirate, performing a comedy routine with partners Bob Leduc and Bill Jack, both also San Rafael residents.

He appears as well in a num-

ber entitled "The Beattys of Leicester Square."

BEFORE MAKING skating his profession, Beatty was a professional soccer and ice hockey player and remains an avid fan of both sports.

However, he says: "While soccer and hockey are great, skating has always been my first love. It is wonderful entertainment as well as a most enjoyable sport.

"For the skater, there is the constant challenge of keeping in top form. Even with years of experience, one must practice and practice very day." At 43, he remains a trim five-foot-eight inch 145-pounds.

HE DESCRIBES the Ice Follies company as "very much like a large family, most congenial, all fun-loving. The skaters enjoy what they are doing, and I am sure the audiences can feel that."

The best part of the extensive travel schedule, he feels, is the opportunity to make friends in so many cities.

But right now the Ice Follies is on what is for Beatty the best part of its itinerary. A one-week run at the Oakland Coliseum ends tomorrow, and then the company will be performing Wednesday through Aug. 31 at Winterland in San Francisco.

IT IS A favorite time with Beatty because the short commute to Oakland and to San Francisco enables him to live at home in San Rafael and to spend considerable time with his family.

Do the boys skate?

"Yes," answers Colin. But he adds that they will make their own choices of careers.

Andrew, he adds, seems to be a budding young showman who may well follow in his father's footsteps, or rather skate patterns.

THE BEATTY family enjoys skating together. And while Colin is on tour, Molly continues to work with the boys on their skating.

In Marin County, the Beattys note, they have joined a growing colony of show people who maintain either summer or year-around homes in San Rafael, Tiburon, Sausalito, Mill Valley and other communities.

Along with the fine weather and the congenial atmosphere, Beatty believes the opportunities for outdoor activities such as boating, fishing and swimming are prime attractions for these people.

Home Has Special Meaning For Much Traveled Skater

"When you are on the road and working hard for so much of the time, you look forward to breaks in which you can get outdoors and do something different," he explains.

BEATTY SAYS that after he has completed his skating career he and his family will remain in San Rafael.

"We will open a restaurant," he says. "We are in Marin to stay."

"Why Doesn't My Husband's Sports Shirt Retain Its Colors?"

Continual launderings will cause colors in sports shirts to loose their glamour long before the shirt has out-lived its usefulness. When a man has a sports shirt he likes, he wears it and wears it on all occasions, but its brightness is due to fade from repeated launderings.

Our suggestion will save you a lot of labor in the hot, humid summertime and preserve the colors your husband enjoys in his sport shirts. Send them to your professional drycleaner. They'll come back with clear colors and a crisp appearance. They'll hold their press longer and shed soil better. You'll be a happier housewife, too. Try it.

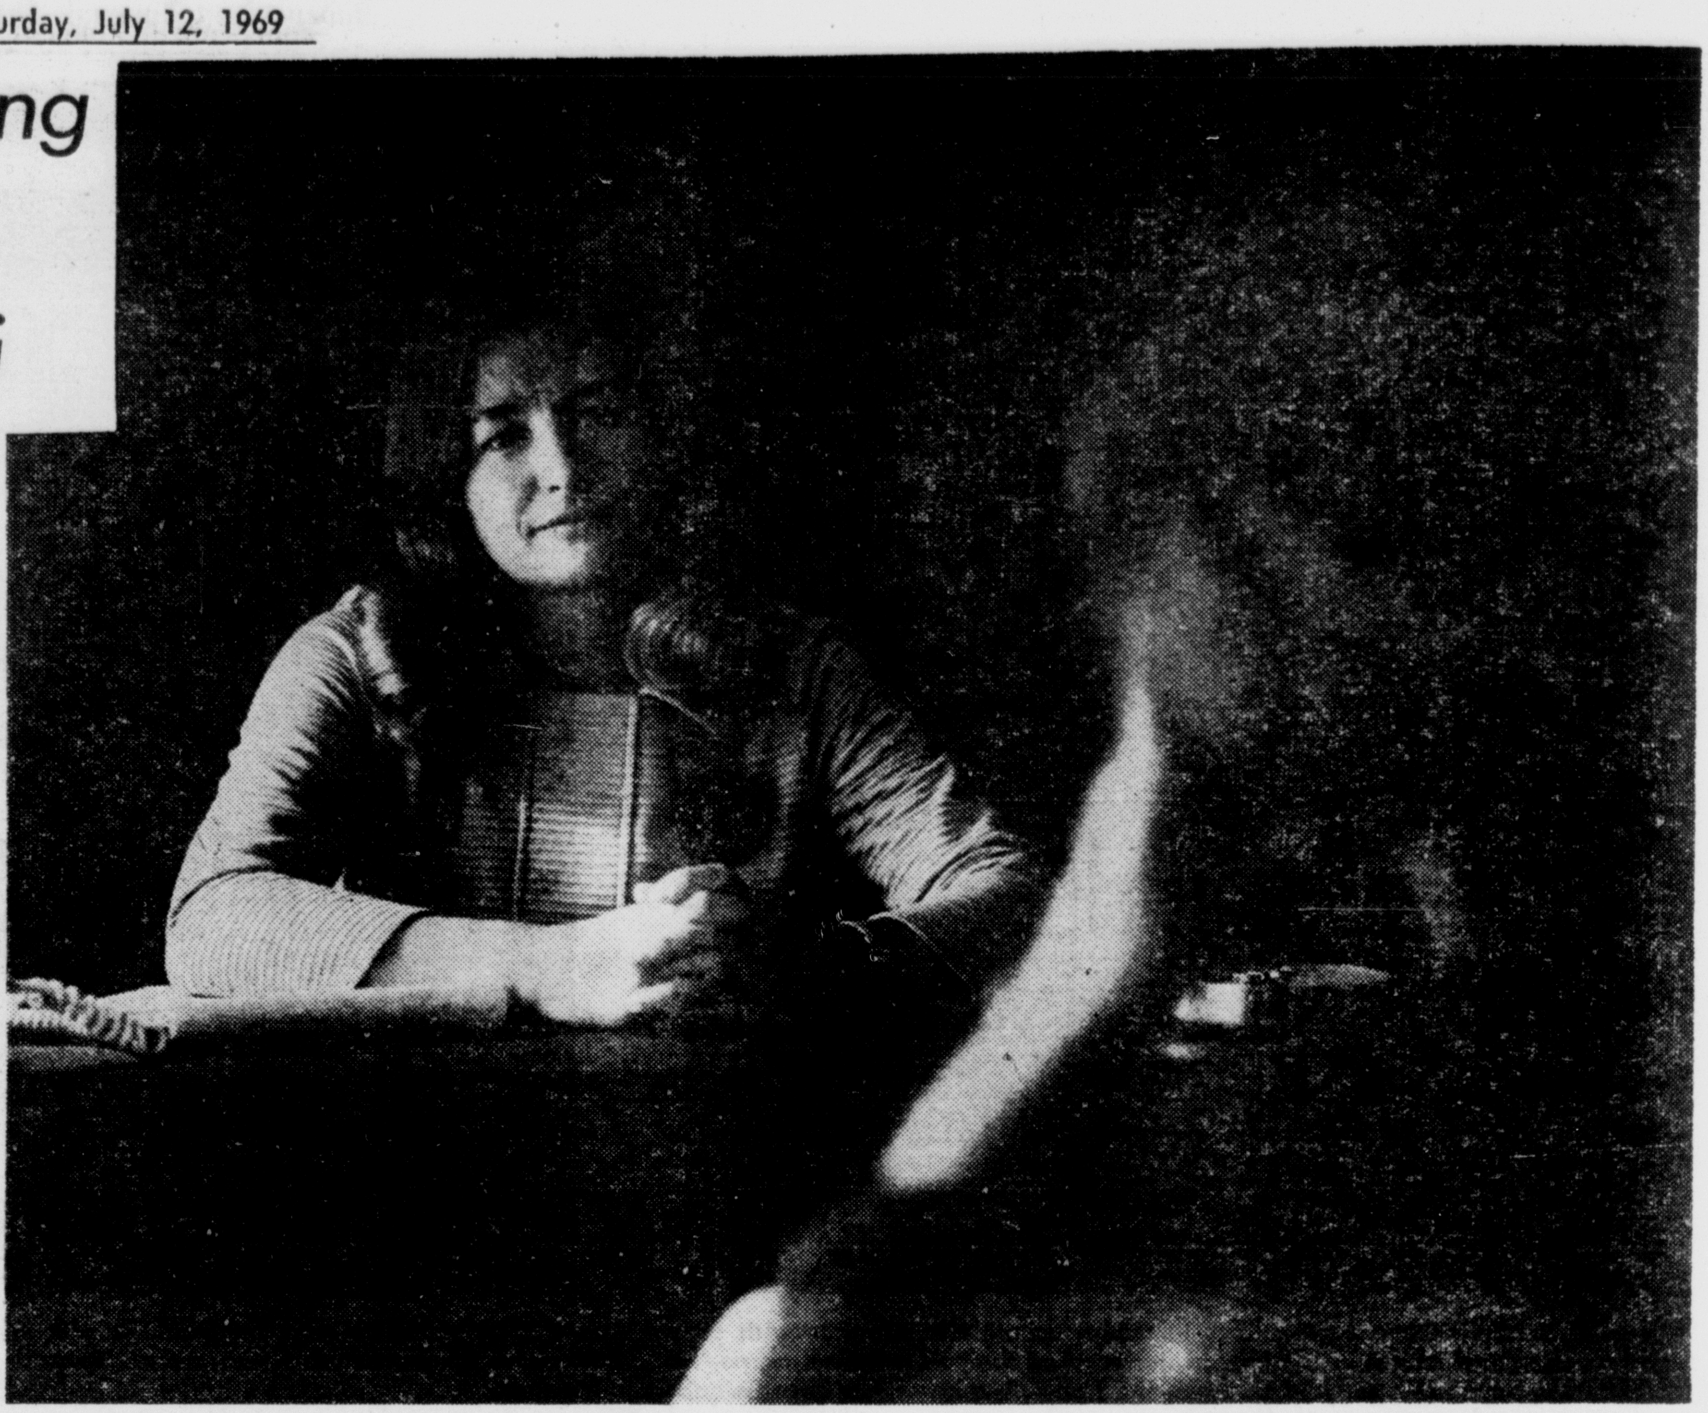
The Rewarding Career Of Helen Rossini

She Enjoys Health Center Challenges



FACING THE CAMERA and a mentally disturbed patient, Helen Rossini listens pleasantly and with interest to the problems of the young woman. Then she will offer her professional counsel. The scene is the Pacific Heights Home Health Center in San Francisco, where Mrs. Rossini, a Mill Valley resident, is a staff member. (Photos by Vano-Wells Pragliano Photography)

Eleven years ago when she graduated from the University of California, Helen Rossini, who lives at 161 Ellinor Avenue in Mill Valley, could not make up her mind whether to get her masters degree in journalism or social work.

Today, watching her at work at Pacific Heights Home Health Center, a rehabilitation facility located at 2246 Lombard Street, San Francisco, it's crystal clear she made a rewarding choice.

Whether it's group therapy with middle-aged women, most of whom live alone on painfully inadequate budgets and need to be constantly encouraged to reach out for contacts with the rest of the world, or the emphysema group, Helen's sense of drama, honesty and above all her concern for people is obvious.

NOT LONG AGO during a routine staff meeting it was brought out that many patients with emphysema (a disease which impairs the ability to breathe), worried constantly about dying suddenly, undergo personality changes and occasionally resist treatment.

In addition, although smoking is a contributory factor in the disease, the majority had not given up cigarettes. Not that they hadn't tried. One had gone to a smoke withdrawal clinic, without success; another had spent several weeks in a sanitarium trying to break the habit.

To lessen anxiety and to fight cigarette addiction, Helen suggested group therapy.

ALL THESE patients were men in their 50s who, for the most part, had retired early because of the debilitating effects of the disease. (The U.S. Public Health Service estimates that emphysema disables one out of every 10 wage-earners over 45.) Among the group was a blind merchant seaman, a professional ball player, a lawyer, a psychologist, a teacher, a few laborers and several white collar workers, all with tremendously different backgrounds.

The initial meeting started with a discussion of the purpose of the group and topics which might be helpful.

"Why go through all this hanky-panky?" one of the men growled. "We'll probably talk about nothing but sex. Sex is all psychiatrists ever talk about."

HELEN TURNED to him, "And what would you answer if I asked how your sex life was?"

He retired in confusion. The meeting was off to a good start.

Helen requested another patient — a chain-smoker — to sit in a chair and pretend a cigarette was sitting in the vacant place by his side. He was instructed to act out the part of both human and cigarette, trying to break off a relationship.

As the cigarette he asked, "Why the devil do you continue to smoke me, when you know you have emphysema and I make your condition worse?"

HIS ANSWERS, in varying forms, were: "You keep me from going completely crazy, from being committed to Napa when I'm so up-tight because I can't breathe. You settle my nerves."

"I need you to relieve the stress and strain of living when I'm too sick to do anything I really enjoy."

After a few minutes Helen Rossini took the part of the cigarette, obviously enjoying her role.

"YOU KNOW you're my slave?" she asked, tossing her blonde head.

He grinned and nodded.

"Don't you think you're a very weak man to let me dominate you like this?"

He agreed, but quickly added the comfort he received from her more than made up for any health hazard. When the meeting ended, the first patient paused near Helen on the way out.

"YOU ASKED about my sex live . . ."

"No, I didn't," she corrected gently. "I asked what you would do if I inquired about your sex life."

At the next staff meeting she reported that most of the emphysema group meeting had revolved around the issue of Mr. T's smoking: She had him do a psycho-drama scene which revealed how difficult it would be for him to quit, adding that he really sees the cigarettes as holding him together, controlling his anxiety and anger.

SOME PATIENTS require weeks of individual consultation before graduating to a group. An example is the 40-year-old widow referred to Pacific Heights Home Health Center for chronic depression.

Her main concern was her 16-year-old daughter who she said was "bright as a silver dollar, and the spitting image of her dad." In order to assure the girl of a college education the widow had two jobs: housecleaning in the daytime, baby sitting at night. Bronchitis coupled with arthritis was making it increasingly difficult and unwise for her to carry this heavy schedule but despite doctors orders she refused to slow down.

At the start of the second month's treatment she announced that her daughter was pregnant. Weeping freely she said she couldn't accept the fact that the girl was overjoyed by the idea of motherhood, although not married, and had no thought other than to keep the infant.

"I DON'T SAY mean things, but I think them."

When questioned about the "mean things" she revealed that she felt the daughter had become pregnant deliberately in order to secure her independence. Also that she wanted to call the mother of the prospective father, who was refusing to allow the couple to marry because the boy was still in high school. The daughter threatened to leave home if the mother made the call, so although she felt she should "arrange a marriage for my little girl" she hesitated in doing so. All this added to her already overburdened mental condition.

THE PROBLEM OF a Pacific Heights Home Health Centen patient who refuses to use the hand bar is discussed by Helen Rossini with Star Carpenter, physical therapist at the center and a Tiburon resident.

At this time the patient was referred to group therapy. After sitting quietly for a few moments she suddenly began talking about her daughter. This led to a tremendously moving psycho-drama between her and another patient, a 20-year-old divorcee.

THE YOUNGER woman, who was married two months before the birth of her child, expressed hostile feelings toward "mother" as well as a poignant longing to be accepted. The two women wept copiously and all kinds of stifled emotions were evidenced, both in the actors and those who watched.

"What do you want from me?" the widow finally cried. "I haven't scolded you. . . . I haven't thrown you out of the house."

"Neither have you tried to understand why I want to keep my baby," the "mother" shouted. "You act as though nothing happened, as though if we don't talk about my baby it won't come. You haven't helped me. You haven't loved me."

"BUT I WILL honey, I will."

After the drama the patient began to accept her unborn grandchild and was, in fact, beginning to take pleasure in the idea of being a grandmother. She also convinced herself the daughter didn't really want to marry, which relieved her of the burden of trying to arrange a marriage.

Exploring anxieties, both hidden and exposed, of troubled people is old hat to Helen Rossini. After graduating from the University of California, she worked for 18 months in the psychiatric ward of New York's Bellevue Hospital. Then, as she puts it, "I became nostalgic for the warmth of California and accepted a post as psychiatric social worker in the children's ward of Napa State Hospital."

SHE STAYED in what she calls "the world's most challenging, rewarding — and frustrating — job" for several years. So many of the youngsters, particularly those who were there because of the weaknesses of their elders, drinking or emotional parents, quickly responded to treatment. Lack of staff and foster homes for the children was a constant source of frustration.

In 1963 Helen joined the staff of the San Francisco Day Treatment Center, a five-year pilot program in mental health funded by the federal government. The majority of patients were either mentally or emotionally disturbed young people in their early 20s.

"Working with them was a tremendous experience and I learned a great deal," Helen says in a nostalgic mood. "Today's college students are braver and more honest than they were in my time, when one's image was so important.

"THEY'RE FAR more open to their emotions, but realistic, too. They look at us with clear, fresh eyes, and see how few adults are truly happy, merely dragging their way through life with neither purpose nor enjoyment. They've watched their parents struggle through loveless, unhappy marriages; their fathers commute day after day to jobs they hate. They are not willing to accept our way of life, or 'compromise,' a word my generation believed was synonomous with maturity.

"They are demanding change; not always going about it in the right way, and occasionally letting enthusiasm erupt into violence. But they're getting results."

Last summer, when the San Francisco Day Treatment Center closed, Helen was asked to join the mental health staff at Pacific Heights Home Health Center, a rehabilitation facility that was about to open at 2246 Lombard Street, San Francisco. In addition to the mental health program the center offered speech, recreational, physical and occupational therapy, with both podiatric and respiratory clinics.

THE CENTER, which serves handicapped people in San Francisco, Marin and San Mateo counties, is constantly shaping and reshaping programs to fit the needs of the community.

With her combined duties, there are days when Helen Rossini especially looks forward to 5 o'clock when she returns to her house on the hill, to husband, Oscar, and what she laughingly refers to as her "demolition team," their going-on-3-years-old twin sons.

Tow-headed Alejandro is a sturdy duplication of his mother. Miguel is dark, a junior edition of his father whom Helen met at the International House while both were students at the University of California. They dated off and on for 11 years and were married in September, 1963.

AS SHE RUSHED out of the office a few months ago Helen Rossini stopped at the desk of the secretary.

"You know, I never realized how quickly children talked, once they began. A few weeks ago my boys scarcely said a word. Now they put sentences together. Last Sunday I told them if they went out on the veranda and were good boys until I finished the cake I was baking, I'd let them lick the frosting bowl. Halfway to the door Miguel asked, 'What's good, Mommy?' "

Helen Rossini looked over the typewriter at the secretary. "How could I answer that? I couldn't say being good is doing what Mommy says or . . ."

And shaking her head she went to her car and headed down Lombard Street toward the bridge and home.

Talented 19-Year-Old Creates A New Musical

By JOAN LUBAMERSKY
and MARSHA MESSER

Alex Herrmann got his first taste of creative writing as an 8-year-old, pounding away at the keys of a small typewriter in the rear of a Volkswagen bus that was carrying him around Europe.

Alex explains: "My older brother, Ted, and I were touring Europe with our parents (Mr. and Mrs. Jiri Herrmann) in a Volkswagen. The monotony of travel was driving us crackers, so we began using the portable typewriter to keep a journal of our trip.

"The results were our own children's travel guide to Europe, plus a scrapbook in which we pasted the short stories we had written while on the move."

Another trip, this time to Barbados, afforded the Herrmann brothers another opportunity to write.

THEY BEGAN writing, editing and publishing The Teddy News which they distributed to other residents of the Caribbean resort where the Herrmanns were staying.

"Of course," says Alex, "Ted, being a year older, was the editor-in-chief and star reporter. He let me write stories about the tide rising, and also permitted me to deliver the papers to all the resort rooms — at 5 o'clock in the morning."

Now 19, Alex says: "I really think I began writing seriously because of that sibling rivalry. Ted was always better. Everyone thought he was so talented, and I just wanted to show them that I could do just as well."

THE LATEST product of this long-lasting creative surge will be seen starting next Thursday on the stage of the Fine Arts Theater at the College of Marin, Kentfield, when the Young Actor's Company begins a run of performances of his musical play, "The Unconventionals."

It can be seen Thursday through Saturday of next weekend, and then again Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of the following two weekends, with an 8:30 o'clock curtain-time.

Herrmann wrote the book as well as the lyrics for the songs, and he will also be appearing on stage.

"FOR MARIN, this may be a first. I doubt if ever before has there been a play produced here that was written, directed, choreographed and performed entirely by people under 25," he says.

And while the youthful company works without remuneration, Herrmann promises a polished, interesting production. "We think we have the elements of success," he says, "with a good script, an excellent director and a talented cast."

Even though he is still a teen-ager, "The Unconventionals" is not Alex Herrmann's first experience at writing a musical. A year ago he put together "For Lack of a Better Name," which was presented at Redwood High School in the spring.

"THAT I wrote backstage while I was appearing in the College of Marin's production of 'Billy Budd'," he says. "Since I was only on stage for about five minutes, I had plenty of time to write.

"The script and lyrics were my own. The music was borrowed from Rodgers, Hammerstein, Lerner and Loewe."

Herrmann will also be a member of the cast for "The Unconventionals."

Like his writing, his acting goes well back into his childhood.

HE REMEMBERS being cast as an eighth grader for a role in "Twelfth Night."

"Then," he says, "a week before the opening I went into a coma, and it was found I had diabetes. It came as quite a blow to learn that I had been replaced in the play by a girl."

Alex, born in San Rafael, lived in San Francisco for the first 11 years of his life, then returned to Marin County in 1961, attending Adaline E. Kent School and Redwood High School.

THROUGHOUT his high school years, he was active with the Young Actor's Company which provided him with the opportunity to play such diverse roles as an eagle, the President of the United States, and Bob Dylan singing a Coca-Cola commercial.

"The YAC has always been my first love," he says. "It is unique in that it gives us a chance to act, to sing and to write our own material. We learn all the disciplines of the theater — the quick changes, the comedy timing, and how to react when a skit bombs, as they do occasionally.

"Experience in the company has helped several of its members to go further in show business."

AND HE cites Dennis Gribbon, now playing Boy in "The Fantasticks" at the Ghirardelli Square Theater in San Francisco.

Along with valuable experience, the YAC has also provided some ordeals, young Herrmann admits.

"I remember one time," he says, "when, because of a wrong exit and a too-short allowance of time for a costume change, I wound up playing a preacher, half-dressed and barefoot. I've always wondered if the audience noticed."

HE SAYS the original idea for "The Unconventionals" came from watching the 1968 political conventions. "Most of the first draft was written in front of the television set."

Originally, he continues, the play had strong political overtones. "But as it evolved in second and third drafts, it became more people-oriented with a theme depicting the human side of politics — the personal problems of the candidates, and all the scheming, wheeling and dealing that is part of the behind-the-scenes action."

Before Herrmann could complete his project, he first had to find a composer to do the music.

HIS METHOD was to post a sign on the University of Southern California music department's door reading: "Talented composer-musician needed — fame and fortune will be yours, if you call my number."

Herrmann, who will be a sophomore at USC next fall, says: "The response was not overwhelming. In fact, I got only one reply, and that applicant proved entirely unsatisfactory. So at that point I really didn't know what to do."

But a friend suggested that Herrmann contact fellow USC student Emmet Acterman.

"I DID SO," recalls Herrmann. "Emmet played a piece

he had just written for me, and I was so impressed that I asked him at once to work with me on the show."

Acterman accepted, and the team produced the needed songs, as well as working the composer's "audition number" entitled "What Can I Say?" into the show.

With script, lyrics and music all finished, Alex arranged for the use of the College of Marin Fine Arts Theater for the show.

"MY NEXT important problem was to find a director," he says. "I called everyone I knew who might be of assistance, and this proved rather expensive, since I was at USC and most of my friends were in the Bay Area."

But those contacts put him eventually in touch with James Watson of the American Conservatory Theater who agreed to lend his talent and experience to the project.

Watson, a former jazz ballet performer and teacher with classical training at the London Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, had appeared in such ACT productions as "In White America," "Room Service," "Grailles" and "Alice in Wonderland," and had also served as director and choreographer for a number of stage productions. He staged and wrote the music for "The Wonderment of Gleep."

"I'M ALWAYS intrigued by new material," he says.

And on Alex Herrmann's work, he comments: "The writing style is light, slightly reminiscent of the 1940s and 1950s. It has to be approached from that standpoint. Yet we have compromised with the time, adding projections, light shows and interesting twists.

"The play is not without a message. But we don't hit you over the head with it."

WATSON'S responsibilities have included those of choreographer as well as director.

While major roles are played by Roy Stevens from New Zealand and Marin residents Petra Chambers, Don Carroll, John Bamberger, Ray Azevedo and Trudi Ferguson, for director Watson there are no "bit players" and no "chorus." Instead, he refers to "star groups one and two."

Mary Rosenquist of Terra Linda is another major contributor to the undertaking with original orchestrations.

"THESE YOUNG people have put a tremendous amount of time, effort and devotion into the play," Watson says. "I truly hope the community responds."

As for Alex Herrmann, he is not yet certain as to the exact direction his future course will take.

"Sometimes I see myself as a lyricist, and sometimes as an actor," he says.

AND HE ADDS: "Certainly I will also go on to get my drama teaching credentials. For the theater is a tough profession, and it is always wise to have something to fall back on, should the going get really rough."

The important thing, Alex Herrmann indicates, is that whatever he winds up doing for a living and for his creative inner satisfaction, it must have some connection with the theater.

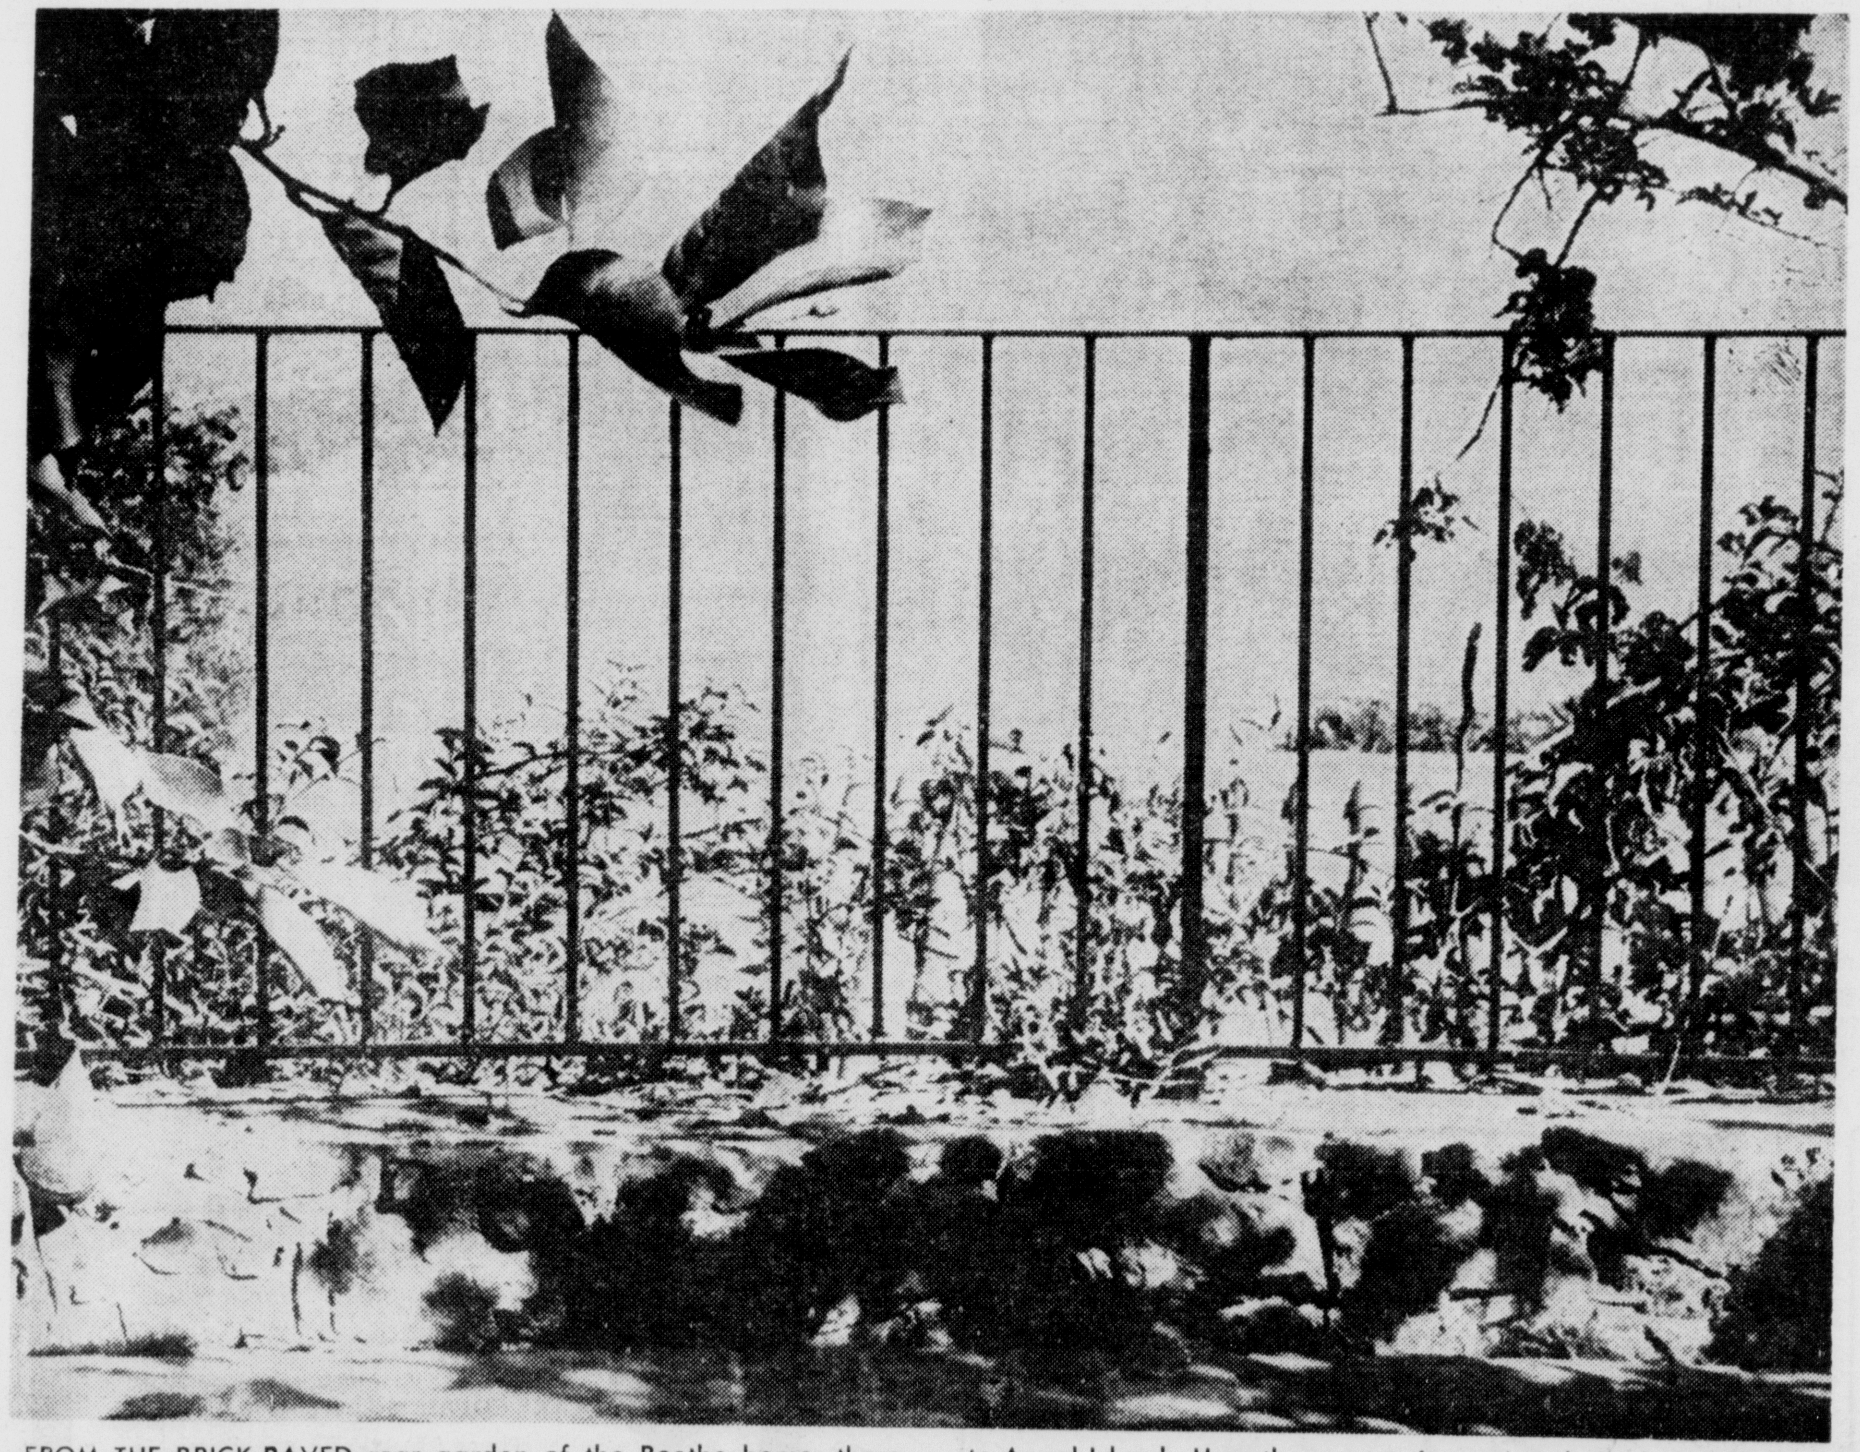
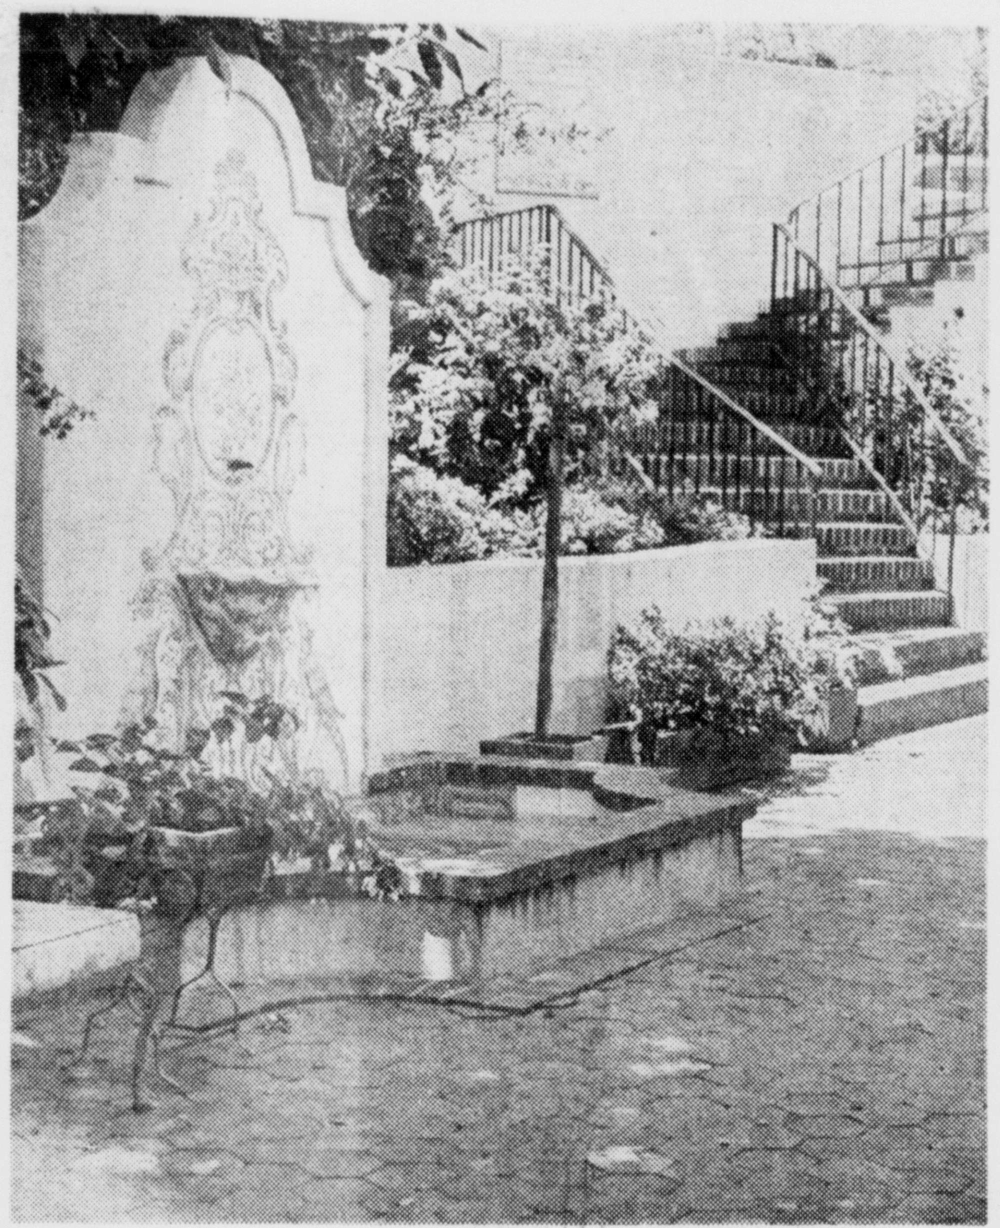
THE ENTRY GARDEN is but one of three gardens that grace the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Boothe of Sausalito. As designed by landscape architect Sidney M. Lewin, the entry court is a restful, colorful area, with its cheerful furniture, plantings and hand-painted tiles.



FROM THE BRICK-PAVED rear garden of the Boothe home, there is a panoramic view of the San Francisco Bay waters on across to Angel Island. Here the camera is peering through and over one of the wrought iron railings that add a graceful and airy touch to the outdoor decor.

Marin Living



THE FOUNTAIN with its imported Portuguese-fired tiles is the focal point in the entry garden that also features hexagonal-shaped bricks.

The Boothes Have Not Just A Single Garden, But Three

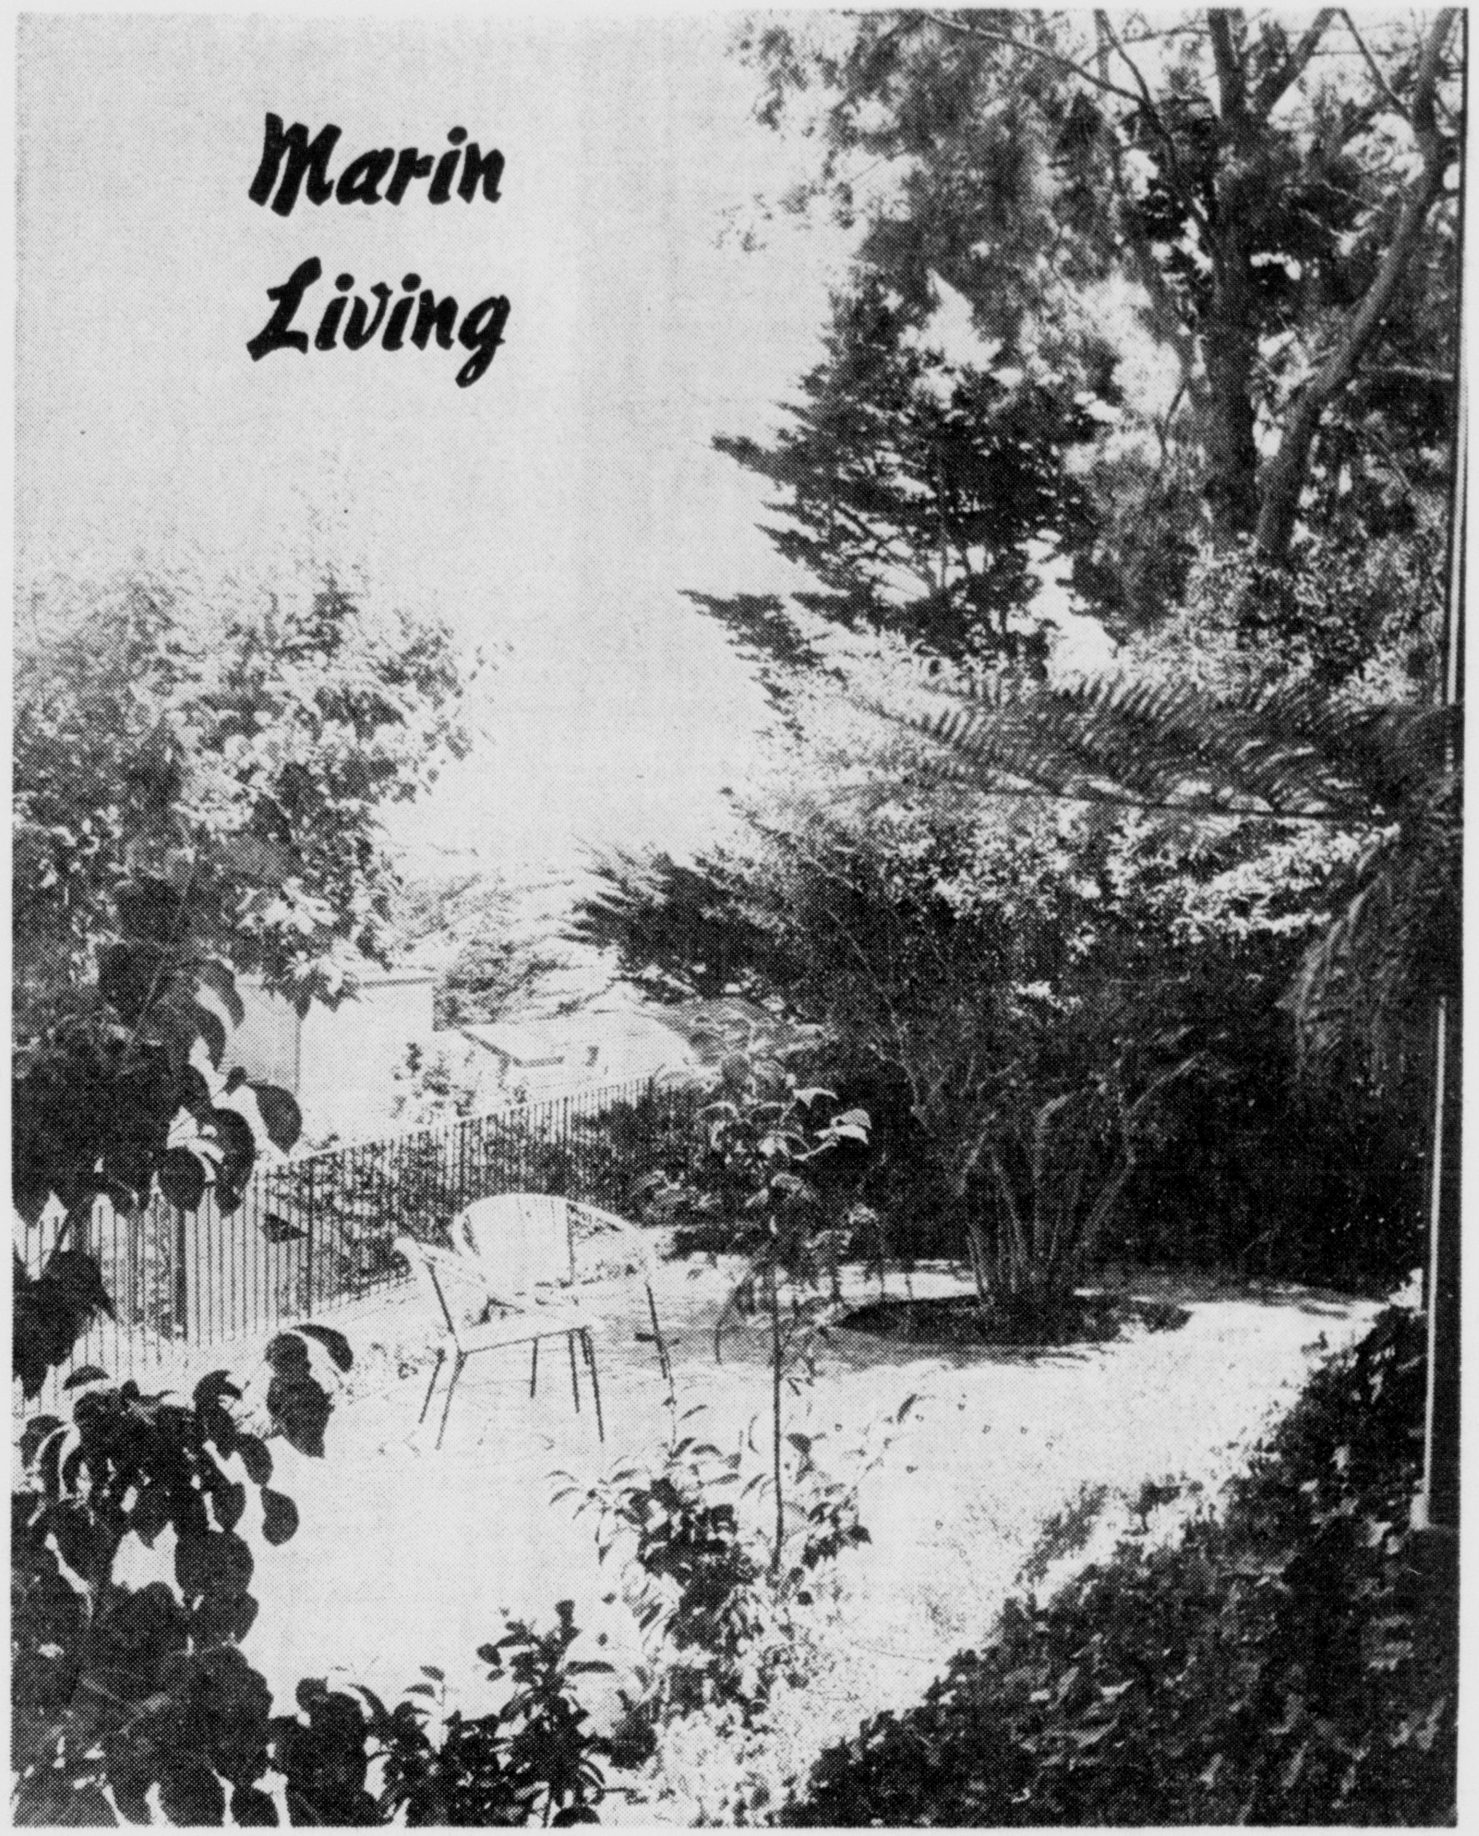
At the Sausalito home of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Boothe Jr., it is not just "a garden," but "gardens."

Landscape architect Sidney M. Lewin provided the Boothes with no less than three separate and distinct gardens, all elegant and gracious.

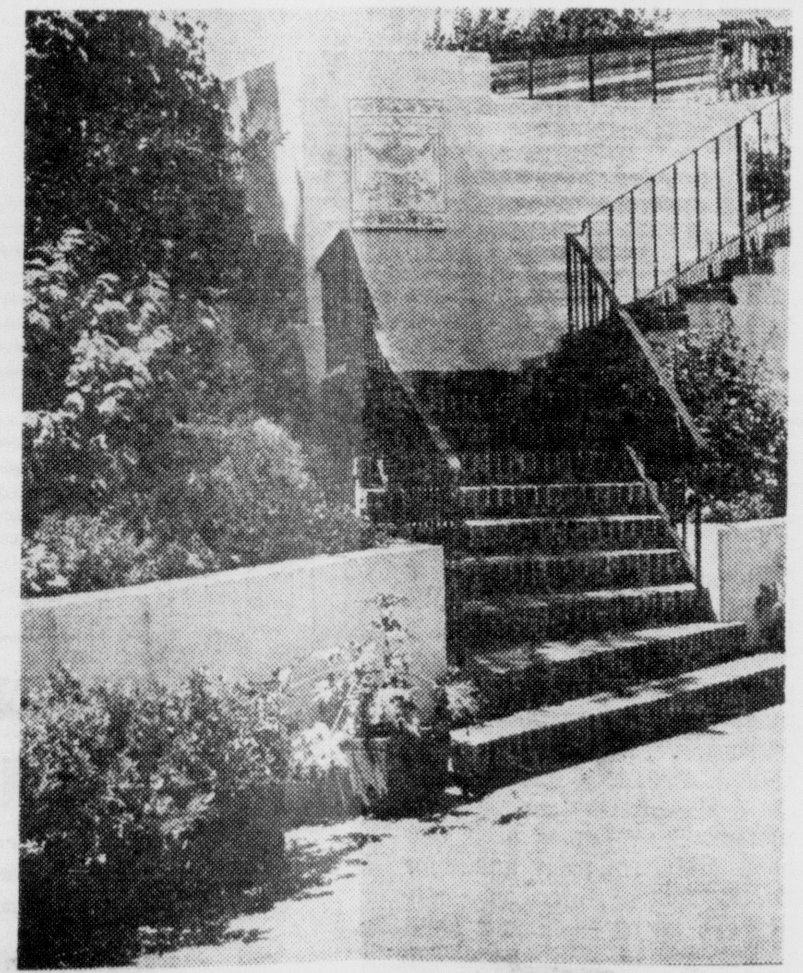
There is the front garden with its huge oaks and toyons; the entry garden featuring a hand-painted tile fountain and wall plaques, plus hexagonal-shaped brick flooring, and the rear garden, with its brick paving, wrought iron railings and panoramic view of the bay.

The special pride of the Boothes and the landscaper is the fountain. The Boothes chose the tile design from a photograph in Lisbon while traveling in Portugal, and from that picture the tiles were individually hand-painted and fired. Six months later, the tiles arrived in San Francisco. Lewin had ready a facade to receive the tile, and had also designed the basin pool, completely lined with hand-painted tile.

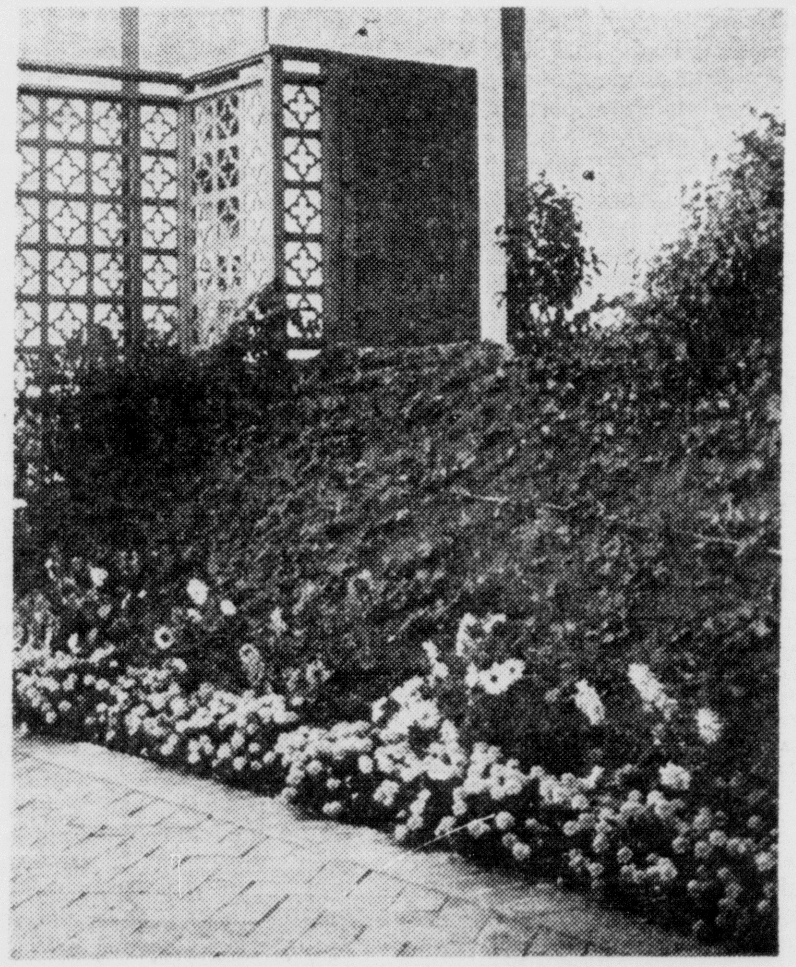
The basin's brick cap matches the adjacent brick paving in the entry court.



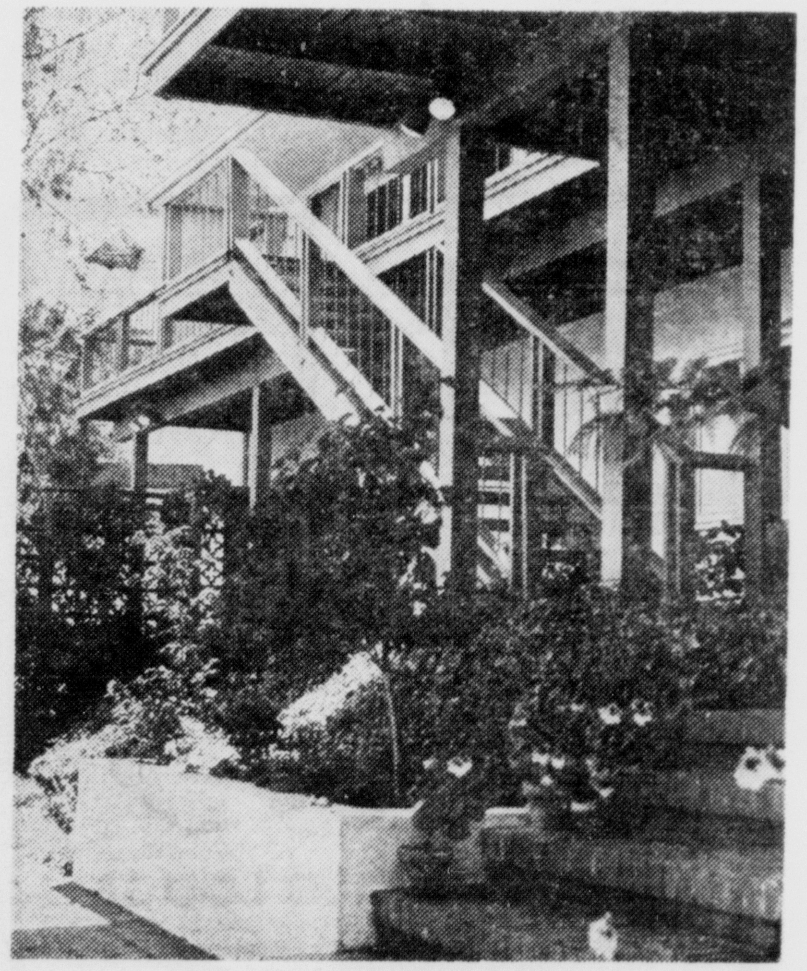
THE REAR GARDEN of the D. P. Boothes was designed by landscape architect Sidney M. Lewin for both shade and sun enjoyment. There is an elegance, yet a comfortable gracious feeling, to the design and its execution.



BRICK STEPS LEAD down to the Boothe entry garden from the front garden and a large, circular parking area above.



THE REAR GARDEN of the Boothe home is gay with flowers in bloom, and a decorative screen adds a lacy touch.



THE DECK OF the D. P. Boothe Jr. home in Sausalito overlooks the attractive rear garden and offers a water view.

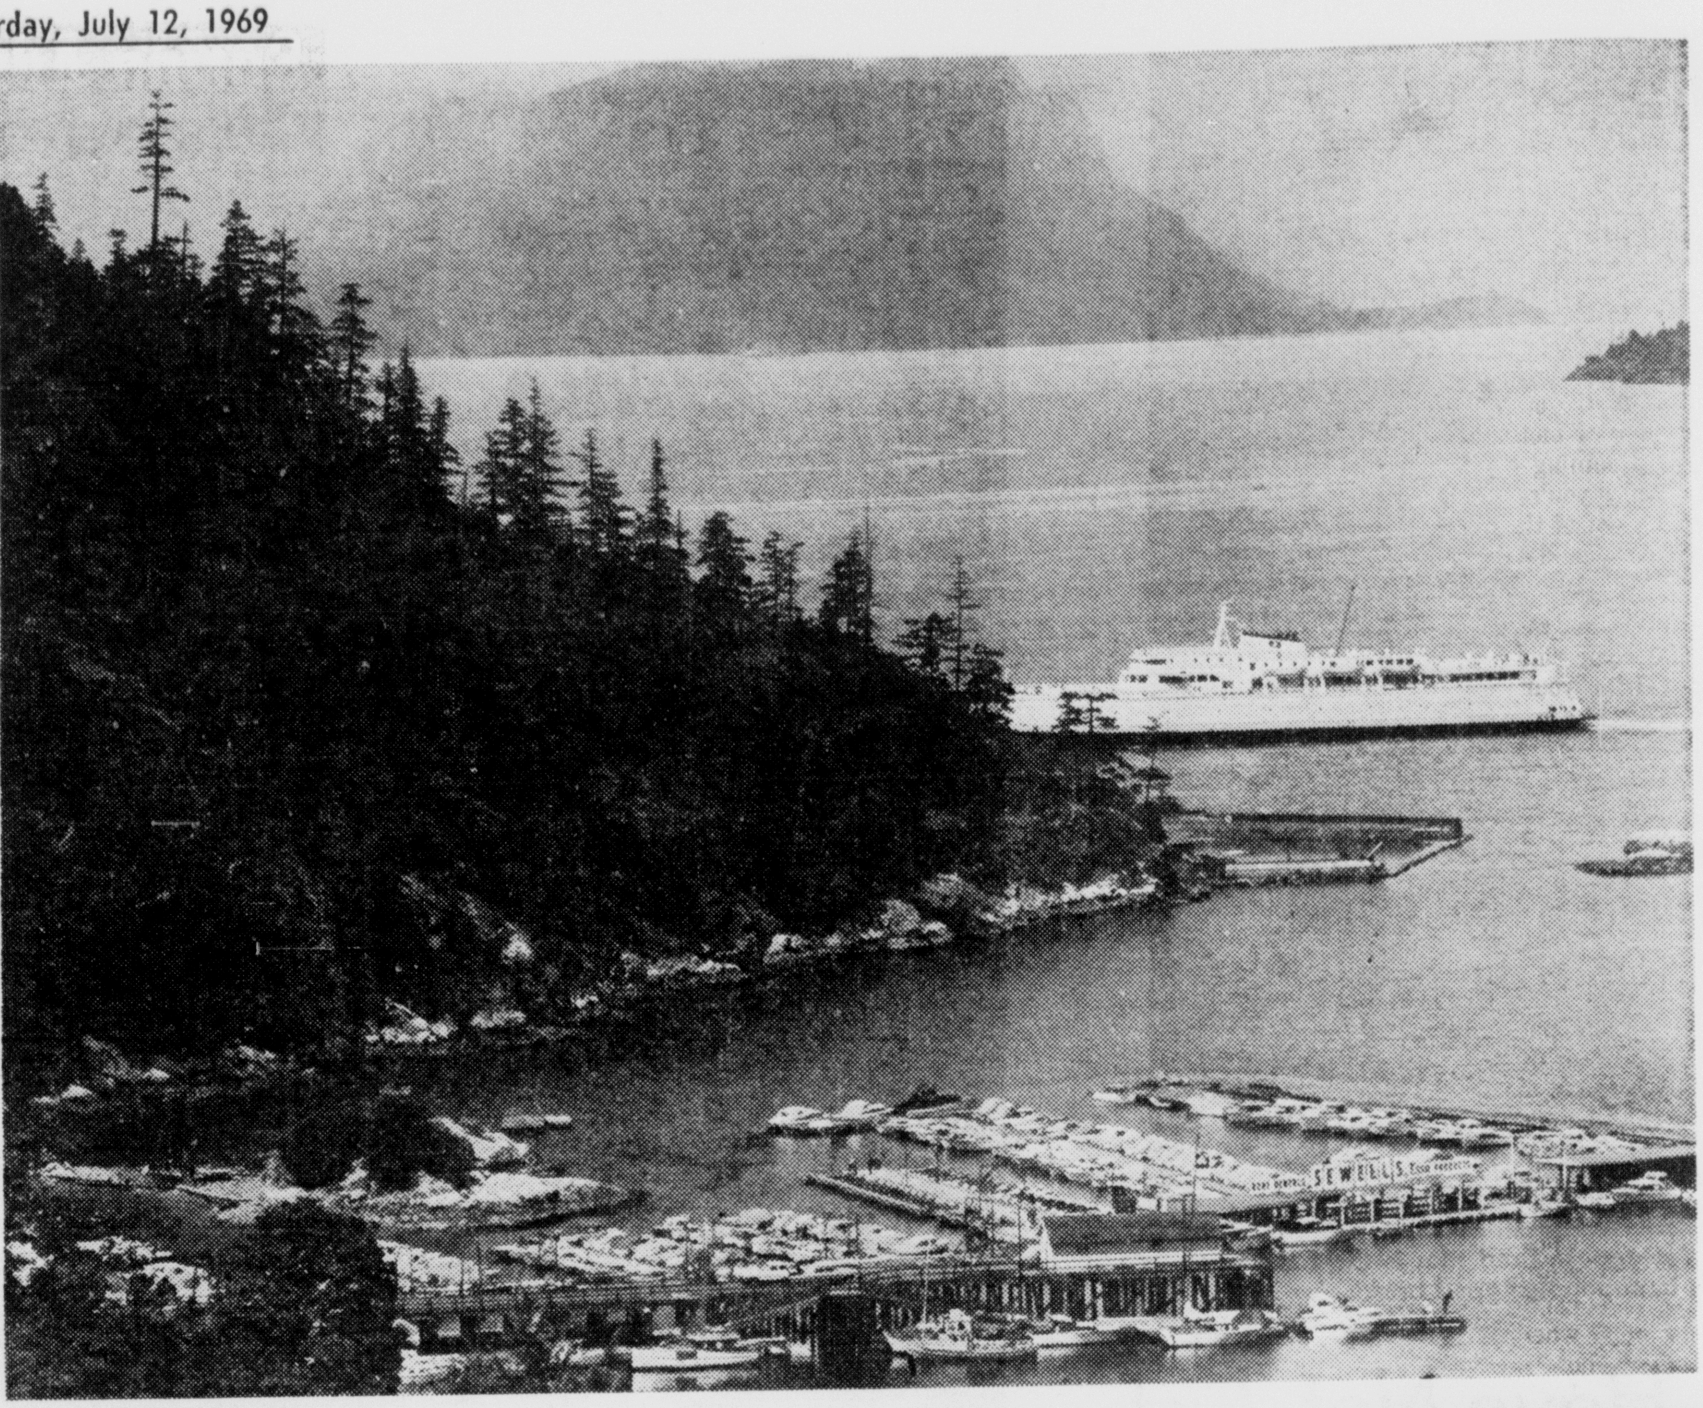
Takes You Back To The Pioneers



A FERRY PULLS into Horseshoe Bay near Vancouver, B.C., departure point for many of the popular cruises up the Inside Passage along the Canadian coast into the Alaskan Panhandle. Passengers sail past fjords, forests and fishing villages, moving through waters as still as glass and along land untouched since pioneer days.

Marinites with a yearning for the tall, silent country of the pioneers can still find it in the Far West by heading north toward Canada's Pacific coastline and the Alaskan Panhandle.

They'll find there a region essentially unchanged since the days of the Indians, the explorers and the first sourdoughs.

And one of the best ways to see this lovely area is to cruise the "Inside Passage," past coastal fjords where mountains plunge into glassy still waters, and where just occasionally you spot a wisp of smoke rising from a log cabin and even less frequently an isolated fishing village or lumber camp.

Several shipping companies offer the trip, with some of the ocean liners departing from San Francisco, and others from Seattle. Most of the Canadian cruise ships sail from Vancouver, B.C.

BOTH THE Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Steamship companies operate pleasure cruise ships between Vancouver and Skagway. These are luxury vessels that offer cocktail lounges, deluxe suites, game rooms, nightly dancing, and, in the case of the Princess Patricia, a heated swimming pool.

Costs vary according to accommodations and the season. But on the Prince George, for instance, round trip fares begin at $188.

Although there are many channels through the Inside Passage, most ships follow approximately the same route as they steam northward to the land of the midnight sun. By the time passengers reach the "Trail of '98" into the Yukon, there is no darkness at all in summer — only a warm twilight.

WINDS, WARMED by the Japanese current, give the Pacific Northwest a particularly favorable climate from mid-April to October. Days are warm and nights refreshingly cool.

However, it is advisable to take a warm wrap or jacket for evenings.

Heading north from Vancouver, spectacular peaks rise as a backdrop against evergreen islands indented with coves and fjords. Often there are fleets of boats fishing for British Columbia salmon.

LEAVING THE protecting bulwark of Vancouver Island behind, the ship moves on north, weaving through the galaxy of smaller islands past lone lighthouses and fishing towns until it reaches its first port of call, Prince Rupert. Located on Kaien Island, overlooking a magnificent harbor, Prince Rupert is a thriving town — an important fishing center and supply port for the Far North.

Game fish are abundant in the rivers near the town. The world's record steelhead trout (36 pounds) was caught near there. The Skeena River, nearby, yielded the record tyee salmon (92 pounds).

Curio and souvenir shops carry a varied assortment of Indian work. Indian totem poles tower from street corners and parks.

SHORT TOURS of the city are available while cruise ships are in port.

From Prince Rupert it's just 50 miles to Alaskan waters, and such romantic names as Ketchikan, noted for its totem poles; Wrangell, take-off point for a four-day Stikine River steamer trip to the old mining town of Telegraph Creek, B.C.; Juneau, once a wild and woolly gold rush town, and Skagway, starting point of the famous "Trail of '98" across the Chilkoot Pass to the fabulous Klondike gold fields.

Today the White Pass and Yukon Railway follows the trail through spectacular mountain scenery to Lake Bennett, where the adventurers built boats to sail 500 miles down the Yukon River to Dawson City. The train leaves Skagway in the morning, returning the same afternoon, so passengers have ample time to sightsee and shop before boarding their ship once more.

ON THE RETURN trip, some ships dock at the small Indian village of Alert Bay on Cormorant Island. In the Nimpkish Community Lodge there, Kwagutl Indians perform their colorful native dances.

More than 500 rest areas have been constructed since 1965 along U. S. highways and plans call for about 600 additional areas, says the National Automobile Club. Texas has the most rest areas in the nation — 984.

Travel Tips For Gals

Some Things You Should Know Before You Head For Overseas

Now that you've had your passport picture taken, and you're dreaming of all the faraway places you're about to visit, here's a list of tips all good girl travelers should know:

1. Ask your hairdresser to prepare a plastic bottle of your special color rinse, so you'll be happy with your hair on your trip. Better beauty salons around the world carry famous-name rinses, but they don't always mix them the way you like.

2. Don't laugh — but if you have a capped tooth (doesn't almost everyone?), take along a spare. How would you like to break one of the "jackets" in some remote part of the world and have to delay your trip while you have a new one made (even if you could be sure of the dentist)? Also, take duplicate glasses, if you wear prescription lenses.

3. Ladies who are afraid of getting lost in a foreign city find it useful to carry a matchbook of the hotel where they're staying. Just show it to your cab-driver, or a friendly native, and he'll tell you how to find your way back.

4. Learn the basics of money exchange of the countries you visit. But don't drive yourself mad over every last penny.

5. When you have more than one coat to carry over your arm, put the lighter one inside the other, sleeves first, for easy carrying.

6. If you're traveling by ship, there will be costume parties on board. Be a smart girl and bring the ingredients from home.

7. Don't buy a lot of new clothes for your trip. Your old ones will be new to your fellow travelers.

8. Don't buy giant, economy-size containers of such articles as hairspray. They're bulky, take up valuable space and cosmetic cases often won't close over them. Unless you're off to the furthest reaches of the Sahara desert, you can buy popular brands of American necessities when you need them.

9. Don't overlook that admonition to wear comfortable shoes, but also don't go overboard on it. If you start early enough, you can find shoes that are attractive as well as comfortable.

(And don't take along a lot of handbags. You can go all over the world with one daytime bag if it's black alligator or calf—but not patent.)

10. Take along a transistor radio. Turn it on the minute you're in your hotel room. You'll get the feeling of the local scene at once, even if you can't understand a word of the news.

And don't forget to take along your best smile and happy spirit. Make friends for your country while you're at it!

A Defense Of Student Rebels From An Ivory Tower Thinker

STUDENTS WITHOUT TEACHERS by Harold Taylor; McGraw-Hill, 321 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College, says in the introduction that he intended writing "Students Without Teachers" 10 years ago, "but circumstances intervened."

His theme in this volume is that college and university students are rightfully in rebellion because they have not been allowed a voice in deciding what should be taught and how the colleges should be run. Further, he contends, in the 1960s "the students became the chosen instruments of social and educational change because the society had arranged itself to make this possible, and by its own default, necessary."

Violence on campus becomes, in philosopher Taylor's view, a predictable and unavoidable component of a revolt he claims to have foreseen 10 years ago. The students are right, he holds; schools and society are patterned to obsolete and decadent forms and purposes; the schools, to do their part, must "return to progressivism" and restructure themselves to become what the students want.

All this is bound to be welcomed by besieged college administrators as well as by those faculty members who would rather agitate than teach. Taylor has given them a 321-page philosophical justification for everything that has happened at their schools — and a perfect alibi. As for the student minorities that have created the havoc, he regards them not as minorities at all but as the outspoken spokesmen for their whole generation.

The view that turning college campuses into a sort of combination of Hyde Park and the Cuban revolution is wrecking the educational system is blind and simplistic, as seen by Taylor. That his own view may be blind and simplistic does not, of course, occur to him.

Taylor draws heavily on his 14 years of experience as president of Sarah Lawrence College for his interpretation of what has happened and is happening on public campuses across the nation. He never senses the incongruity of equating the carefully selected "upper strata" girls of that exclusive school with the mobs at Berkeley, San Francisco State or Columbia.

To the pure, all things are pure; and to Taylor, this applies to all the "now generation." He describes the beginnings of Students for a Democratic Society in glowing terms of praise — and, in his optimistic (and simplistic) view, sees the SDS today as having the same motivation and ideals he professes to have found in some of its early leaders whom he "recognized (as) the educational allies of Sarah Lawrence students who already held the rights and responsibilities in educational policy and political action for which the students on other campuses were beginning to struggle."

Harold Taylor is the very beau ideal of college administrators. His educational qualifications are impeccable, including a Ph.D. from the University of London — which still in the late 20th Century carries prestige beyond that of any merely American institution. He more than looks the part — slender, wavy-haired, clear-eyed and clean-jawed (the girls at Sarah Lawrence must have swooned over him).

He is also the very personification of the Ivory Tower, of the academic view of the world, of those who propose to remake society while not really a part of it, and to understand what they have never known.

HARRY MARK PETRAKIS
Some so-so short stories

Much-Honored Writer Disappoints This Time

THE WAVES OF NIGHT by Harry Mark Petrakis; McKay, 230 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Twice Harry Mark Petrakis has been nominated for the National Book Awards fiction prize, for his novel, "A Dream of Kings," and for his first collection of short stories.

Coming from an author who has been so honored, this group of so-so short stories is a disappointment.

Son of a Greek Orthodox minister, Petrakis grew up in and around Chicago, and evidently had a photographic eye for the Old Country customs and tastes still strong in these first and second generation Americans. The artless Grecian flavor that permeates most of his stories is easily the best thing about them.

His style is simple and at times lyrical; actually he is presenting something very like fables, or pastorals, of the Chicago tenements, and this calls for a delicate hand indeed. Too often Petrakis' characters tend toward the syrupy, and the course of their conflicts is predictably, even sentimentally, set.

The best of the stories are the title novella, which tells of the comfortable Greek Orthodox priest who begins to question the meaning of it all, and "The Bastard of Thanos," an unrepentant death-bed sinner who baffles another priest.

A Cliche-Loaded Novel By A Best-Selling German Author

LOVE IS JUST A WORD by Johannes Mario Simmel; McGraw-Hill, 474 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Margaret Terrien.

This novel, written by a 45-year-old German (and translated into English by Rosemarie Mays), is a compendium of plot and character cliches, but it moves right along in skillful, professional fashion.

The cliches are some of the most reliable in the business. Sensitive Young Man (21), who has a corrupt, industrialist, former Nazi father and a neurasthenic mother, pursues doomed love affair with Beautiful Older Woman (33) married to a rich, cultivated, Older Man (51), who is really a satanic stinker. The love is reciprocal and passionate, but of course she has a past and is cynical about men, because during the debacle of postwar Germany she had to Sell Her Beautiful Body for Food.

Well, you know.

Unfortunately for the suspense factor, you also know that the poor kid is going to get clobbered in the end, because in the very first chapter you see him hanging by the neck very dead in the ruined watchtower that was the lovers' first trysting place. The story unfolds in flashback.

Johannes Mario Simmel, the dustjacket tells us, "is one of Germany's best-known writers, with a long history of best-sellers." He is also a filmscript writer and magazine editor.

In this book the young hero's school-sponsored visit to the Dachau crematorium, now a memorial, upsets him sufficiently to delay the first physical mating with his love. The murder of six million Jews is referred to several times and demonstrates how guilty he feels for his father's sins.

Well, the rape of the American Indian by this republic has provided plot, theme, and incident for uncounted thousands of writers, whose products have ranged from western pulp fiction to Nobel Prize winners.

A reviewer has the privilege of stating, as an opinion: This book will hold little interest for the discriminating, humane reader.

The Drama And Danger Of The Sport Of Auto Racing

PARNELLI: A STORY OF AUTO RACING by Bill Libby; E. P. Dutton, 307 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Libby has come up with a triple-header, a story of a race driver, a story of an exciting event, the Indianapolis 500, and the story of the sport of auto racing.

He captures the spirit of Parnelli Jones, winner and hard-luck loser, willing to risk life and limb in a sport that is as dangerous as war.

The stakes are high and a chart of Jones' earnings show that a man can walk off the track a comparatively wealthy man, if he can walk off.

Jones, who raced them all, jalopies on dirt tracks, midgets, sprinters, stock cars and championship cars, summed it up when he said, "If you're a racing driver, you race."

While concentrating on Jones' life, Libby works in vivid descriptions of the 500 that are almost as effective as viewing the race and a lot more informative, and explains the sport itself to the uninitiated.

In a sport where death comes quick and horrifying, drama is high. After the death of a fellow driver, Jones observed: "It's sort of like being at the front in wartime, I think. Your buddies get it. It hurts. But you go on."

The ever-increasing speed of the cars, the battle of the pistons versus the turbines, the fortunes that are put into cars only to be wiped away in a grinding crash against the wall, a driver's lifetime of work, skill and ambition thwarted by a mechanical failure . . . all these are in Libby's engrossing account.

An Adventure Yarn Built Around A Kidnaping Plot

BANDERSNATCH by Desmond Lowden; Hold, Rinehart and Winston, 264 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Andrew W. M. Campbell.

One of the dreams of modern man is to pull off the perfect crime and live happily ever after. Desmond Lowden in his first novel, "Bandersnatch," builds this dream into an almost reality.

Cmdr. Alec Sheldon, D.S.O., D.S.C., R.N. retired, World War II torpedo boat captain and hero-down-on-his-luck, is drawn by circumstances (he is broke and about to be thrown out of Palma de Mallorca for his many liberties with the credit system) into a plot to kidnap the Onassis-like millionaire shipping magnate, who is responsible for the Spanish authorities taking action against him. Sheldon and his World War II crew plan to capture Alexis Tzannos and his equally wealthy guests and hoid them for a ransom of 4.8 million dollars, which of course they plan to distribute to the poor. The poor are defined as Sheldon and his wartime cronies, who felt that democracy had been less than generous to them, but that a cut of the booty would restore their faith in society.

Sheldon sets off on his now refitted tropedo boat Bandersnatch.

The millionaires, their wives, girl friends, and children are all aboard the world's most luxurious yacht Pindar, bent upon their own individual lives of greed, lust and fear. As individuals, however, each has his own inner strength. The same cannot be said for Sheldon's crew; they have the avarice, etc.; but without the firm naval discipline of Commander Sheldon, they fall apart.

A Club Without Dues Or Don'ts, But A Waiting List Of Members

By DON KEOWN

SITTIN' STARIN' 'N' ROCKIN' by Thomas E. Saxe Jr.; Hawthorn, 166 pages, $3.95.

Americans are being bombarded with warnings that they are not getting sufficient vigorous exercise to maintain good health.

Much less is being said about another grave lack in our way of living at the opposite end of the activity spectrum — relaxation. That, too, is having its seriously adverse effects, though more often of a mental than a physical nature.

The truth is that although we are too seldom truly active physically, we are also too infrequently really at rest physically and mentally. Instead we are somewhere in limbo between these two conditions, enduring the ravages that result from an excessive burning of nervous energies without reaping the benefits that come from utilizing our muscles energetically.

Books, television programs, lectures, the jogging fad and obituary columns all nudge us in the direction of the regular exercise the body demands. But what is to prod us into also giving our bodies and minds the rest they crave at times?

Thomas E. Saxe Jr., a New England business man, believes he has the answer in the Sittin' Starin' 'n' Rockin' Club he started 20 years ago.

Its objectives: "To advance the art and science of sittin', to develop new techniques of starin', to promote methods of rock in'."

It is a society without committees, dues or don'ts. Indeed, it is a society without meetings. But it is also a society with a growing membership, in fact a waiting list, that includes, in addition to thousands of the common people, such celebrities as Bing Crosby Harry S. Truman, Richard Cardinal Cushing, Toots Shor and Dr. Janet Travell, the physician who gave the rocking chair its biggest boost when she recommended it to President John F. Kennedy for his ailing back. All are united in the belief that the rocker must be rescued from the attic, where interior decorators have relegated it, and restored to its place of honor in the home.

"Sittin' Starin' 'n' Rockin' " is a book in which the founder-president sets forth the aims and claims of his society, complete with testimonials, and offers some advice from his experience as to techniques and types in rocking. It is all done with tongue in cheek. Yet along with the humor there is a sincere conviction on Saxe's part that the rocking chair can make a therapeutic contribution to our digestion, circulation, posture, and, most important, our good spirits and our peace of mind.

"I've never seen anyone get angry in a rocking chair," he quotes one member. "It would be out of character."

"Of course," admits another, "rockin' is just like worrying — it gets you nowhere fast. But as a relaxing agent, I've found it has no equal." (We can think of but one serious challenger — a bathtub filled with warm water.)

Even the squeaks are defended. "A squeakless rocker is like a man without a sense of humor," claims a Floridan.

A Connecticut newspaper in editorializing favorably upon the rocking chair society pointed out that an esteemed British medical publication had given rocking its enthusiastic endorsement:

"The therapeutic value of the rocking chair has probably increased with the softening effect of generations of easy living. Illness of the aged . . . frequently center about circulation problems and stiff joints. And the old rocking chair aids both."

Saxe has included in his book pictures of himself in his portable chair that accompanies him in his travels, rocking in such places as beneath the Eiffel Tower and before the Sphinx, as well as prominent members of the society at ease in their favorite rockers.

In truth, Saxe has to strain and stretch his material just a bit to make it cover a book. But generally, the contents are well suited to the kind of lighthearted, relaxed reading that is appropriate to the rocking chair movement.

Any program that causes us to pause periodically so that our cares can dissolve and permit us a better perspective of life cannot help but be salutory. The rocking chair is, as Saxe proclaims it, "the instrument and symbol of relaxation, serenity, friendship — a world-wide symbol of peace." But in taking it up, we should not abandon the jogging. A brisk scamper through the neighborhood will make us all the more appreciative of the comfort of the rocker, once we return to the sanctuary of the home.

IN EGYPT, with the sphinx staring down at him, Thomas E. Saxe Jr., president of the Sittin' Starin' 'n' Rockin' Club, sits in his portable aluminum rocking chair, and sits and stares and rocks.

JUST A few years ago, Raymond Hull was a $23 a week dishwasher. Now he is a successful, well-to-do writer, lecturer, teacher, broadcaster and musician, working out of Vancouver, B.C.

"How To Get What You Want" (Funk & Wagnalls, $4.95) oulines the self-betterment program he has worked out as the result of his own success.

His book begins as a rather rigid set of written exercises — he puts great stress on putting aspirations down on paper —, but trails off into one of those general pep talks, familiar to readers in the self-improvement, positive-thinking field.

Hull's book is not as materialistic as its title makes it sound, for along with the acquisition of material things he is even more interested in attaining the less tangible values in life. As in so many of these books, we get a touch of right-wing philosophy and rugged individualism theorizing. But Hull also offers some seemingly practical suggestions and procedures by which one might advance and enrich one's lot in life.

WRITER'S DIGEST has issued a new printing of "Writing and Selling Non-Fiction," the guide for freelancers by Hayes B. The book, informative and interesting, first appeared in 1967.

THE BEST known names in golf are those professionals who are winners on the tournament circuit. Their books sell well. But Joe Novak, director of golfing activities for Southern California's Bel-Air Country Club, makes the point that tournament winners are not necessarily the best teachers, nor even especially interested in that phase of the sport. Their books often are almost totally the work of ghost writers. Novak, however, is a full-time teacher, and one of the best. And in a slim, illustrated paperback, "The Novak System of Mastering Golf" (Doubleday, $1.95), he shares his personal approach to the fundamentals of the game, based upon a limited number of key moves.

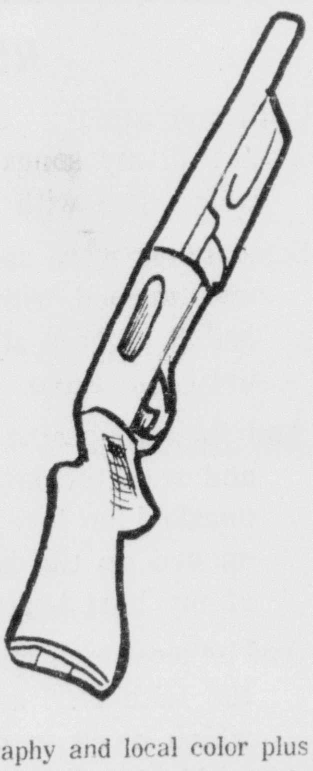
Sleuths & Suspense

THE CELL by David Case; Hill and Wang, 269 pages, $5. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The terror or horror tale is done but infrequently these days, and then rarely done well. Enthusiasts of the genre must generally rely upon the classicists of earlier eras for their supply.

It is doubly pleasing then to find in David Case a newcomer with the Poe-like touch.

He demonstrates this best in "The Hunter," one of three novelettes included in this book. It is a really splendid yarn, set on the English moors where some strange creature is committing killings most gruesome. Intrepid hunter John Wetherby stalks out to end the reign of terror in a "Hound of the Baskervilles" atmosphere, and the result is a first-rate chiller.

Of the other two stories, "The Dead End," set in the wilds of Tierra del Fuego, an island in the Straits of Magellan off South America's southernmost point, is the best, offering some fine geography and local color plus an eccentric and perhaps mad scientist. "The Cell," diary of a werewolf, has been done before, and even the "surprise" twist at the ending seems familiar.

RELEASE

Until you came . . .
not all my songs
were filled with peace and joy.

Some songs were sad
and touched with deep despair
and loneliness at times too hard to bear
until you came.

And then you came . . .
and with the key of
unasked-for love
opened up the heavy door
of my hurt heart,

And let loose on bright wings of flight
the faith . . . and hope . . . and joy
which dwelt in darkest night
within my heart . . .

Until you came.

On The Stereo Scene—

From Baroque To Shearing To Erik Satie

"SOUTH AMERICAN GUITAR" — Ramon Ybarra — Westminster WST-17152:

Too many guitar recitals on LPs cover the same standard selections, but this new release is a welcome exception. That pieces by Villa-Lobos and Ponce are included is expected, but those looking for something different will appreciate the sad bossa nova by Pernambuco, the swinging Cuban habanera by de Fuentes, and rhythmic waltzes by Lauro. Five other composers are also represented in Ybarra's distinctive album.

"THE BAROQUE SONATA"—RAMEAU: Pieces de Clavecin en Concert Nos. 1 and 3; MICHEL BLAVET; Sonatas for Flute and Harpsichord Nos. 1 and 4—The Tipton Trio—Westminster WST-17157:

The works by French Baroque composer Rameau for the ensemble of flute, cello and harpsichord are about the most delightful and tuneful things from his pen. Blavet is almost unknown; his two pieces are named for two girls and are light and frothy chamber music. This is the recording debut of the Tipton Trio, a fine new American chamber threesome.

"ORCHESTRAL MUSIC OF ERIK SATIE" — French National Radio and TV Orchestra/Manuel Rosenthal — Everest 3234:

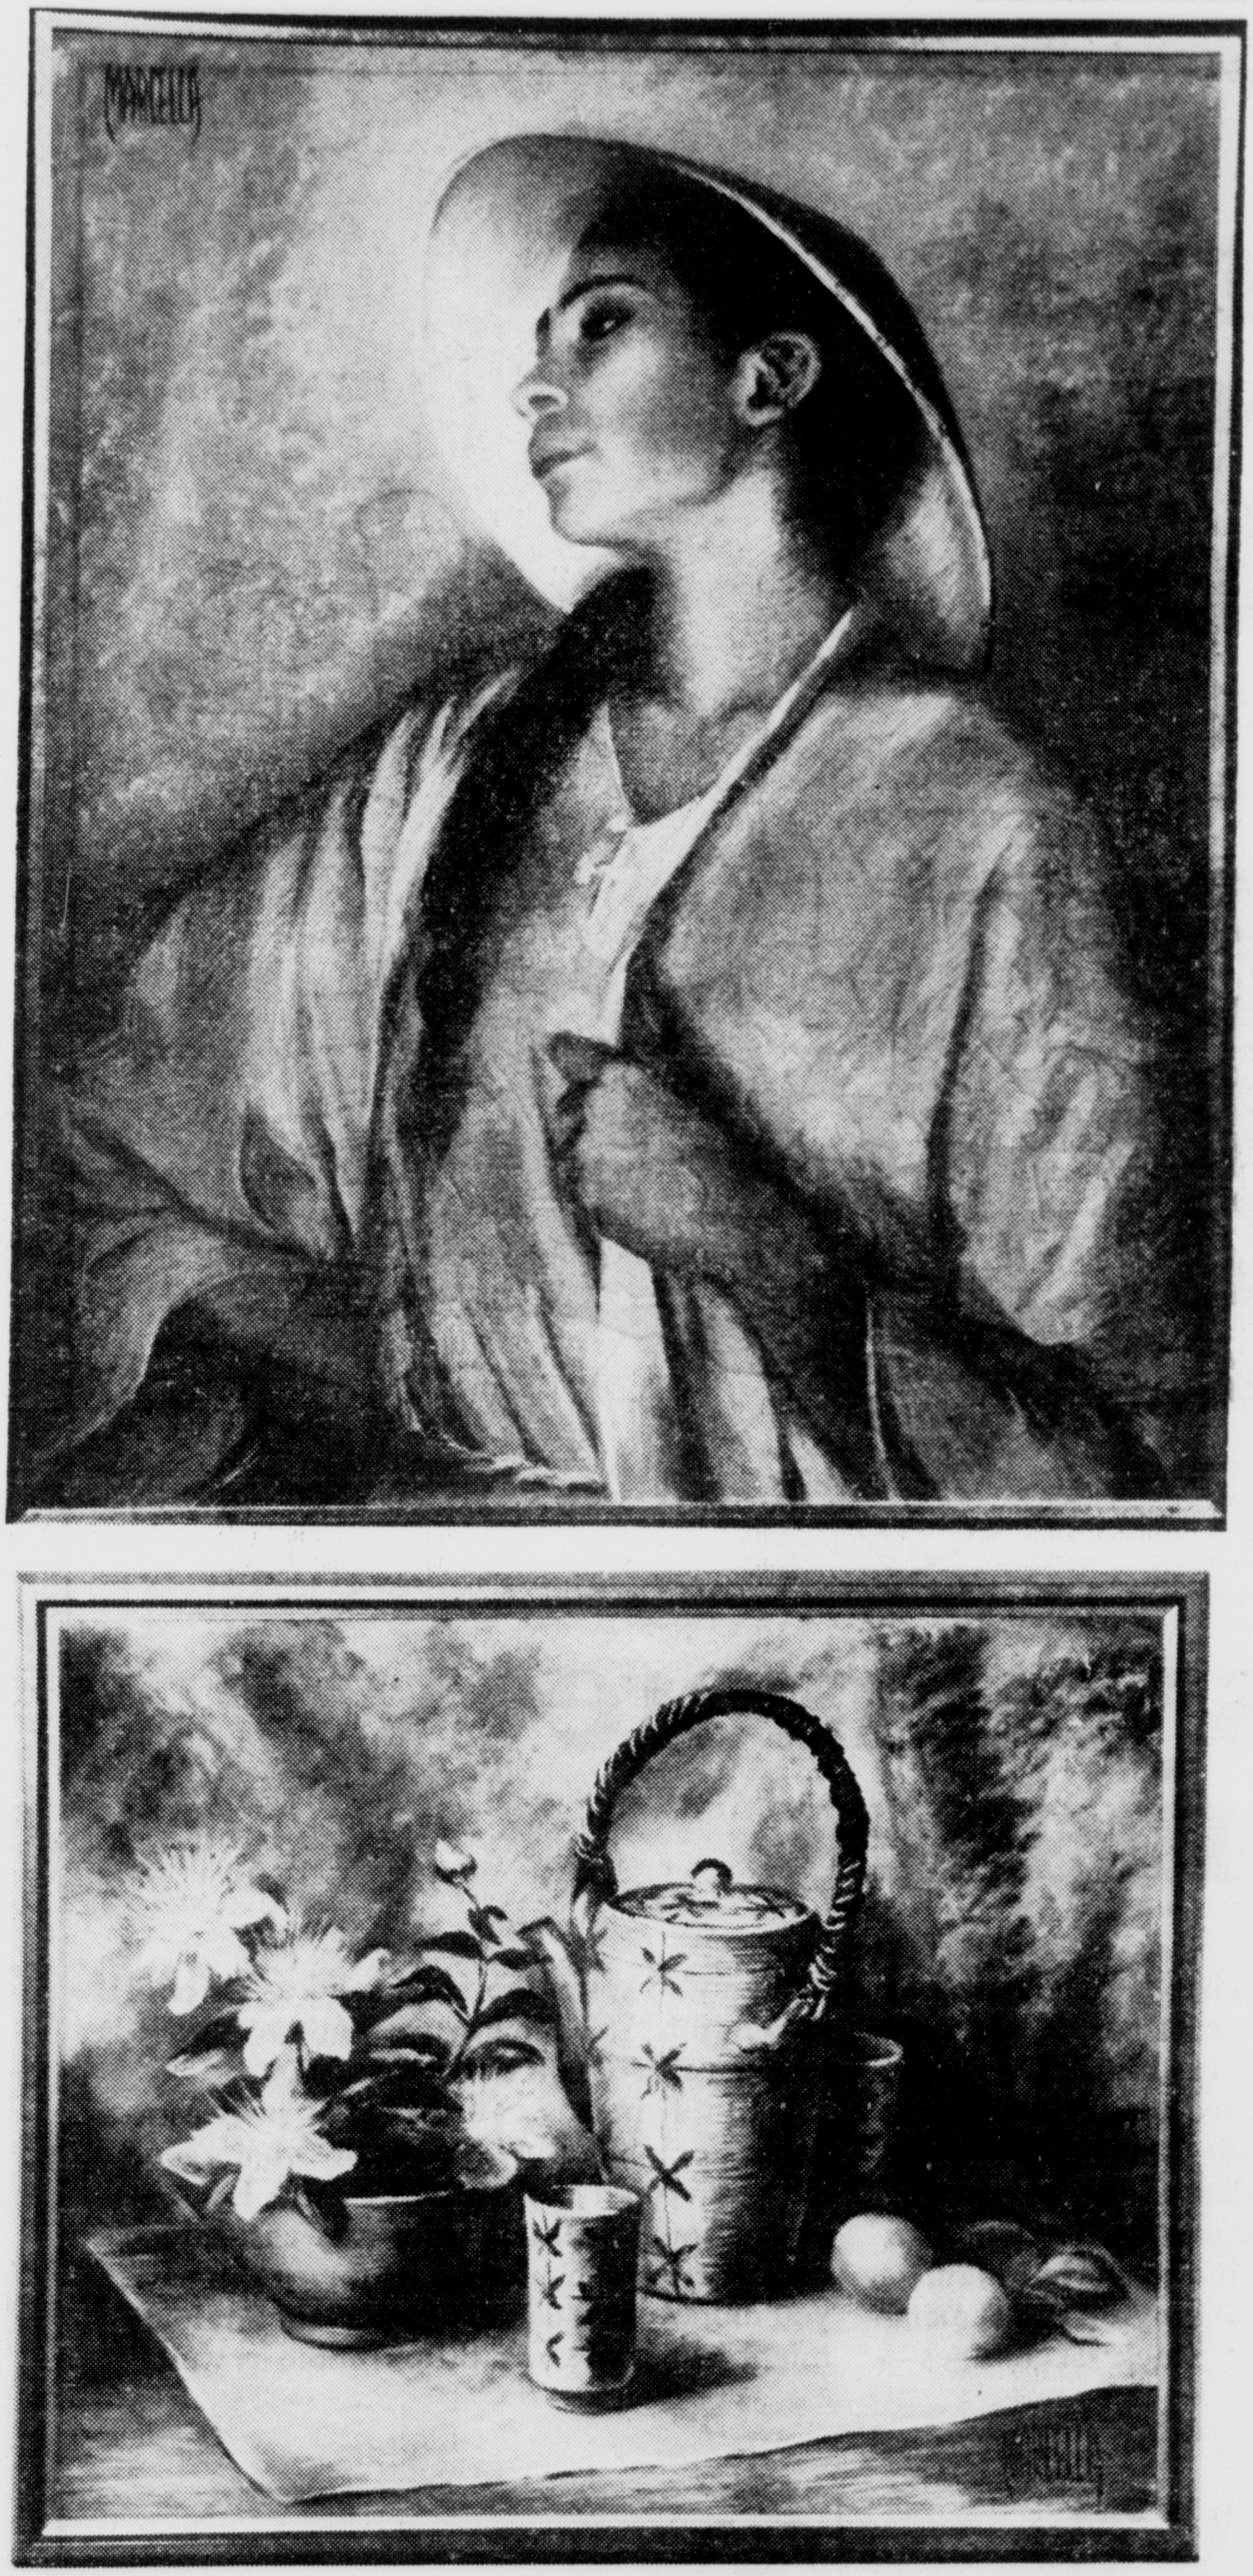
Everybody is jumping on the Erik Satie bandwagon. I'm sure the dapper, nutty French composer would have plenty of witty reactions to his sudden fame were he around today. "Parade" is the best thing here — a rousing performance of the ballet which almost overdoes the sound effects. The short "Trois Petite Pieces Montees" are an LP first; arrangements for orchestra of his piano music, as is "En Habit de Cheval." An excerpt from the rather un-Satie choral work "Socrates" is also included. Good stereophonics.

"THE VIRTUOSO CLASSICAL MANDOLIN" — Edith Bauer-Sleis, mandolin/Vienna Chamber Ensemble/Kurt Equiluz, tenor — Everest 3244:

The biggest work in this collection is Hans Gal's "Divertimento for Mandolin and Piano," although putting that on the front cover wouldn't cause an LP to sell like hotcakes. However, it proves to be a semi-modern chamber work of great charm. A "Duo for Mandolin and Guitar" by somebody named Sprongl is also unique and very enjoyable to hear. Two Mozart works featuring tenor soloist are also on the album. The mandolin is spotlighted here as a very expressive and curiously relaxing musical sound that will be new to many ears.

"ENCOUNTER: The Swingle Singers perform with The Modern Jazz Quartet" — Philips PHS 600-225:

What a great idea! Two of the top groups who have worked that strange territory between outright "pop" and up-tight classical, brought together in an absolutely delightful collaboration. The music is either by John Lewis, leader-pianist of the MJQ, or by old J. S. Bach. Swinging Swingle counterpoint is heard in Lewis' "Little David's Fugue," and his fugal penchant continues in "Three Windows," a beautiful theme from the French flick "One Never Knows." There was some annoying surface noise on my copy.



PASTEL PAINTINGS including the two pictures above, "Noami" at top, "Tea For Two" at bottom, are being shown by Marcella Winer of Mill Valley at the Torrance Galleries, San Anselmo, through Aug. 2. She studied as a young girl at the California School of Fine Arts and has since had instruction from Charles Krantz, Carlo Talibue and Thomas Leighton. Her pastels are representative of an art medium currently enjoying a revival of interest. The Torrance Galleries will also be showing oil paintings of landscapes and city scenes by Jean Victor during the same period.

HI-FI STEREO

By C. J. Catania

What happened to the separate Tuner, Preamplifier, and Power Amplifier? In the early days of home Hi-Fi music systems, the components were quite bulky. The parts were large, and the many tubes produced a great deal of heat. The Tuner, preamplifier, and power amplifier were made on three separate chassis to reduce the overall size and weight, and to space the parts in each unit so that the heat would not damage them. As the state of the art progresses, the tubes and individual parts that made up each component were reduced in size so tuners began to be combined with preamplifiers, and in some cases preamplifiers were combined with power amplifiers. These combinations reduced the music system to two chassis instead of three. With more progress, all three components were combined into one unit sometimes called a receiver. The all-in-one receiver had so many tubes on one chassis that the heat factor was not always the most desirable.

Along came transistors. They were very tiny, about the size of an eraser on a pencil. They produced very little heat. This meant that the tuner, preamplifier and power amplifier sections could be built more compactly and with very little heat problem. These smaller sections could be accommodated on one chassis without sacrifice in circuitry or flexibility.

Almost all stereo Hi-Fi components available on the present market are transistorized. A very large percentage of these components are all-in-one receiver types. Because of miniaturization and integrated circuits (small units the size of one transistor that contain 5 or 6 transistors and associated circuitry) the modern compact receiver contains more flexibility, sophisticated circuitry, tuning indicators and automatic stereo switching devices, and in some cases more output power than the older three chassis tube counterparts. All of this in smaller sizes and without the serious heat problems.

If your home music system is made up of the two or three chassis tube types, it may be time to trade the system in for one of the new transistorized components. The new solid state receivers are very sensitive, have low distortion, have clean crisp sound, and are very neat in appearance. FM stereo stations will have more left and right separation. Visit us soon for a demonstration.

The Three Schemes In Color Use

Color coordination remains a mystery for some people, perhaps because it means one thing to one person and something else to another.

For instance, one woman says she can see no possible color coordination in using green and orange together — it flouts every principle of color harmony she learned in school.

THAT IS TRUE, but it is also true that tastes and styles change, and we now accept unusual and vibrant combinations of colors that were unthought-of 10 or 20 years ago.

Color coordination is simply the principle of settling on a color scheme and then coordinating all your furnishings, wallpapers, carpeting, flooring, paints, etc., with that scheme.

There are three basic schemes: the "neighboring colors" scheme, the "one color" scheme, and the "contrasting colors" scheme.

Now you may not like green and orange together, but if you consult that invaluable decorators' tool, the color wheel, you will find that green and orange lie on opposite sides. So they are an example of contrasting colors.

BY FAR THE most common color scheme is the neighboring plan. You may, for instance, use three neighboring colors on the wheel. Starting with lemon, chartreuse and lime are neighbors in one direction, while gold and burnt orange are neighbors in the opposite direction.

You then would not use lime, gold and burnt orange together because they neither contrast nor are they neighbors.

A one-color scheme is also effective. You settle on one color and then employ tints and shades of that color throughout. A tint of a color is white added to it, and a shade of a color has black, added to it.

The one-color scheme is serene even if bright colors are used. A neighboring color scheme is restful if the colors are on the cool (blue, green) side, quite lively if on the red-orange end. A contrasting scheme is vibrant.

Summer Care Of Roses

So your rose bushes bloomed this spring as never before?

There was a good reason for all that lush flowering — the heavy rains that soaked our soil in the winter and early spring.

And from that all rosarians of Marin County should learn a lesson — the importance of watering.

WATER IS THE most essential requirement for a happy rose garden, particularly during the summer months when the sun beams warmly and nature provides a minimum of moisture.

While roses resent wet feet, they are utterly dependent upon sufficient water to permit them to take up food from the soil and to continue to put forth the new growth that will carry the new blooms. Regular watering should be the policy, and it should be thorough enough to penetrate to the deepest roots.

Feeding is another summertime blessing the grower can accord his roses. Light monthly feedings of about a handful of special rose food available at nurseries and stores get better results than heavier, less regular or less frequent feedings.

SPRAYING MUST also be included on the rosarian's summer care calendar.

In Marin County, the seemingly ever-present aphis are the principal targets for spraying. Almost from nowhere, they appear to feed upon the new growth and to reduce its quality.

Mildew and rust are other trouble-makers in this county.

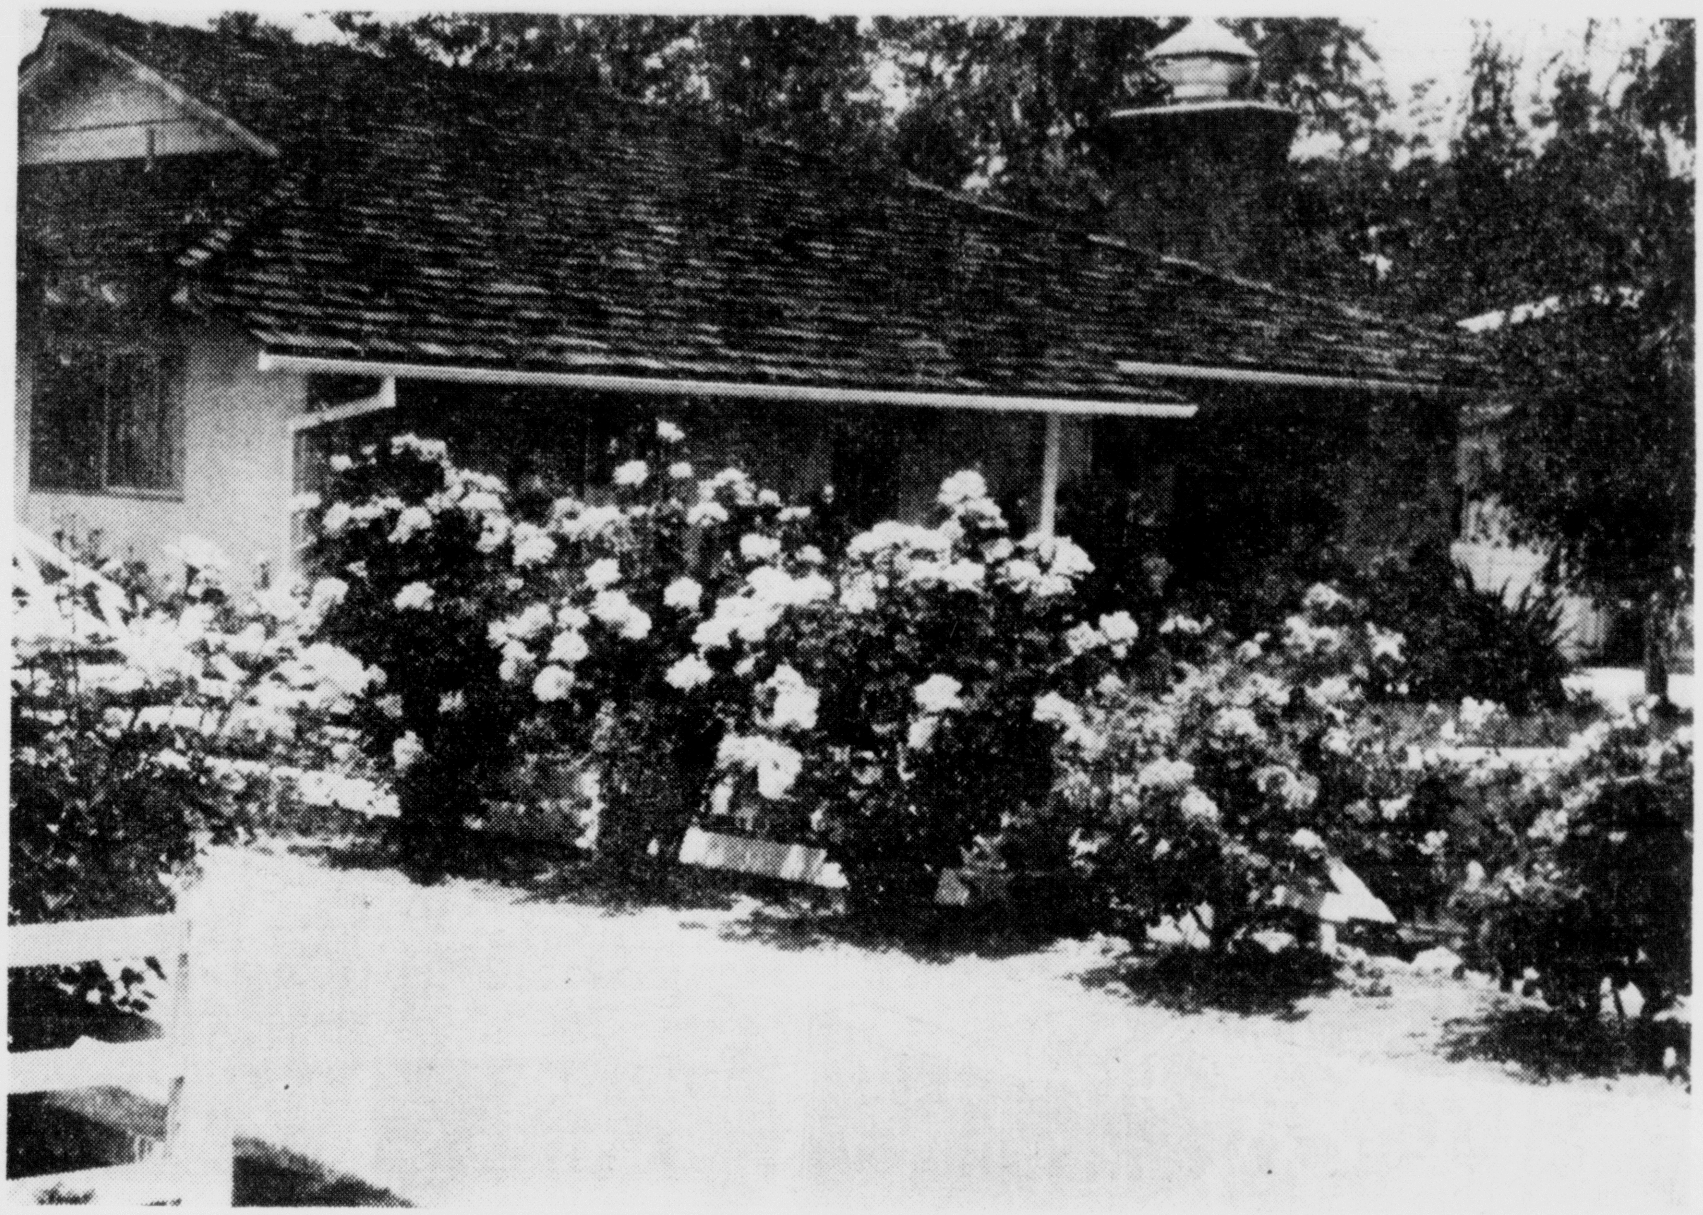
You can obtain a chemical spray that combines an insecticide with a fungicide. In using it, be sure to cover the bush thoroughly, hitting both the top and under sides of the foliage.

A REGULAR spray program started early before real trouble develops is the preferred policy.

Researchers have developed systematic-type insecticides, which, when sprayed on the rose bush, are absorbed into its sap stream and thus carried to all parts of the plants. Sucking insects such as the aphis then meet their doom when they partake of the foliage.

These "systematics" have also been incorporated into granular rose foods. A combination insecticide-fertilizer can be applied at the base of the rose bush which then absorbs them both. You promote color and control pests at the same time.

If you have special or persistent problems with your roses, your nurseryman is a good person to consult. He should be able to diagnose the trouble and to recommend the proper treatment.



TO PROLONG the bloom of your roses into the early winter, follow a three-step care program in the summer: Water deeply, thoroughly and regularly; feed lightly once a month, and carry out a spray program that will protect your shrubs against the pests that would otherwise sap their strength. A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Check the bedding plant section at your nursery. You'll find such eye-pleasers as blue ageratum, purplish lobelia and alyssum, all of which blend beautifully with zinnias, petunias and white or lavender periwinkles.

✓ And while at the nursery, keep your eyes open for summer shrubs in bloom. You can choose oleanders, hydrangeas, lantanas, hibiscus, abelias and escallonias in the exact colors and shapes to fit your garden.

✓ Marguerites can be cut back — but not too sharply — to keep them in good form and to freshen them for new blooms.

✓ If crabgrass is a problem, apply one of the weed killers that works especially against this pest. These controls must be applied several times at regular intervals.

✓ Plant petunias in pots or tubs and let their color cascade over the sides, for a quick and striking effect on your outdoor living area.

Laugh-In Comic Likes The Ladies Both On And Off Of Television

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The principal difference between Dick Martin of "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" and the off-screen Martin is the comedian's I.Q.

Away from the cameras, Martin is bright and articulate. On the show he is a dum-dum with nothing but sex and parties on his mind.

The latter activities occupy a certain amount of his waking hours. A considerable amount. In contrast with the happily married, serious Dan Rowan, Martin is one of Hollywood's great swingers.

ONCE MARRIED and divorced, Martin — a former bartender — lives in a faultlessly appointed bachelor pad which clings to a crag in the Hollywood Hills above the Sunset Strip. He has an unobstructed view of the ocean and the bustling city below his living room.

One is led to suspect he keeps an eye on "ladies" from this aerie. "lady" to any female from age 18 to 80 who doesn't mind having a few drinks and going out on the town. His favorite ladies, however, are in their 20s, beautiful and single.

MARTIN FREQUENTLY takes them out to dinner — one at a time — and then to one of several discoteques to which he belongs: The Daisy, The Factory and The Candy Store.

Late in the evening he usually invites them up to his house for a game of pool or perhaps a starlight plunge in his swimming pool which overhangs the cliff. He has often said he'd rather have a nightcap with a lady at his pad because it is more comfortable and plush than the one-bedroom apartments with bullfighter posters in which many starlet ladies live.

Dick's living room is largely occupied by a professional-size pool table. And he is expert at the game.

THE FURNISHINGS are colorful, comfortable and new. There are objects d'art in nooks and crannies. Modern paintings clutter the walls.

He has a combination den and bar which is one of the most interesting rooms in the house. Dick has decorated it with great care, giving it a bachelor flavor with a few artistic nude paintings.

"You notice you have to stop by here and have a drink or two before you get to the kitchen," Martin says with the same wolfish intensity he displays on the NBC-TV series.

There is little domestic strain in Dick Martin. He likes his ladies to come up to the house and fix dinner for him while he relaxes with a drink. A cleaning lady takes care of the dust and dishes.

HE AND PARTNER Rowan see very little of one another except when they are playing clubs on the road. Then they find time for golf during the day. At night Rowan has a bite to eat before going to bed.

Not Martin. He's out looking for ladies. He likes them.
